Plates Belonging to the Reichsbank Also Taken by Soldiers, Who Stop Berlin-Cologne Express Train Is Tank Town, Ransacking It at Point of Bayonet.

BURGOMASTER OF BOCHUM DEPOSED

Berlin Government Said to Have Agreed at Conference With Industrial Leaders to Supply Paper Marks to Pay Miners.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Feb. 24.—A consignment of 12,000,000,000 marks fresh from the Reichsbank and plates belonging to the Reichsbank were seized by French soldiers today from the Berlin-Cologne express at the small tank station of Hengsley, near Hagen.

At the present value of the mark the marks seized amount to approximately $600,000.

The soldiers boarded the train just as it was coming into the station and ransacked every compartment at the point of bayonets.

A Reichstag deputy began wondering why the express had stopped so long and was about to look out of the window to make inquiries when a soldier outside said: "Stand where you are; close the window or we shoot."

Finally the soldiers uncovered the crisp new marks hidden away in a third-class compartment.

Reichsbank guards violently protested against the seizure.

The soldiers also took duplicate sets of copper plates for an issue of 20,000-mark notes. Both the money and the plates were on the way to the Reichsbank's Rhineland branches.

The cash seized amounts to only a small fraction of the bank's daily output in currency, yet the officials are highly incensed at the seizure, contending the money, as well as the plates, is private property, absolutely immune from confiscation. They believe, however, that the French will not be able to make practical use of the plates, since a special quality of paper is required to print the 20,000-mark notes.

Extra Precaution Taken to Guard Public Utilities in Ruhr.

By the Associated Press.

ESSEN, Feb. 24.—Extra precautions to guard public utilities throughout the Ruhr have been taken by the Franco-Belgian authorities because of an order issued by Gen. Wilhelm Groener, German Minister of Transportation, to the striking railroad workers to cut off gas and water and electric power wherever possible.

According to information in the hands of the French intelligence staff the strikers have been given a peremptory order to perpetrate acts of sabotage of this kind immediately at various points so as to hinder in every conceivable way the forces of occupation.

With the suppression today of the Essener Anzeiger by the authorities of occupation, Essen's last nonradical daily disappeared from the streets. The Anzeiger has been forbidden to appear for a fortnight. Only the Socialist and Communist papers now are being published.

Part of Seized Money Declared to Have Been Destined for British.

By the Associated Press.

COLOGNE, Feb. 24.—The manager of the local branch of the Reichsbank declares that part of the money seized by the French from the Berlin-Cologne express today was the usual weekly consignment for the use of the British army of occupation.

The Reichsbank has sent a strong protest against the seizure to the interallied Rhineland high commission.

175 CASES OF HAND GRENADES AND HIGH EXPLOSIVES SEIZED

200 Rifles and 20 Machine Guns. Are Also Found by the New York Police on Water Front.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Feb. 24.—The seizure of 75 cases of hand grenades and high explosives being unloaded from a truck into a basement in the Chelsea Pier district tonight led to the discovery of 100 more cases, which had been secreted in a river front lodging house.

A few minutes later city and Federal authorities uncovered in the same building 200 rifles, 20 machine guns and a large quantity of steel-jacketed machine gun ammunition in belts.

Four men, who were transferring the first explosives seized, were taken into custody and quizzed as to the source and destination of their cargo. They professed not to know by whom it was being shipped, or where.

While a cordon of special police was thrown about the truckload and the building where part of its contents had been stored, chiefs of the secret service, police authorities, fire department officials, heads of bomb squads and of the Bureau of Combustibles were summoned to break open and examine the strong boxes seized.

The seizure was made in the Chelsea Pier section of the North River, where the Cunard, White Star and French lines have their principal docks.

The explosives in huge packing cases were addressed to "S. C. S., New York," and to "Arthur Leibinger, 263 West Thirty-fourth street." All were labeled "Precaution, high explosives—handle with care."

PAINTING OF CHRIST WITH BRYAN CAUSES ARTIST'S ARREST

Figures Resembling Volstead and W. H. Anderson Also Appear in Picture.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Feb. 24.—Detectives tonight arrested Abraham Baylinson, secretary of the Society of Independent Artists, at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, for violation of the penal code in having permitted the display of an exhibit there of a painting by J. Francis Kaufman, "The Marriage at Cana of Galilee."

The picture was seized as evidence. It portrayed Christ, at the wedding feast of Miracles, with a figure said by critics to resemble Andrew J. Volstead clutching his shoulder and pointing to another figure, a likeness of William J. Bryan, who was pouring from the jugs the water Christ had just turned into wine.

Near by stood a figure in an "iron hat," viewed as that of William H. Anderson, State Superintendent of the Antisaloon League.

COMMUNITY FUND WORKERS TO VISIT RESIDENCES TODAY

First Report on Results of Canvassing to Be Made Tomorrow—Goal Higher Than Last Year.

$200,000 SAID TO BE PLEDGED ALREADY

Cost of Raising Fund Expected to Be Cut This Year to 3½ Per Cent of Total.

Solicitors of the small army of persons working to raise the proposed $1,081,684 Community Fund for 1923 will keep up their efforts to obtain pledges today. They will visit residences in many parts of the city, their enthusiasm fired by this first opportunity to make a concerted campaign for charity funds.

Their work began yesterday. The first report, to be made tomorrow noon at campaign headquarters in Hotel Statler, may serve as an early indication of public reaction to the elimination of countless duplicating "drives" by individual organizations. The Community Fund, which is incorporated, will make up deficits of 40 charitable organizations and institutions in St. Louis and St. Louis County.

The goal of the Community Fund is considerably higher than the combined sums solicited by the member organizations last year, when they obtained about $415,000 by campaigns and otherwise. The difference is that the $1,081,684 of the fund is expected to enable the units to do "100-per-cent" work this year, whereas operations of some of them had been curtailed last year for lack of money.

Economic Saving Stressed.

Officers of the Fund are stressing the economic saving in combining the work of solicitation into one annual campaign; heretofore, they estimate, about 15 per cent of money raised went to pay the cost of raising, while hereafter this is expected to be 3½ per cent or less.

It was reported unofficially last night that about $200,000 had been pledged already. This sum included six pledges, totaling $62,500, announced yesterday. While the end of the campaign has been set for March 5, efforts are being made to wind up the work earlier, if the goal is attained.

The solicitors' "army" numbers about 5000 persons, and is declared to be the largest group that ever worked in a financial campaign here. Leaders of the movement have cautioned them that it is not a "rich man's campaign;" that, while the wealthy may be expected to give liberally, they must not be depended upon to bear the whole brunt.

Solicitors have been placed in divisions to work among various groups of citizens. Efforts of the industrial, financial and utility employes' division were curtailed by the half-holiday yesterday.

Community Fund Sunday.

Today is Community Fund Sunday in many of the Protestant churches of the city. Ministers will preach appropriate sermons or make announcements as to the campaign. Catholic and Jewish charities have raised their funds for this year, but have indicated the likelihood of entering the Community Fund next year.

A mass meeting to start the work in the county will be held at Clayton High School at 2:30 p. m. Circuit Clerk Schmoll and Clerk Brand of the Probate Court called their employes together in one of the Circuit courtrooms yesterday to direct their attention to the campaign. Schmoll, in an address, told the group of about 50 men and women that contributions were by no means compulsory, but suggested they might want to contribute a day's pay each.

Hearst Leases New York Theater.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Feb. 24.—William Randolph Hearst, publisher and president of the Cosmopolitan Film Corporation, has leased the Park Theater in this city for 20 years, it was announced tonight, as the first move in the establishment of a chain of "long run" motion picture theaters in principal cities of the country. The local theater will be renamed "The Cosmopolitan."

AKRON SCHOOL BOY WINS THE WORLD'S HORSESHOE TITLE

Harold Falor, 15 Years Old, Defeats Champion and Two Former Champions.

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., Feb. 24.—Underneath cloudless skies and with a temperature of 84 degrees in the shade, Harold Falor, 15-years old high school boy of Akron, Ohio, today won what was advertised as the world's horseshoe pitching championship by taking on Frank Lundin, New London, Iowa; Frank Jackson, Kellerton, Iowa, and C. C. Davis, Columbus, Ohio, in the order named, and defeating them for the title and $500 in cash which goes to the first place winner.

To come out on top, the knickerbockered youngster had to beat Lundin, who put up to that match two former champions, Jackson and Davis. He beat Lundin 50-21, Davis 50-18 and Jackson 50-46.

Lundin won second money, $300 in cash while Davis took third place and $200. Jackson, the other member of the Ohio-Iowa big four, won fourth place and $175.

Ralph Spencer, the Oklahoma champion, was in fifth place and E. R. Plogman of Conroy, Iowa, sixth.

Davis was the first of the three men tied for first place to crack. The break came in his battle with Jackson, who topped him 50-17 leaving Falor and Lundin in the deadlock. Lundin won the toss and started off with the first tally, a lone point. Falor worked into the lead with a flock of double ringers and held it to the finish throwing 33 collars and seven doubles. Lundin made 24 ringers and six doubles.

Falor has been pitching horseshoes for two years.

Lundin defeated Spencer 50-17 in one of the afternoon matches. Later Davis hooked up with Spencer winning 50-26.

AIR MANEUVERS MAY CHANGE ALL NAVY DEFENSE PLANS

Flyer Theoretically Smashed a Panama Canal Lock With Bombs.

By the Associated Press.

SAN DIEGO, Cal., Feb. 24.—The recent work of Lieut. Albert S. Marley, attached to the aviation unit aboard the battleship Oklahoma, may have changed the entire defense plans of the United States navy, according to radio advices here today concerning the sham attack on the Panama Canal just completed by the battle fleet.

Lieut. Marley was catapulted in a fighting plane from the deck of the dreadnaught and a short time later theoretically smashed the chief Gatun lock off the Panama Canal with bombs. His achievement came as a sensational climax to the attack on the canal by the fleet, commanded by Admiral E. W. Eberle, and working against the blockading fleet, commanded by Admiral McDonald.

The air attack was launched after the Oklahoma and other vessels of Admiral Eberle's fleet had slipped past the lone submarine guarding the entrance to Port Culebra. Lieut. Marley had made a reconnaissance of Port Culebra just before this, and gained valuable information.

The outstanding need of the fleet to defend the canal according to a report made by Admiral Eberle is a number of fast scout cruisers. Admiral McDonald, it is said, was handicapped seriously by not having such vessels to act as an advance guard.

SHAKEUP IN FEDERAL DRY FORCE AFFECTS FIVE CHIEFS

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 24.—Five divisional prohibition chiefs were transferred to new berths today by Prohibition Commissioner Haynes, in a readjustment of enforcement personnel. All the men affected by the orders, the Commissioner insisted, had "made splendid records in their previous assignments."

One transfer involves the New York division, where there has been a long-standing row over prohibition enforcement. John D. Appleby was removed from New York and sent to the Boston division, while R. Q. Merrick, now at Savannah, was made the new chief of the New York territory.

State Prohibition Director Carl Jackson of Wyoming was appointed chief of the Seattle prohibition division. Divisional Chief Mack Overpeck was transferred from Boston to the New Orleans division. Divisional Chief W. T. Day was transferred from the New Orleans division to the Savannah division.

Man, 26 Hours in Deep Well, Dies Soon After His Rescue.

BALTIMORE, Feb. 24.—After having been imprisoned at the bottom of a deep well at Savage, Md., for 26 hours, Maynard Easton was extricated by firemen from Baltimore this afternoon, only to die several hours later. He suffered no broken bones, it was said, but the pressure on his heart was too great for him to withstand. He was partly conscious when taken out and lapsed into coma soon afterwards.

HARDING ASKS SENATE TO AUTHORIZE MEMBERSHIP IN INTERNATIONAL COURT

HUGHES TELLS HOW U. S. CAN PROCEED TO JOIN COURT

Letter, Sent to Senate by President With Proposal of Membership, Indicates How, by Reservations, America Can Remain Free From Relation to League.

HISTORY OF FORMING OF COURT OUTLINED

Adhesion to Statute on Which Body Is Based Would Be Conditioned on Voice in Election of Members.

Post-Dispatch Bureau,
No. 20 Wyatt Building.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 24.—President Harding in asking the Senate to authorize United States membership in the International Court of Justice included with his message a letter addressed to him by Secretary of State Hughes in which was presented the history of the establishment of the court. The text of the Hughes letter, which takes note of the objections because of the organization of the court under the auspices of the League of Nations and which indicates how with certain reservations the United States may participate and remain free from any legal relation of the league or obligation under the covenant of the league, follows:

"The Secretary of State:

"My dear Mr. President:

"Referring to our interviews with respect to the advisability of action by this Government in order to give its adhesion, upon appropriate conditions, to the Protocol establishing the permanent Court of International Justice, I beg leave to submit the following considerations:

From its foundation, this Government has taken a leading part in promoting the judicial settlement of international disputes. Prior to the first peace conference at the Hague in 1899, the United States had participated in 57 arbitrations, 20 of which were with Great Britain. The President of the United States had acted as arbitrator between other nations in five cases, and Ministers of the United States, or other persons designated by this Government, had acted as arbitrator or umpire in seven cases. In 1890, the Congress adopted a concurrent resolution:

"'That the President be, and is hereby requested to invite, from time to time, as fit occasions may arise, negotiations with any Government with which the United States has or may have diplomatic relations, to the end that any differences or disputes arising between the two Governments which cannot be adjusted by diplomatic agency may be referred to arbitration and be peaceably adjusted by such means. (Congressional Record, Fifty-first Congress, First Session, Part 3, Vol. 21, pp. 29-36.)'

Quotes Secretary Hay.

"In his instructions to the delegates of this Government to the first peace conference at the Hague, Secretary Hay said: 'Nothing can secure for human government and for the authority of law which it represents so deep a respect and so firm a loyalty as the spectacle of sovereign and independent states, whose duty it is to prescribe the rules of

Text of President's Message

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 24.

THE President's message follows:

"There has been established at The Hague a permanent court of international justice for the trial and decision of international causes by judicial methods, now effective through the ratification by the signatory Powers of a special protocol. It is organized and functioning. The United States is a competent suitor in the court, through provision of the statute creating it, but that relation is not sufficient for a nation long committed to the peaceful settlement of international controversies. Indeed, our nation had a conspicuous place in the advocacy of such an agency of peace and international adjustment and our deliberate public opinion of today is overwhelmingly in favor of our full participation, and the attending obligations of maintenance and the furtherance of its prestige. It is for this reason that I am now asking for the consent of the Senate to our adhesion to the protocol.

"With this request I am sending to the Senate a copy of the letter addressed to me by the Secretary of State, in which he presents in detail the history of the establishment of the court, takes note of the objection to our adherence because of the court's organization under the auspices of the League of Nations, and its relation thereto, and indicates how, with certain reservations, we may fully adhere and participate, and remain wholly free from any legal relation to the league or assumption of obligation under the covenant of the league.

"I forbear repeating the presentation made by the Secretary of State, but there is one phase of the matter not covered in his letter with which I choose frankly to acquaint the Senate. For a long period, indeed, ever since the international conference on the limitation of armament, the consideration of plans under which we might adhere to the protocol has been under way. We were unwilling to adhere unless we could participate in the selection of judges. We could not hope to participate with an American accord if adherence involved any legal relation to the league. These conditions, there is good reason to believe, will be acceptable to the signatory Powers, though nothing definitely can be done until the United States tenders adhesion with these reservations. Manifestly the executive cannot make this tender until the Senate has spoken its approval. Therefore, I most earnestly urge your favorable advice and consent. I would rejoice if some action could be taken, even in the short period which remains of the present session.

"It is not a new problem in international relationship. It is wholly a question of accepting an established institution of high character, and making effective all the fine things which have been said by us in favor of such an agency of advanced civilization. It would be well worth the while of the Senate to make such a special effort as is becoming to record its approval. Such action would add to our own consciousness of participation in the fortunate advancement of international relationship and remind the world anew that we are ready for our proper part in furthering peace and adding to stability in world affairs.

SEARCHERS BELIEVE FLIERS PERISHED IN ARIZONA DESERT

Party, After Fruitless Quest, of Opinion That Bodies Were Covered by Sand After Crash.

By the Associated Press.

SAN DIEGO, Cal., Feb. 24.—Belief that Colonel Francis Marshall and Lieut. Charles Webber, missing since Dec. 7 last, crashed in their airplane in the desert wastes southeast of the Growler Mountains in Arizona and that their bodies and the plane were buried by the shifting sands, was expressed today by the searching party headed by Major Theodore Macauley.

The party returned today to Rockwell Field after a long search. The members have gone over a large stretch of territory in Northern Sonora and Southwestern Arizona.

Colonel Macauley and his assistants said they believed that the airplane had been unable to top the Growler Mountains.

Memorial services for the two officers are to be held at Washington, D. C., next Wednesday.

TOWN WHISTLES IN PROTEST AGAINST ANTI-CIGARETTE LAW

By the Associated Press.

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, Feb. 24.—Standing room was at a premium at a downtown theater mass meeting of the Freeman's League of Utah today to protest against the anti-cigarette law. Several thousand persons, it is estimated, cheered remarks of speakers that the cigarette statute was not in conformity with the will of the majority of the people of the State and that it should be repealed.

William W. Wray, former United States District Attorney here, was one of the principal speakers at the meeting. Promptly at noon today there was a loud sounding of steam whistles in conformity with a request of the Freeman's League that they be blown as a protest against the cigarette statute.

MRS. HARDING ENTERTAINS AT TEA AT THE WHITE HOUSE

President's Wife, Sufficiently Recovered, Entertains Group of Thirty in Private Drawing Room.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 24.—Mrs. Harding, wife of the President, has made such progress in her recuperation from the severe illness of last year that today she received informally at tea a group of more than 30 women in her private drawing room at the White House. The guests, with one or two exceptions, were newspaper or magazine writers.

Entering the room to greet her guests, it was said that Mrs. Harding walked unaided. In speaking of her illness, she especially mentioned her appreciation of the thoughtfulness for her of the people of the United States and of foreign countries. She also mentioned the coming trip to Florida and her hopefulness in its beneficial results.

It was apparent to her guests, however, that Mrs. Harding could not be expected for some time to enter upon any round of formal social duties as mistress of the White House.

SAYS AMERICA SHOULD AID IN FURTHERING WORLD PEACE

President Requests Consent to "Adhesion" to Protocol of League of Nations Covenant With Reservations to Insure Freedom From Legal Relation.

COOLY RECEIVED BY IRRECONCILABLES

Signs of Revolt Among Forces Which Called Plan "Side Door" Entry Into League When Broached Last October.

Post-Dispatch Bureau,
20 Wyatt Bldg.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 24.—President Harding, in a message to the Senate late this afternoon, asked consent "to the United States' adhesion to the Protocol under which the permanent Court of International Justice has been erected at the Hague."

The President broached this subject last October and the Irreconcilables promptly exploded, calling it a "'side door" entry into the League of Nations and thoroughly inconsistent coming from a President who had denounced the League from beginning to end.

They exhibited the same signs of revolt when the Harding message reached the Senate this afternoon, but they refrained from open assault pending a study of the 3000-word letter, accompanying it, wherein Secretary of State Hughes explained how the United States could ratify the Protocol under Article 14 of the League of Nations and thereby become a member of the International Court without at the same time marrying itself in any sense to the League of Nations. The Irreconcilables are unconvinced. They agreed that the Senate's consent would never be given before March 4 when the fast expiring session ends. The President's message was read in executive session and then sent to the Foreign Relations Committee. Senator Lodge, Republican, Massachusetts, the chairman, announced a meeting would be called Monday or Tuesday to consider the subject. Lodge was doubtful of getting the proposal through this session.

Senate Comment on Message.

According to comment in the Senate from the Insurgent group, the President has evidently aimed his rather belated presentation of the subject at the recent proposal made by Senator Borah, Republican, Idaho, which called for the creation of an international court based on the theory of the Federal Supreme Court. Borah is withholding his views on the President's move until he, too, has studied the accompanying Hughes letter.

No one doubts that Secretary Hughes is the real originator behind the move. He has favored the League's corut, which Elihu Root was chiefly instrumental in founding, and he has often seen the President about it.

Why the President should have delayed it until his chances are almost hopeless of getting it through in the expiring hours of this session is somewhat of a puzzle, unless it is timed as an offset to the Borah idea.

Naturally the Democrats accept the President's action as the most obvious kind of admission that the

COLBECK TAKEN IN INQUIRY INTO MACKLER MURDER

Reputed Leader of Egan Gang and Two Associates Released on $10,000 Bonds After Being Held 2 Hours.

NEW FACTS DEVELOPED IN THE EGAN KILLING

Police Learn Mackler Introduced Max Greenberg to Kennedy and Doyle — Gang Tried Often to "Get" Lawyer.

William P. Colbeck, reputed leader of the Egan gang, and two others of the gang were arrested by the police homicide squad at King's highway and Easton avenue last night for questioning about the assassination of Jacob H. Mackler Wednesday night. Two hours after being taken to Police Headquarters, Colbeck and the two others were released on $10,000 bonds accepted by Judge Hogan. Five others, arrested Thursday, have been released on bonds of $10,000. All denied they knew anything of the killing. Colbeck gave his address as 1408 Franklin avenue.

Detectives investigating the assassination of Mackler, who was attorney for the "Jelly Roll" Hogan gang, bitter foes of the Eganites, yesterday were told additional circumstances in connection with the killing of William T. Egan, Constable and Democratic City Committeeman, who was shot by gangsters in front of his saloon at 1400 Franklin avenue the night of Oct. 31, 1921. With the information obtained, the killing of Mackler was laid directly at the door of the Egan followers.

The information, coming from sources close to the Egan gang, convinced detectives that Mackler was shot because of his friendliness to Max Greenberg, who has been marked by the gang since the killing of Egan.

Police Theory of Killing.

The story, as related to a Post-Dispatch reporter by the detectives, is substantially this:

Just after Egan and Greenberg, who had been business associates and more than "pals" for years, fell out, the shooting of Greenberg in the jaw and the killing of John P. Sweeney, a young attorney attached to the Circuit Attorney's office and an Egan follower, occurred at Sixth and Chestnut streets, the night of March 11, 1921. Greenberg was reported to have got the better of Egan in business dealings. The killing of Sweeney was an accident, due to Greenberg's jumping behind Sweeney.

From that time on Greenberg, realizing he was a "marked man," sought new associations. He hunted up Mackler, who was known to be on friendly terms with the Hoganites and who served as their legal representative. He was introduced by Mackler to Luke Kennedy and John J. Doyle, then regarded as newcomers among St. Louis gangsters, who were associates of James Hogan, the younger of the Hogan brothers. Kennedy and Doyle were to take a third man, so the story runs, and if Egan was put out of the way there was to be $10,000 divided among them.

Greenberg and Mackler went to Union Station, and, as is known, Mackler there called Police Inspector Gerk's attention to Greenberg, who boarded a train for the East. That night Egan was killed.

Mackler's association with Greenberg aroused the Egan men against the lawyer. The wounding of Kennedy when in Mackler's automobile with Mackler and James Hogan and Abe Goldfeder, and the killing of Doyle and of Kennedy followed.

According to the information given to the police yesterday, the Eganites tried seven times to kidnap Mackler to make him tell what he knew about the shooting of Egan, but he never appeared alone and that plan failed. Five times members of the gang waited at his home to get him, but were foiled by his precaution of being accompanied.

Early last week the rumor flashed among the Eganites, "Greenberg is in town." They heard that Greenberg was using Mackler's automobile. Wednesday Mackler went to Granite City. He was accompanied by Jack S. Gollub, an attorney, with whom he was engaged in legal matters in that city. They met Justice of the Peace Armin Weiss in Granite City. A newcomer among the Eganites saw the trio in Granite City. He mistook Justice Weiss for Greenberg and sent the word to St. Louis, "Mackler and Greenberg are in Granite City."

Trailed From Granite City.

Mackler was shot and killed within a few hours as he was returning from Granite City. The gangsters, after arriving in Granite City to trail the Mackler automobile, learned that Greenberg was not with Mackler, but decided that the opportunity was not to be ignored. The informant told the detectives that the gang later had sought Greenberg, but had been unable to locate him in St. Louis.

"There is one man in the Egan crowd who has elected himself to bump off Greenberg," said this man. "He would give two years of his life to have the opportunity."

Greenberg, who is 36 years old and an ex-convict, formerly lived at 1417 Biddle street, and conducted a cigar store in the vicinity. He was released from the Leavenworth Federal Penitentiary Sept. 11, 1920, on a commutation of sentence by former President Wilson, along with three other men, after they had served less than six months of a five-year sentence on charges of boxcar thefts on the East Side, under which they were convicted at Danville, Ill., in 1917. The commutation did not restore the voting privilege. Greenberg and one of these men, who was assassinated later, were accused of being arson trust "torches" in the attempt to burn the plant of the Christian Bellows Co., 121 Dock street, in 1915. The charges were dropped after two mistrials.

SHIPPING BILL OFFICIALLY PRONOUNCED DEAD; KILLED BY LONG FILIBUSTER

Advocates of Administration Measure Show Enough Strength to Advance It if Final Vote Could Be Reached.

Post-Dispatch Bureau,
No. 20 Wyatt Bldg.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 24.—The administration ship subsidy bill was officialy pronounced dead this afternoon. It will be formally displaced Monday and returned to the Senate calendar. No further attention will be given the subject of the American merchant marine at this session of Congress.

Death of the shipping measure followed a relentless and untiring fillibuster, waged by a coalition of progressive Republicans and Democrats. In a test of strength today, advocates of the bill had votes to advance the legislation if a final vote could be reached. This was admitted, to be impossible.

The subsidy forces showed two more votes than had been expected. Cummins of Iowa always listed as an ardent foe of the subsidy, twice went on record as favoring it. Pomerene, Democrat, Ohio, invariably counted as an enemy of the proposition twice recorded himself as a supporter of the plan.

Stanfield, Republican, Oregon, deserted the administration following and voted to abandon the subsidy. Gooding of Idaho, who had been credited with manifesting symptoms of faint-heartedness stood firm and co-operated with friends of the President. But all this was after the measure was known to be dead.

Jones Admits Bill Is Dead.

Otherwise, there were no surprises. Jones of Washington, in charge of the subsidy fight, objected to having the measure recommitted, but he announced a perfect willingness to return it to the calendar and repeatedly confesed the measure was dead. He was determined that the subsidy should not be utilized to block other pending legislation.

The fight today was opened by Robinson, Democrat, Arkansas. He proposed an agreement to vote immediately on a motion to recommit the subsidy. "I want to say," remarked Jones, "that I hope the agreement, if entered into, will provide that the motion to recommit shall be voted on without debate. I want to say frankly that if the motion to taek up the shipping bill should prevail, I myself then would be perfectly willing to vote upon the motion of the Senator from North Dakota, Mr. Ladd, to take up the filled milk bill because I recognize when a matter is ended. I expressed the hope that the motion to recommit will be disposed of promptly on Monday."

"I have noted that throughout the debate the Senator has worn a flaring red tie" remarked Harrison Democrat, Mississippi. "Today I see him wearing a pure white tie, which indicates surrender."

"Why certainly I recognize the fact when I am licked," Jones replied.

"There is no occasion to wait until Monday," said Borah, Republican, Idaho, for this matter is now at an end, as the Senator himself has very well said. There is no use to lose more time with this bill. It is well understood it cannot pass this Congress. We can end it all today."

McKellar expressed similar views, and Robinson moved to table the motion to take up the bill. Jones objected.

The Robinson motion to table the Jones motion to take up the subsidy was defeated, 38 to 46.

Record Vote on Motion.

A record vote on the motion to take up the subsidy bill immediately followed. It prevailed, 46 to 38. The alignment was identical on each roll call. Lenroot maintained his regularity by voting for the subsidy. His recent utterances created the impression that he would join the filibusterers.

After Robinson made his motion to recommit the subsidy Curtis proposed that the measure be temporarily laid aside and the remainder of the day devoted to the calendar. This suggestion was accepted.

The Robinson motion remains pending and will come up Monday morning. Although open to debate it is predicted that a vote will be taken at once. All prophets agree that the motion to recommit will be defeated by approximately the same lineup as on the two votes today. Immediately following a vote on the Robinson motion, Ladd will move to take up the filled milk bill. It is understood that Jones of Washington and a large proportion of his Republican associates will support the Ladd motion. Thus, the subsidy will be displaced and sent back to the calendar.

Efforts will be made to kill the filled milk bill by Dial, Smith, McKellar and other Democrats who oppose it.

PRESIDENT PROPOSES U. S. MEMBERSHIP IN INTERNATIONAL COURT

President has been driven from his anti-league stand. They are now and have long been strongly in favor of joining the international court. The objections that are raised are within the President's own ranks, and there is no present reason to believe the antipathy of the irreconcilables has diminished. The President, it is known, had hoped the initiative would be taken by some Senator on the Republican side, thus relieving him of the responsibility of full sponsorship. But no one responded as he had hoped, to his earlier suggestions.

Negotiations by Hughes.

Mr. Harding gave out the information on Oct. 31 that for some time the Government—meaning Hughes—had been negotiating with the league's members to ascertain whether the United States could become a fully represented party to the international court without at the same time subscribing to or affiliating with the league. The President let it be known that a way appeared open. This is set forth in the Hughes letter.

"I must read and carefully consider the documents before expressing an opinion," said Lodge this evening, which indicated how skeptically the G. O. P. rulers are eyeing the President's move.

"The extent to which this nation would be committed in League of Nations affairs must be given careful consideration," said Borah, in reserving his views.

"Serious consideration must be given a matter of this importance," Brandegee, republican, Connecticut, remarked.

"It is a splendid suggestion and should be made effective," was the opinion of King of Utah. "Any approach to the League of Nations should be welcome."

"I will not reach any conclusion," said La Follette, Republican, Wisconsin, with the general spekticism, "until I have thouroughly examined this proposition and fully understand it."

"Will Raise Storm of Debate."

McCormick, Republican, Illinois, observed that it was bound to raise a storm of debate, probably a reopening of the whole League of Nations controversy, and could not hope to get through this session.

Moses, Republican, New Hampshire, expressed a like view. Wadsworth, Republican, New York, was noncommittal.

Senators Sheppard of Texas and Robinson of Arkansas, expressing the reaction of the Democrats, naturally favor it. Robinson, who is acting minority leader, believes it should be thoroughly studied and debated.

Some doubt exists as to just what Mr. Harding seeks by way of preliminary action by the Senate—what he means by "adhesion."

Copy of Protocol Attached.

Senators who examined the President's letter take this to mean that Mr. Harding hopes for Senate ratification of the Protocol itself. A copy of the Protocol was attached to his letter, but was not made public. But Mr. Harding leaves it to the Senate to decide whether it will do that or merely grant him the authority to proceed to acceptance of membership in the court, under such reservations as the Senate may suggest.

Presumably, if the Senate should agree to this step, Elihu Root would be the logical candidate for the American Judge.

CRONKHITE INQUIRY RECALLS REPUDIATION OF CONFESSION

Roland Pothier, Who Implicated Capt. Rosenbluth in Murder Charged, Later Denied His Story.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 24.—Investigation of charges made recently by Major-General Delbert Cronkhite, retired, that important official documents dealing with the death of his son, Major A. P. Cronkhite, had been tampered with, is being conducted by Major-General Bethel, the Judge Advocate-General, upon orders of Secretary Weeks, who has directed that a complete report on all phases of the case be returned.

In connection with the revival of the Cronkhite case it will be recalled that Roland Pothier, in May, 1921, emphatically repudiated his confession involving Robert Rosenbluth, a former army captain, in a charge of murder growing out of the killing of Major Cronkhite at Camp Lewis, Wash., on Oct. 25, 1918. In his story, which he told to New York World reporters, Pothier charged that agents of the Bureau of Investigation of the Department of Justice had used methods which approached those of the "third degree" in extracting the confession from him.

Statements to the effect that he had been ordered by Capt. Rosenbluth to shoot the Major, Pothier said, were obtained in the Rhode Island State Prison six days after he had admitted to the agents that he killed Major Cronkhite accidentally while unloading his pistol. These statements were extracted, he declared, by repeated "examinations," which exhausted him, and by the pressure of his family and priest.

RADICAL CHANGES IN TRANSPORTATION ACT PROPOSED

Senator Brookhart Requests Harding to Call Special Session for Legislation to Reduce Freight Rates.

CRITICAL FARM CONDITIONS CITED

Bill Proposes Repeal of Provision for Rates to Insure to the Railroads a Fair Return.

Post-Dispatch Bureau,
No. 20 Wyatt Bldg.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 24.—Radical changes in the Esch-Cummins transportation act were proposed today by Senator Brookhart (Rep.) Iowa. These include repeal of important sections and supposedly pave the way to heavy reduction in freight rates. They are in the direction of redeeming campaign pledges made by Brookhart during his candidacy for the Senate.

President Harding is urgently requested to convene an extraordinary session of the newly elected Congress immediately following March 4. The session, according to Brookhart, should be devoted to modifications of the transportation laws.

"Owing to the critical condition in the agricultural districts of this country," said Brookhart in a statement, "which is caused to a great extent by high freight rates, I feel that the President should immediately call an extra session of Congress for the consideration of this railroad legislation.

"I have noted in the public press a statement from the chairman of the Interstate Commerce Committee of the Senate, presented by Senator Cummins, in which he predicts it will take six months for the consideration of this legislation, and I believe that this should be taken up at the earliest possible moment, in order that the great farming communities may secure the relief to which they are justly entitled, and relieve also the traveling public and the shippers in general."

Features of the Bill.

The chief features of the Brookhart bill are:

1. Abolition of the Railway Labor Board and restoration of the Federal Board of Mediation and Conciliation.

2. Restoration of the powers of the State railroad commission to completely control and regulate intra-state rates, and traffic. This section even wipes out the so-called Shreveport provision, under which the Interstate Commerce Commission is authorized to remove discriminations in intrastate rates against interstate rates. Senator Brookhart would have no relation at all between the two.

3. Repeal of section 15 A, the rate making provision which directs the Interstate Commerce Commission to maintain a level of rates that shall insure to the railroads a fair return. Acting under this direction, the commission has formally declared 5¾ per cent to be a fair return and has fixed rates on that basis. However, the railroad companies reports to the commission show a return below that figure so far.

4. Amendment of the provision regarding the fixing of the valuation of the properties of the railroads so that the Interstate Commerce Commission shall not determine upon a value in excess of the fair market value of all outstanding stocks, bonds, and other securities in each case. As the law now stands, the commission gives no consideration either to the market or par value of stocks or securities. Its valuation determinations are based solely on the basis of the actual physical properties of the roads as going concerns.

5. Exclusion of unearned increment in land values from consideration in fixing valuations. In other words, increases in the value of lands owned by railroads are not to be taken into account in fixing the value of the properties.

To Take Water Out of Valuation.

On the latter feature, Senator Brookhart said:

"The bill stops the capitalization of the unearned increment in property value."

The requirement that valuations shall not exceed the fair market value of outstanding securities, Senator Brookhart declared will "take $7,000,000,000 of water out of the valuations."

Later, the Senator added, he will introduce an amendment "which will stop excessive profiteering by sibsidiary corporations."

justice and impose penalties upon the lawless, bowing with reverence before the august supremacy of those principles of right which give to law its eternal foundation.'

"A plan for a permanent international tribunal accompanied these instructions.

"At that conference, there was adopted a 'Convention for the pacific settlement of international disputes' which provided for a permanent court, and really consists of arbitration. This organization, however, while called a permanent court, really consists of an eligible list of persons designated by the contracting parties respectively, from whom tribunals may be constituted for the determination of such controversies as the parties concerned may agree to submit to them.

"In 1908 and 1909 the United States concluded nine general conventions of arbitration which, in accordance with the Hague conventions, provided for arbitration by special agreemnt of differences, which are of a legal nature or which relate to the interpretation of treaties, and which it may not have been possible to settle by diplomacy provided that the differences do not affect the vital interest, the independence, or the honor of the two contracting states and do not concern the interests of third parties. Moreover, since the first peace conference at The Hague, a number of conventions have been concluded by this Government submitting to arbitration questions of great importance.

Says People Favor Court.

"It is believed that the preponderent opinion in this country has not only favored the policy of judicial settlement of justifiable international disputes through arbitration tribunals specially established, but it has also strongly desired that a permanent court of international justice be established and maintained. In his instructions to the delegates of the United States to the second peace conference held at The Hague in 1907, Secretary Root emphasized the importance of the establishment of such a tribunal in conformity with accepted judicial standards. He said:

"'It should be your efforts to bring about in the second conference a devedopment of The Hague tribunal into a permanent tribunal composed of Judges who are judicial officers and nothing else, who are paid adequate salaries, who will have no other occupation, and who will devote their entire time to the trial and discussion of international causes by the judicial methods and under a sense of judicial responsibility. These Judges should be so selected from the different countries that the different systems of law and procedure, and the principal languages shall be fairly represented. The court should be of such dignity, consideration and rank that the best and ablest jurists will accept appointment to it, and that the whole world will have absolute confidence in its judgment.'

The Second Peace Conference.

"The second peace conference discussed a plan looking to the attainment of this object, but the project failed because an agreement could not be reached with respect to the method of selecting Judges. The conference adopted the following recommendations:

"'The conference recommends to the signatory Powers the adoption of the project, hereto annexed, of a convention for the establishment of a court of arbitral justice and its putting into effect as soon as an accord shall be reached upon the choice of the judges and the execution of the court.'

"The covenant of the League of Nations provided in article 14 that the council of the league should formulate and submit to the members of the league plans for the establishment of a Permanent Court of International Justice, which should be competent to hear and determine any dispute of an international character which the parties thereto should submit to it and which also might give an advisory opinion upon any dispute or question referred to it by the council or the assembly of the league. This provision of the covenant, it may be said, did not enter into the subsequent controversy with respect to participation by this Government in the League of Nations; on the contrary, it is believed that this controversy reflected but little, if any, divergence of view in this country with respect to the advisability of establishing a Permanent International Court.

Hague Session in 1920.

"Pursuant to the direction contained in the article above quoted, the council of the league appointed an Advisory Committee of jurists which sat at The Hague in the summer of 1920 and formulated a plan for the establishment of such a court. Hon. Elihu Root was a member of that committee. It recommended a plan which was subsequently examined by the council and assembly of the league; and, after certain amendments had been made the statute constituting the Permanent Court of International Justice was adopted by the assembly of the league on Dec. 13, 1920.

"While those steps were taken under the auspices of the league, the statute constituting the permanent Court of International Justice did not become effective upon its adoption by the Assembly of the League. On the contrary, it became effective by virtue of the signature and ratification by the signatory Powers of a special protocol. The reason for this procedure was that, although the plan of the court was prepared under Article 14 of the covenant, the statute went beyond the terms of the covenant especially in making the court available to states which were not members of the League of Nations. Accordingly, a protocol of signature was prepared by which the signatory Powers declared their acceptance of the adjoined statute of the permanent Court of International Justice. The permanent court, thus established by the signatory Powers under the protocol with the statute annexed, is now completely organized and at work.

Fifteen Members in Court.

"The statute of the court providing for the selection of the Judges defines their qualifications; and prescribes the jurisdiction of the court and the procedure to be followed in litigation before it.

"The court consists of 15 members. Eleven Judges, called 'ordinary Judges,' and four Deputy Judges. The 11 Judges constitute the full court. In case they cannot all be present, deputies are to sit as Judges in place of the absentees; but if 11 Judges are not available, nine may constitute a quorum. It is provided that the Judges shall be elected regardless of their nationality from amongst persons of high moral character, possessing the qualifications required in their respective countries for appointments to the highest judicial offices, or who are jurists of recognized competence in international law. The Judges are elected by the council and assembly of the league, each body proceeding independently. The successful candidate must obtain an absolute majority of votes in each body. The Judges are elected for nine years and are eligible for re-election. The ordinary Judges are forbidden to exercise any political or administrative function. This provision does not apply to the Deputy Judges, except when performing their duties on the court.

"The jurisdiction of the court comprises all cases which the parties refer to it and all matters specially provided for in treaties and conventions in force.

"Provision has also been made so that any signatory Power, if it desires, may in signing the Protocol accept as compulsory 'ipso facto' and without special convention. The jurisdiction of the court in all or any of the classes of legal disputes concerning (a) The interpretation of a treaty; (b) Any question of international laws; (c) The existence of any fact which, if established, would constitute a breach of an international obligation; and (d) the nature or extent of the reparation to be made for the breach of an international obligation.

"This is an entirely optional clause and unless it is signed the jurisdiction of the Court is not obligatory.

First Judges Elected in 1921.

"The first election of Judges of the court took place in September, 1921. The 11 ordinary Judges are the following:

"Viscount Robert Bannatyne Finlay, Great Britain; B. C. J. Loder, Holland; Ruy Barbosa, Brazil; D. J. Nyholm, Denmark; Charles Andre Weiss, France; John Bassett Moore, United States; Antonio Sanchez de Bustamante, Cuba; Rafael Altamira, Spain; Yorozu Oda, Japan; Dionisio Anzilotti, Italy; Max Huber, Switzerland.

"The four deputies are: Michailo Yovanovitch, Serb-Croat-Slovene State; F. V. N. Beichmann, Norway; Demoetre Negulesco, Rumania; Chun-Hui Wang, China.

"It will be noted that one of the most distinguished American jurists has been elected a member of the court, Hon. John Bassett Moore.

"In considering the question of participation of the United States in the support of the permanent court, it may be observed that the United States is already a competent suitor in the court. The statute expressly provides that the court shall be open not only to members of the league, but to States mentioned in the annex to the covenant.

"U. S. Should Take Full Part."

"But it is not enough that the United States should have the privileges of a suitor. In view of the vast importance of the provision for the peaceful settlement of international controversies, of the time-honored policy of this Government in promoting such settlements, and of the fact that it has at last been found feasible to establish upon a sound basis a permanent international court of the highest distinction and to invest it with a jurisdiction which conforms to American principles and practice, I am profoundly convinced that this Government, under appropriate conditions, should become a party to the convention establishing the court and should contribute its fair share of the expense of maintenance.

"I find no insuperable obstacle in the fact that the United States is not a member of the League of Nations. The statute of the court has various procedural provisions relating to the league. But none of these provisions save those for the election of judges, to which I shall presently refer, are of a character which would create any difficulty in the support of the court by the United States despite its nonmembership in the league. None of these provisions impair the independence of the court. It is an establishment separate from the league, having a distinct legal status resting upon the protocol and statute. It is organized and acts in accordance with judicial standards and its decisions are not controlled or subject to review by the League of Nations.

Suggests Reservations.

"In order to avoid any question that adhesion to the protocol and acceptance of the statute of the court would involve any legal relation on the part of the United States under the covenant of the League of Nations, it would be appropriate, if so desired, to have the point distinctly reserved as a part of the terms of the adhesion on the part of this Government.

"Again, as already noted, the signature of the protocol and the consequent acceptance of the statute, in the absence of assent to the optional compulsory cause, does not require the acceptance by the signatory Powers of the jurisdiction of the court, except in such cases as may thereafter be voluntarily submitted to the court. Hence, in adhering to the protocol, the United States would not be required to depart from the position, which it has thus far taken, that there should be a special agreement for the submission of a particular controversy to arbitral decision.

"There is, however, one fundamental objection to adhesion on the part of the United States to the protocol and the acceptance of the statute of the court in its present form. That is, that under the provisions of the statute, only members of the League of Nations are entitled to a voice in the election of judges.

"The objection is not met by the fact that this Government is represented by its own national group in The Hague of arbitration and that this group may nominate candidates for election as judges of the Permanent Court of International Justice. This provision relates simply to the nomination of candidates; the election of judges rests with the council and assembly of the League of Nations.

Objection to Signing Protocol.

"It is no disparagement of the distinguished abilities of the judges who have already been chosen to say that the United States could not be expected to give its formal support to a permanent tribunal in the election of most of which it had no right to take part.

"I believe that the validity of this objection is recognized and that it will be feasible to provide for the suitable participation by the United States in the election of judges, both ordinary and deputy judges, and in the filling of vacancies.

"The practical advantage of the present system of electing Judges, by the majority votes of the Council and Assembly of the League, acting separately, is quite manifest. It was this arrangement which solved the difficulty, theretofore appearing almost insuperable, of providing an electoral system conserving the interests of the Powers both great and small. It would be impracticable, in my judgment, to disturb the essential features of this system.

"It may also be observed that the members of the Council and Assembly of the League, in electing the Judges of the court, do not act under the covenant of the League of Nations, but under the statute of the court and in the capacity of electors performing duties defined by the statute. It would seem to be reasonable and practicable that, in adhering to the protocol and accepting the statute, this Government should prescribe as a condition that the United States, through representatives designated for the purpose, should be permitted to participate upon an equality with other members of the League of Nations in all proceedings, both of the Council and Assembly of the League, for the election of Judges or Deputy Judges of the court or for the filling of vacancies in these offices.

Voice in Amending Statute.

"As the statute of the court prescribes its organization, competence and procedure, it would be appropriate to provide, as a condition of the adhesion of the United States, that the statute should not be amended without the consent of the United States.

"The expenses of the court are not burdensome. Under the statute of the court, these expenses are borne by the League of Nations; the League determines the budget and apportions the amount among members. I understand that the largest contribution by any state is but little more than $35,000 a year. In this matter also the members of the Council and Assembly of the League do not act under the covenant of the League, but under the statute of the court.

"The United States, if it adheres to the Proctocol, would, of course, desire to pay its fair share of the expense of maintaining the court. The amount of this contribution would, however, be subject to determination by Congress and to the making of appropriations for the purpose. Reference to this matter also might properly be made in the instrument of adhesion.

Propose Reservation.

"Accordingly, I beg leave to recommend that, if this course meets with your approval, you request the Senate to take suitable action advising and consenting to the adhesion on the part of the United States to the protocol of Dec. 16, 1920, accepting the adjoined statute of the Permanent Court of International Justice, but not the optional clause for compulsory jurisdiction provided, however, that such adhesion shall be upon the following conditions and understandings to be made a part of the instrument of adhesion:

"1. That such adhesion shall not be taken to involve any legal relation on the part of the United States to the League of Nations or the assumption of any obligations by the United States under the covenant of the League of Nations constituting part I of the treaty of Versailles.

"2. That the United States shall be permitted to participate through representatives designated for the purpose, and upon an equality with the other states' members respectively of the Council and Assembly of the League of Nations in any and all proceedings of either the Council or the Assembly for the election of Judges or Deputy Judges of the Permanent Court of International Justice or for the filling of vacancies.

Would Pay Share of Expense.

"3. That the United States will pay a fair share of the expenses of the court as determined and appropriated from time to time by the Congress of the United States.

"4. That the statute for the Permanent Court of International Justice adjoined to the protocol shall not be amended without the consent of the United States.

"If the Senate gives its assent on this basis, steps can then be taken for the adhesion of the United States to the protocol in the manner authorized. The attitude of this Government will thus be defined, and communicated to the other signatory Powers whose acquiescence in the stated conditions will be necessary.

"Copies of the resolution of the Assembly of the League of Nations of Dec. 13, 1920, the protocol of Dec. 16, 1920, and the statute of the court, are inclosed herewith.

"I am, my dear Mr. President, faithfully yours,

HARVEY EXPLAINS HIS "DAMNED WELL OUT OF THE WHOLE MESS" STATEMENT

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Feb. 24.

AMBASSADOR GEORGE HARVEY, speaking as the guest of honor at the dinner of the London Press Club tonight, referred to a statement he is reported to have made on his recent visit to Washington, that "America is damned well out of the whole mess," and said:

"I was glad that we were out of the mess, as England would be glad if she were out of the mess. It isn't a question of the policy of a nation. It is a question of the necessity of a nation.

"I have a real, plain, simple desire to do everything I can, and everything my country can, to help this empire in the terrible distress she is in—to help her out of the mess that she has got to get out of, and there is no limit I would not go, now that the wretched debt business is out of the way, to help this country."

HANGE IN CITY STREET LIGHTS TO TAKE EIGHT YEARS

Construction Plans for the $8,000,000 Electric System Prepared on Basis of That Period.

INSTALLATION WILL BE BY DISTRICTS

City Will Not Build Power Plant, but Will Buy Current for the More Than 50,000 Lights.

Construction plans for the $8,000,000 city-wide system of electric lighting of streets, authorized in the recent bond issue election, are being prepared in the Department of Public Utilities on the basis of an eight-year period of installation.

An outline of the work will be presented to the Citizens' Supervisory Committee next Thursday in a consolidated report being prepared by the Board of Public Service on all projects in the $87,372,500 bond issue public improvement program.

The system is designed for 50,000 electric lights, with provision for lighting all streets, as well as undeveloped property within the city, which may be opened later as subdivisions.

Status of City Lighting Now.

Illumination of St. Louis streets by gas will cease with the installation of the electric system. The city now has approximately 26,000 street lights, of which 22,177 are gas lights, owned and kept in operation by two private companies. The old system does not cover all of the city, as 122 miles of the 970 miles of streets are without street lights, according to city engineers.

Construction of the system will be by districts, under the present plan, the old gas lights being taken out in sections as the electric lights are installed. The city will not build a power plant, but will buy electric current. A power plant never was seriously considered when the electric lighting plan first was proposed, as a heavy investment would be required for a plant that would be idle except during the hours of darkness.

The city is operating under a six-year contract for the gas lights, which is subject to cancellation by the city at the end of any year on payment of liquidation damages. The damages are fixed at $5600 for cancellation at the end of the first year, $[illegible]00 at the end of the second, ranging downward to $1200 at the end of the fifth year. A withdrawal clause is included in the contract, by which the city may order 100 gas lights out of commission each month, or [illegible]200 a year.

Work to Be Done by Districts.

Installation of the new lights can be carried on at the rate of approximately 6000 lights a year, Ralf Toensfeldt, electrical engineer in the Department of Public Utilities, said yesterday. The city will be divided into 11 districts, and installation completed in one district at a time. A cost test will be made on the first district. Half of the work will be let out on contract and the other half installed by city forces. Costs of the two methods will be compared when the district is completed, to determine the most economical method of installing the remainder of the system.

The $8,000,000 program is divided into three sections, $3,500,000 for [illegible] lighting along all major thoroughfares, $3,000,000 for replacing gas lights now in service on other streets, and $1,500,000 for streets now unlighted, new subdivisions to be opened later, and future extensions.

Plans for Downtown Corners.

Brilliant lighting is planned for the downtown streets, Toensfeldt said, through suspension of eight 1000-candlepower lights over the center of each intersection. The light distribution will be such that the light zone will extend more than half a block in each direction, the light zone from one corner overlapping that from the next corner. The arc lights now in use in the downtown district will be taken out.

This method is proposed for a district with a boundary line extending from Fourth west on Market to Eighteenth, north on Eighteenth to Washington, east on Washington to Twelfth, north on Twelfth to Franklin, east on Franklin to Fourth, and south on Fourth to Market.

A part of the business section adjacent to the foregoing district will be lighted by single 1000-candlepower lights suspended from poles at each street intersection. The remainder of the district between Fourth, Jefferson, Spruce and Biddle will be lighted with 600-candlepower lamps. The next district, extending south to Park, west to Grand, and north to Cass, will be provided with 400-candlepower lights at each intersection.

Plans for Major Streets.

All major thoroughfares in the city are to be lighted with 250-candlepower lamps in pairs, one on each side of the street at intervals of 140 feet. The streets next in importance, and all streets, other than major thoroughfares, which are traversed by street car lines, will be lighted with 250-candlepower lamps, at intervals of 140 feet. Lights will be placed at the four corners of the more important street intersections.

On the less-traveled residence streets 150-candlepower lamps will be installed at intervals of 140 feet and in the outlying, sparsely populated sections the same interval will separate posts, but 100-candlepower lamps will be used.

In the residence districts approximately 40,000 ornamental concrete posts will be installed. The type approved is 15 feet in height, with a glass and copper fixture at the top for the lamp. All wiring will be in conduits.

Need for additional lighting on any street can be met, Toensfeldt pointed out, merely by putting in a larger lamp. The conduits will be constructed so additional posts may be put up on any street.

Each district will be operated independently from district transformer stations, with four sub-districts within a district. The wiring system will be arranged so that if a circuit is put out of commission, it will affect only one-eighth of a district, or one-eighty-eighth of the city system.

Some of Prize Winners on Closing Day of Baby Show

Sullivan S. Marsden, Jr., 5205 Vernon avenue, winner of a special prize for the best-looking red-headed boy, offered by Mrs. Edward Schaaf State Regent of the Daughters of American Colonists. He weighs 27 pounds and is eigth months old.

Jack and Billie Kerr, 3 years, 4 months old, sons of Mrs. Adele Kerr, 4041 Kennerly Avenue.

SIGHS OF RELIEF HEARD AS BABY SHOW ENDS

Three Days' Crowded Sessions End Without Casualties—Except to Feelings.

The tumult and the shouting dies; the baby show is over.

And it is to be suspected that women of the Daughters of American Colonists, who conducted the show through one postponement because the Coliseum arena wasn't big enough and through three overcrowded days at Vandervoort's auditorium, are numbered among those who heaved large sighs of relief when it closed yesterday without serious damage to property or person.

The absence of casualties did not extend to feelings, for here, notwithstanding the large number of prizes, many suffered. Mothers were pained when their baby got into the wrong section to be judge with its class; they were hurt when a judge took their baby's number down and it was not called for an award; they were piqued when some other baby's picture was taken, and they were not altogether pleased when some strange child got the prize when Their Baby was right there in front of the judges all the time.

Mothers of prize-winning children when interviewed praised the women in charge very highly upon their efficiency and especially their staunch equanimity in the face of difficulties. There was a difference in the accounts of some whose children did not win prizes.

Yesterday's section of the show embraced the ages of 3 to 5 inclusive. There was no infants' chorus, hence the soothing charms of the piano were not resorted to as they were Friday, when younger children were judged. But there was an adult hum of conversation—as one speaker remarked from the platform, the grown people and not the children were making the noise—and so the cow bell again was brought into play to secure silence in emergencies.

The mothers chatted of course, but the gravely excited children sitting beside them seemed to have more to look at than to talk about. Accasionally a pretty child would distinguish himself for an ugly mood, but for the most part they were very quiet.

Besides the regular prizes, running sometimes to five or six in a class of each age, there were special prizes. The appearance of one family of three children brought forth a "family prize," and one was given for the best-looking redheaded boy. Each of the younger children and the eight pairs of twins who were not fortunate in prizewinning received a plate or a mug.

"STOP" SIGNAL CASE VENUED

The test case as to the legality of the State law providing for "stop" signals on the rear of closed automobiles owned by persons residing in cities having populations of more than 10,000 was ordered transferred from the Supreme Court of Missouri to the St. Louis Court of Appeals Friday. The Supreme Court, at Jefferson City, held that the question was not entitled to consideration by it.

The provision was part of a law which became effective late in 1921. Jack Nece, the appellant, manager of the truck and used-car department of an automobile concern, was arrested by arrangement, and was fined $100 in the Court of Criminal Correction, Jan. 30, 1922. He appealed. No arrests have been made since that of Nece, under this law.

MANY TRAFFIC ARRESTS MADE AT WASHINGTON PARK, ILL.

Magistrate Moves Office to Scene of a "Boulevard Stop," Designated by Recent Ruling.

The village board of Washington Park, immediately north of East St. Louis, has enacted a "boulevard stop" ordinance and has designated two street intersections where motorists must come to a stop before crossing the intersection. "The "stop" signs have been placed at North Park drive and Forest boulevard, and at Forest boulevard and King's highway. Both are in an isolated section.

The police magistrate, William Ray, has moved his office to the corner of North Park drive and Forest boulevard, and Constable Vincent is almost constantly on the scene to make arrests. Offenders are taken before the Magistrate, who fines them $5 and costs, a total of $8.50. The ordinance has been in effect several days and many drivers from East St. Louis and St. Louis have been arrested. Pleas that they were not aware of the ordinance or that they did not see the sign, or that they were strangers in the neighborhood have had no effect.

5 PERSONS, INCLUDING TWO CUSTOMERS LOCKED IN ICE BOX

Two men entered the office of the Littlebrock Creamery, 3204 Kossuth avenue, at 6 o'clock last night and held up Miss Olga Rogers, the cashier, with a revolver, and took $40 from the cash register.

At 8:20 o'clock two men entered the grocery and butter shop of Joseph Aach, 5624 Page avenue, and compelled Aach and his wife, Anna, and their son, Harold, and two customers to enter the ice box. The robbers took $30 from the cash register. A woman customer who entered ten minutes later liberated the five from the ice box.

John Green of 4341 Evans avenue was held up by two men in front of 4427 Harris avenue at 7:15 p. m. and robbed him of $16.50 and his watch, but at his request they returned the watch.

Albert McCloskey, 1416 North Union avenue, was held up by three men at Ewing avenue and Locust street at 8:30 p. m. and robbed of $16.

CHARLEMAGNE TOWER, DIPLOMAT, DIES AT 75

Had Been Ambassador to Russia and Germany and Minister to Austria-Hungary.

By the Associated Press.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Feb. 24.—Charlemagne Tower, diplomat and financier, who died today in the Pennsylvania hospital here, will be buried Monday. Services will be held in Holy Trinity Protestant Episcopal Church.

Tower died of pneumonia. He had been in the hospital since February 9. Today, after apparently rallying from a relapse, he fell into a deep sleep, which ended with his death. Members of the family were at his bedside.

Tower was in his seventy-fifth year. He had been Ambassador to Russia and Germany and Minister to Austria-Hungary. Both here and abroad Tower was prominent socially and was noted for the lavishness of his entertainments. From his father he inherited a large fortune, accumulated for the most part in the coal fields of Pennsylvania.

Tower Was a Popular Diplomatic Figure in Berlin Court Life.

Charlemagne Tower was one of the most popular diplomatic figures in the brilliant court life of Berlin during the six years he served as American Ambassador to Germany by appointment of President Roosevelt. His diplomatic career began in 1897, when he was named by President McKinley as Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary of the United States to Austria-Hungary. Two years later he was advanced to ambassadorial rank and sent to Russia, and from there went to Berlin in 1902.

So popular did he become with members of the German court that he was invariably selected to sit next to the then Emperor William during formal state dinners — a practice which brought many caustic comments from the representatives of other Governments.

Fickle as Emperor William was known to be with his good graces, Tower managed to remain in favor for the entire six years of his diplomatic stay in Berlin and was even the innocent cause of an embarrassing international incident when he retired in 1908. The Emperor said at a dinner that he was "very angry with President Roosevelt" for accepting Tower's resignation, and while the remark was intended merely to emphasize the regard he had for the retiring Ambassador, it was immediately construed as a slur on David Jayne Hill, the famous American historian and diplomat, who was named to succeed Tower.

SEVERE EARTHQUAKE SHOCKS REGISTERED

Center of Disturbance Believed to Have Been in Pacific Near Society Islands.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 24.—Another heavy earth shock, apparently centering in the same locality as the tremendous earthquake that shook the Pacific on Feb. 3, was recorded early today on the seismographs of Georgetown University.

The tremors began at 2:46 a. m. and continued until 4:20 a. m., reaching their greatest intensity between 3:13 and 3:20 o'clock.

Father Tondorf, in charge of the observatory, estimated the distance from Washington at 5400 to 5500 miles and said the direction apparently was "west by south."

St. Louis University Seismograph Records Earth Shocks.

The seismograph at St. Louis University yesterday recorded an earthquake of moderate intensity at a point estimated to be 4700 miles southwest, which would place it in the Pacific Ocean in the neighborhood of the Society Islands. The disturbance of the seismograph lasted from 1:45 a. m. to 2:22 a. m.

SUGGESTION FOR SURVEY OF CITY'S SMOKE APPROVED

Chairman of City Enforcement Commission Says Post-Dispatch Proposal Is Good for Two Reasons.

If the ordinance controlling smoke in St. Louis were enforced to the letter, much of the evil would be abated.

The smoke ordinance could be enforced to the letter and yet the smoke be denser than it is.

The seeming paradox was stated yesterday by E. L. Ohle, professor of mechanical engineering in Washington University, who is chairman of a commission appointed about a year ago by Director of Public Safety McKelvey to counsel on smoke enforcement. The commission is provided for in the ordinance.

However, the paradox disappears in the light of Prof. Ohle's explanation.

Explanation of Paradox.

If factory owners and householders were to stoke soft coal intelligently and in accordance with tried scientific methods, much of the smoke which kills plant life in the Missouri Botanical Garden and is the despair of housewives would vanish. The ordinance would be complied with.

On the other hand, factory owners could stoke so that their stacks would not emit dense smoke more than eight minutes in any one hour and would not emit smoke more than 60 per cent dense for the remainder of each hour, as is the ordinance requirement, yet the total volume of soot given off into the air would be greater than it now is.

In other words, Prof. Ohle points out that if the smoke ordinance is regarded only as a punishment to be escaped by letter compliance, the smoke will continue. On the other hand, if riddance of smoke is an earnest desire and endeavor of every burner of coal, whether large factory owner or small householder, then much of the smoke will be eliminated.

Survey Suggestion Approved.

Prof. Ohle thought the suggestion of an editorial in yesterday's Post-Dispatch for a survey of the smoke situation was a good one for two reasons. One was that it would give consideration to all means by which the smoke might be lessened. The other was that the consequent discussion would result in the wider education of the public in intelligent soft-coal burning. He believes that the greatest chance for solution of the vexing evil is through education.

He was inclined to agree with the conclusion of Dr. George T. Moore, director of the Missouri Botanical Garden, that the residence and apartment constitute the greater part of the problem. The residential chimneys discharge smoke at a low level, while the factory stacks send it out at a greater altitude. A smaller proportion of the factory soot reaches the collars of the pedestrian and the curtains of the housewife. Also, Prof. Ohle is sure that there has been a gradual improvement in methods of stoking in factories, while the householder gives little or no attention to burning the smoke instead of pouring it out upon his neighbor. The factory owner has come to recognize, Prof. Ohle thinks, that 20 per cent of his fuel bill can be saved with proper stoking. The saving has seemed too inconsequential to the householder to attract his consideration.

Simple Remedy Outlined.

Yet, Prof. Ohle declares, the smoke from residential and apartment chimneys could be greatly reduced by comparatively simple procedure. If, by chance, this procedure could be followed by every householder at all times, much of the smoke could be abated. The procedure is the following rules for firing:

1. Stir up the fire and get it hot before adding new fuel.
2. Preliminary to firing a new charge, push the burned fuel to the back or sides of the firebox, heaping it high up on the sides of the firebox walls. Fire fresh fuel into the hole in the hot fuel bed, making it level with the heaped-up burning coal.
3. After firing check the draft to make the fire burn slowly, setting the dampers as found best by experience.
4. A large charge of soft coal will burn slowly for several hours, giving out moderate heat.
5. A little air should be admitted through the slides in the fire-door.

Prof. Ohle said that the commission of which he is chairman has been holding from two to four meetings a month since its appointment. At these meetings it has instructed city smoke inspectors in proper methods of stoking so that they in turn could pass it on to the firemen in plants that were offenders against the ordinance. At many meetings men in charge of plants have been instructed in proper methods.

Other Members of Commission.

The other members of the commission are Victor Azbe, a consulting engineer, and E. J. Boehler, chief engineer for the Rice-Stix Dry Goods Co.

Prof. Ohle feels that the smoke being emitted from factory stacks is less in volume than when the commission began its work of education. However, he says, many factory owners yet are in the position of seeking only to comply with the ordinance rather than earnestly seeking to eliminate smoke. He cites as illustration the many letters received by the commission in reply to warnings of violations due apparently to the burning of factory waste which had emitted dense smoke for a longer period than permissible under the ordinance. "Most of these letters have the same tenor," Prof. Ohle said. "'We are very sorry and have instructed our firemen to burn the waste at night.'"

3 MEN WITH KLAN CARDS ARRESTED IN EAST ST. LOUIS

Charged With Circulating Anonymous Election Literature—Handbills Directed Against 18 Candidates.

Two men, both carrying membership cards in the East St. Louis Ku Klux Klan, were arrested in East St. Louis about midnight last night by Chief of Police Mulconnery, who charged them with circulating anonymous election campaign matter in violation of a law, the maximum punishment for which is a fine of $500 and six months in jail. A third man, also carrying a Ku Klux Klan membership card, was arrested in an automobile without license plates and 2000 of the same kind of handbills and some sample ballots, printed by a St. Louis printing house, were found in the car.

The handbills were addressed to the voters of East St. Louis and called upon them to defeat certain candidates at the primary election Tuesday, on the ground that they were either members of the Knights of Columbus, members of the Catholic church or supported by Catholics. Eighteen candidates were named in the handbills as deserving of defeat for the above reasons.

The men in custody gave the names of W. J. Gillen, 41 years old, of 2021 North Twenty-fifth street, a a boilermaker; Harry Weeks, 19, 3047 North Park Drive, a chauffeur, who were arrested on North boulevard, in Lansdowne, while distributing the anonymous circulars, and one Morrow, arrested at Thirteenth street and St. Louis avenue.

Although confronted with their membership cards, which showed dues paid to March 31, Gillen and Weeks denied membership in the klan. Morrow told the police he was paid $10 by a Methodist preacher, who is active in politics, to distribute the circulars. He gave the name of this minister.

The law requires that election campaign matter shall be signed in such a way that the agency behind the distribution can be traced.

Candidates Confident of Winning.

The last day but one before the primary finds each of the 32 candidates confident of victory. Mayor M. M. Stephens, candidate for re-election, is said to have a wholehearted pledge of support by a majority of the Democrats and promises of considerable support from Republicans who have approved his administration.

Michael J. Whalen, Commissioner of Public Property, also a candidate for re-election, is assured of a heavy labor vote and expects to run even stronger than he did when elected.

The other three Commissioners, William J. Veach, Commissioner of Accounts and Finance; Fred Leber, Commissioner of Public Health and Safety, and Arthur P. O'Leary, Commissioner of Streets and Public Improvements, are offering themselves as candidates on an economical administration of the city's affairs, Veach for Mayor. These three have stood and voted together against Mayor Stephens and Commissioner Whalen on many important questions.

Candidates Indorsed by Klan.

The candidates indorsed by the Ku Klux Klan are M. L. Harris, for the Mayoralty, and Ralph Cook, August Eggmann, S. F. Porter and the Rev. William R. Evans, for commissionerships.

Harris, Cook and Eggmann have denied that they are or were "citizens of the Invisible Empire." Harris, in a statement given to the newspapers by a man who gave the name of William R. Brown, manager of the Insurance Department of the Illinois State Trust Co., says that he knows nothing of the doings of the Klan and that if the Klansmen indorsed him it was without his knowledge or solicitation.

"In my candidacy for Mayor," Harris states, "I have well-defined ideas for city betterment and development; for industrial extension, for residential improvement. I have plans for creating more and steadier work for the workingman, and greater business opportunities for the business man. My desire is to create, construct, improve."

The Rev. Mr. Evans, pastor of Bond Avenue M. E. Church, says he stands for a cleaner and greater city, with fearless, honest and efficient police protection.

Other Candidates in List.

Other candidates for commissionership nominations are: Cornelius J. Hayes, Ernest J. Abt, A. V. Brown, John T. Connors, Thomas J. Corrigan, Frank E. Cronin, James J. Hanlon, Jule A. Holten, Stephen H. Horn, Ike H. Howard, Fred W. Kraft, Harry A. Massey, Frank C. Molla, Fred W. Mollman, M. P. Murray, B. R. Owings, John Peters, Edward J. Shawen, Pat W. Sullivan, C. A. (Neil) Summers, Charles A. Tissier, Wilton M. Vandeventer, E. P. Williams, Herman E. Zierrath, Fred A. de Jarnatt and W. W. Stines.

FILIPPI RETURNS TO ROME AND CONFERS WITH GASPARRI

By the Associated Press.

ROME, Feb. 24.—Monsignor Ernst Filippi, Apostolic delegate to Mexico, recently expelled by the Mexican Government, arrived in Rome today. He went directly to the office of Cardinal Gasparri, Papal Secretary of State, where he was asked to complete his reports in regard to his sojourn in Mexico, giving full details concerning the incident which led to his expulsion.

Both Pope Pius and Cardinal Gasparri are personally inquiring as to the prospects of the incident, in order to decide upon the best course to be pursued by the Vatican in its future relations with Mexico.

Concordia Five Succumbs to Brilliant K. C. A. C. Team, 33-21

Efficient Guarding by Browning and Sanders Throws Local Forwards Off Their Stride—First Half Ends With Visitors Leading 28—14.

In the face of superior guarding and visibly nervous and off form, the Concordia Seminary basketball team went down in defeat before the famous Kansas City Athletic Club team at the First Regiment Armory last night, 33 to 21.

A gathering of 1300 fans packed the Armory to witness one of the best local games of the season.

Concordia was never able to attain its best pace, principally on account of the wonderful guarding of Sanders and Browning. The collapse of Hartner, center, who attempted to make free throws. He caged only three shots and missed nine in the course of the game.

The game opened in a veritable whirlwind of speed. The players of both teams appeared to be nervous and excited, as was evidenced by their hasty and inaccurate shooting. The ball was whipped around with surprising speed and shots came thick and fast.

Claus Grabs Lead.

Williams was the first to score when he caged a basket from a foul throw. Concordia held a momentary lead when Claus dropped a field goal into the basket. Another free throw by Williams tied the count with a free shot and then put his team in the lead with a brilliant field basket. Kansas City was never headed again in the first half. The score at the end of the first period of play was 14 to 8 with the visitors leading.

Kansas City was playing a remarkably close and intelligent defensive game. The guards appeared to anticipate Concordia's offensive movements and they were almost always in the right place to thwart an attack on their basket.

Three times in this period the visiting players hit the high rafters with their passes. It was evident that they were accustomed to playing on a court of large dimensions. Concordia maneuvered well and held its own in mid-court, but the shooting of the forwards was very weak. The most impressive thing about the first half was the excellent guarding by Browning and Sanders, which necessitated hasty shooting on the part of the Concordia forwards.

Singer's Short Shots.

Singer remained close under the Concordia basket and caged several shots from long passes from his mates.

Concordia had greater success with its shots toward the close of the half and brought the score from 12 to 4 to 12 to 6, 12 to 8 and then permitted Williams to score for visitors to make it 14 to 8.

Concordia Spurts.

In the second half Concordia opened strongly. Taking the initiative, the local lads cut down the K. C. A. C. lead with two field goals. The game was a nip-and-tuck affair until near the middle of the half when Schuessler, after a dribble, inadvertently passed the ball directly to Williams, the victors' center. He shot from midfield and dropped the ball into the Concordia basket. The locals were never so strong after that sensational shot by Williams. It appeared to be the turning point of the game for Kansas City soon forged ahead.

Toney Applies for Reinstatement as Cardinals Depart

Landis' Secretary Wires Post-Dispatch Commissioner Will Act on Application Soon.

Fred Toney, the big righthander, obtained by the Cardinals from the Boston Braves, last summer, but who failed to report, has applied to Commissioner K. M. Landis for reinstatement. This information was contained in a letter to the Post-Dispatch from Leslie O'Connor, Landis' secretary, yesterday.

O'Connor, in his letter, which was in answer to a telegram from the Post-Dispatch, asserted that Toney's application for reinstatement had been received at the office of the commissioner a few days ago, and that Landis would pass upon it in a few days.

It is probably for this reason, and none other, that the Cardinal officials have had no word from the pitcher since he recently made up his mind to join the club.

Without a doubt, he will sign a contract and report at Bradentown, as soon as his application has been passed upon.

Reinstatement Is Expected.

There is little doubt but that he will be reinstated. He has done nothing against the rules of organized baseball, such as playing with ineligibles. His reason for not reporting last summer after he was obtained from Boston was that illness in his family prevented it.

This probably will be cheering news to Manager Rickey, who is recovering from an attack of appendicitis, and who is counting on Toney to be of great assistance to the Cardinals the coming campaign.

The first squad of the Cardinals, led by Burt Shotton, who will be in charge of the team until Rickey is able to report, departed for Bradentown yesterday afternoon. In addition to Cardinal recruits, there were several members of the Syracuse and Fort Smith clubs. The Syracuse team will train at Bradentown with the Cardinals.

Cards and Future Cards Depart.

Both Syracuse and Fort Smith have working agreements with the Cardinals, in fact, are partly owned by officials of the local National Leaguers. If any of the players of either team shows enough to warrant a chance in the big tent, he will be taken over by Rickey.

In the party, which departed for the South yesterday afternoon, were: Secretary Lloyd, Acting Manager Shotton, Scout Charley Barrett, Pfeffer, Schultz, McCurdy, McDermott, Holm, Mueller, Blades, Edgar, Wigington, Learn, Sullivan of the Cardinals, Arnold of Fort Smith, Barnes, Bailey, Mathews and Bool, Syracuse, and a youngster named Paulson, who is going along for a tryout.

American Boxer Loses.

MELBOURNE, Feb. 24.—Fred Jacks of England, former European featherweight champion, easily defeated Stanley McBride of America on points in a 20-round bout here today.

Firpo Formidable Man Physically, Newly Taken Measurements Show

Giant From Argentina Is 30 Pounds Heavier Than Present Champion—Is Bigger and Heavier Than Jeffries in His Prime—Shows Improvement in Boxing.

By Bert Igoe,
The Post-Dispatch's Eastern Boxing Authority.

NEW YORK, Feb. 24.—Luis Angel Firpo, the giant boxer from Argentina, went down to Madison Square Garden to have a little workout—a sort of limbering up of the old sea legs as it were—and he had no sooner peeled off and appeared in gym costume than he was pinned to the handball wall and photographed.

Firpo then flattened himself against the wall as Rickard measured him with a tape line. Tex was getting his figures first hand and the result of his measuring follows:

Length of each arm, 30 inches.
Neck, 17½ inches.
Chest, normal, 45 inches.
Chest, deflated, 41 inches.
Chest, expanded, 47 inches.
Reach, 77 inches.
Fighting Weight 223 Pounds.

Through an interpreter Firpo told of his home coming after the first visit to the United States.

"There was a tremendous crowd to welcome me, one of the greatest I have ever seen. My ship was seven hours late, but they waited, good people, they waited."

Welcome Smashes Firpo's Auto.

"Yes, and he got a greater reception than the new President," broke in one of his party in English. "The crowd was so great that it swarmed over an automobile and smashed it flat."

Some crowd.

"There were 23,000 persons on hand to see his bout with Jim Tracey," said the man with the automobile data. "Boxing is not permitted in Buenos Ayres, but a short trip across a river brings them into friendly territory. One newspaper in Buenos Ayres keeps boxing out of there in favor of fencing. However, Firpo is winning boxing enthusiasts over in such numbers that the law of 10 years standing will soon be wiped out. Firpo has put Buenos Ayres back on the map."

The South American champion who boxes Bill Brennan in the Garden on March 12, boxed with his light-heavyweight protege, Jose Scagliamo. The big fellow impressed the onlookers with his boxing. He seems shiftier than before, though two faults were apparent yesterday.

Firpo "telegraphs" his straight right for the jaw by drawing back his shoulder before delivering the blow. He is inclined to be flat-footed in his attack, hampering his speed a lot, though his object seems to be to "set" for a punch.

Of course he was boxing with a much lighter man; but Dempsey, for instance, always tries to outspeed his man, even if he is sparring with a flyweight.

Curtin to Box Terry Martin.

Johnny Curtin, unlucky in his bout with Tremaine, will begin all over again, if folks believe that Tremaine is a better man. He is to face Terry Martin at the Fourth Regiment Armory in Jersey City Monday night.

SHOT PUT RECORD BROKEN; LEVER WINS DASHES FROM SCHOLZ

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Feb. 24.—Ralph G. Hills, Princeton, tonight broke the world's record for the indoor shot put at the annual track and field meet of the New York Athletic Club, throwing the ball 48 feet 9 inches.

The former record was made by Pat McDonald of Olympic fame at 47 feet 6½ inches.

Harold Lever, Penn star sprinter, won the special sprint series of 50, 60 and 70 yard dashes, totaling 15 points with three first places. Earle Rusnak, Yale, was second with 9 and Jackson Scholz, N. Y. A. C., third, with 3. Lever's times were: 5 2-5 seconds, 6 3-5 seconds and 7 2-5 seconds.

Summaries on other important events were:

Running high jump—Won by R. W. Landon, N. Y. A. C., 6 feet 7¼ inches; second, John Murphy, Portland, Ore., 6 feet.

One mile intercollegiate relay—Won by Princeton; second, Massachusetts Institute of Technology. Time—3m. 30s.

Browns and Cardinals All Signed or in Line; New York Clubs Suffer

Giants in Particular Will Be Wrecked If Three Crack Pitchers and Dave Bancroft Are Not Signed.

By Herman Wecke.

With the Cardinals already on the way and the early squad of the Browns scheduled to depart for the Mobile training camp tomorrow morning, the baseball season for St. Louis is officially open. For the next seven weeks, the veterans, as well as the rookies, will go through the paces in the South to get into condition for the 1923 campaign.

During the stay in the South both managers will have tasks confronting them. The Cardinals, who had plenty of tough luck in 1922, have started in early, as Manager Branch Rickey will be unable to join his athletes, because of a recent appendicitis operation. During his absence Burt Shotton will be in charge of the party.

The tasks of the Cardinal management are numerous. The club needs pitchers, a shortstop, and the outfield is not certain.

Lee Fohl's chief duty will be to strengthen third base and bolster the pitching staff.

No Local Players Holding Out.

As regards holdouts both St. Louis clubs have been fortunate. In spite of the fact that the Browns finished but one game behind the pennant-winning Yankees, Business Manager Bob Quinn has had no great task in getting the athletes into line. Only one regular is at present out of the fold: Kenny Williams, the slugging outfielder.

Four Cardinals are unsigned — Clyde Barfoot, one of Rickey's most effective relief flingers a year ago; Les Mann, outfielder; Hy Myers, newly acquired former Brooklyn gardener, and Pitcher Fred Toney, who is not yet reinstated.

However, none of these players is scheduled to join the Bradentown troupe until the second squad reports.

Local teams have been more fortunate than several others—notably the two pennant winners of 1922.

The world's champion Giants, for instance, have five members of the pitching staff unsigned. They are Jack Scott and Art Nehf, heroes in the last world series; Bill Ryan, the most efficient flinger in the Heydler circuit a year ago; Virgil Barnes and Jack Bentley, the $65,000 beauty from Baltimore. It also is reported that Frank Snyder and Earl Smith, catchers; Dave Bancroft and John Rawlings, infielders, are holdouts.

Many of the Yankee stars also are unsigned. Whether any are real holdouts is not known.

MATERIAL FROM WHICH ST. LOUIS LEADERS HOPE TO MOLD FLAG WINNERS

Cardinals.

PITCHERS: Pfeffer, Doak, North, Haines, Barfoot, Pertica, Sell, Toney, Knight, Stuart, Wigington, Boone, Learn, Sullivan, righthanders; Sherdel, Dyer and Stiely, southpaws.

CATCHERS: Clemons, Ainsmith, McCurdy, McDermott.

INFIELDERS: Bottomly, Hornsby, Stock, Lavan, Freigau, Toporcer, Holm, Makin. (May be others.)

OUTFIELDERS: Myers, Flack, Smith, Mueller, Mann, Schultz, Blades and Gainer.

Browns.

PITCHERS: Shocker, Vangilder, Davis, Wright, Kolp, Thurston, Kraft, Root, Tatum, Donovan, Henry, King, Payne, Rich and Blaeholder, righthanders; Pruett, Bayne, Henry, Danforth and Elliott, southpaws.

CATCHERS: Severeid, Collins, Billings and Schulte.

INFIELDERS: Sisler, McManus, Gerber, Ellerbe, Foster, Austin, Simon, Ezzell, Robertson and Rice.

OUTFIELDERS: Tobin, Williams, Jacobson, Durst, Shorten, Bennett, Whaley and Vache.

"Chronic Holdouts" Roush and Schmidt Are Again Worrying Reds and Pirates

Then there are the two chronic members of the "Holdout League"—Ed Roush of the Reds and Walter Schmidt of the Pirates. Both athletes are needed by their clubs and will be welcomed with open arms if they come into the fold satisfied. Jake Daubert of the Reds, an important cog in the Moran machine; Walter Ruether, Brooklyn southpaw; Vic Aldridge, the Cubs' biggest winner a year ago; Nick Dumovich, a rookie pitcher with the Cubs; Zachary, the most effective southpaw in the A. L. this season, and Ruel, catcher, Washington, are also on the unsigned list.

To get back to the tasks of the two St. Louis managers. At the Cardinals' camp, where the youngsters are scheduled to hold the first practice of the season tomorrow afternoon, it will be necessary to find a man to play shortstop satisfactorily. Johnny Lavan, returned recently from a tour of the Orient, weighing more than he ever did and seemingly entirely recovered from the illness which handicapped him a year ago. But Lavan will have competition from "Specs" Toporcer, Freigau, Makin and Holm, three college youths. Without a doubt others will enter the race.

Center Position for Myers.

With the recent acquisition of Hy Myers in the trade with the Dodgers there is outfield material, but it will be up to the manager to use it to best advantage. Myers will probably start in center. Flack, if in condition, is almost sure to play right, with Jack Smith in left. Then there will be Blades, Schultz, Mueller, Mann and Gainer in the hunt for places.

A lot of improvement is needed as regards pitchers. There will be 18 flingers fighting for places. Bill Doak, the veteran spitballer, is one of the big question marks. Doak started in 1922 with six straight victories, but could not go through a contest at the close of the year. Lester Sell, the big Reading policeman, obtained from Syracuse, looks like the best bet among the newcomers. Others of whom much is expected are Knight, Stuart and Wigington. Then there is Fred Toney, the husky mountaineer, obtained from the Braves. Also Bill Pertica, who had such a poor 1922 season, and who is already at Bradentown in company with Hornsby and Ainsmith.

Vernon Clemons, Eddie Ainsmith and Harry McCurdy will probably be the catchers for the Cardinals this season. McCurdy will have to beat out a recruit named McDermott for the position.

When the Browns get down to practice at Mobile, Lee Fohl will have four players trying for the third base position. Two of them are holdovers from 1922. They are Frank Ellerbe and Eddie Foster. The others are Homer Ezzell and Sylvester Simon, minor leaguers, who come highly recommended, and who are expected to give the "old timers" a real battle for the job.

The other three positions on the Browns' infield will be well taken care of by George Sisler, Marty McManus and Walter Gerber, unless something unlooked for happens. It must be remembered that Sisler's injured shoulder is still giving him trouble. And there is no capable understudy for the Browns' star in case he is unable to start.

The outfield will without a doubt be manned by Williams, Jacobson and Tobin, although some high-class rookies, if minor league records mean anything, have been brought up. They are Bennett, Whaley and Vache. Then there is Rich, a person who can play in the meadows as well as pitch. Shorten and Durst, holdovers, will be on hand.

Hank Severeid and Pat Collins will be the regular catchers, with Josh Billings and Schulte, the St. Louis boy obtained from Moline, fighting it out for the third-string place.

The main task as regards pitchers will be to obtain a left-hander to help Hubert Pruett, who hurled such good ball a year ago. Three southpaws were brought up for trials. They are Dutch Henry, from Mobile; Dave Danforth, Tulsa, and Jim Elliott, Terre Haute. Then there is Billy Bayne, who proved such a failure a year ago.

For right-handers Lee Fohl will have Urban Shocker, Elam Vangilder, Dixie Davis, Ray Kolp and Wayne Wright, in addition to Hollis Thurston, the highly touted rookie from Salt Lake City, and nine others.

If the two managers are able to plug up the weak spots, then the

TITLEHOLDERS WILL AGAIN BE CRIPPLED

Halfback Nolan and Forward Bechtold Not Expected to Play—Visitors Own Great Record for Year.

In an effort to reach their final objective—a third entry into the national soccer final in as many years—the Scullins of St. Louis, present title holders, oppose the Arden (Pa.) eleven in the Western division final at High School Field this afternoon. To the winner of this contest goes the right of opposing the Eastern champion for the United States title.

It will be the seventh time since the opening of the present campaign that the Scullins have been called upon to defend the honors gained in the battle with the Todd eleven of Brooklyn here last March.

And as has been the case in a majority of the games in which the Tate Brady entry has competed, the team will be minus the services of one or more of its main cogs. Jimmy Nolan, the star left halfback, is definitely out of the running because of an injured knee. Then Bechtold's knee, injured in the clash with the Bricklayers, has not mended entirely, and his chances of playing are slight.

But handicaps of this sort are nothing new to the Scullins. They have been forced to hurdle them throughout the year. Danny Murphy will be at halfback and Tommy Mitchell on the forward line in place of the injured athletes.

Arden Has Great Record.

In Arden the Scullins oppose an eleven which, according to the registration lists of the U. S. F. A., is composed entirely of amateur players, and one that has on its roster many American born kickers. In fact, all but three of the regulars were born in the United States.

The visiting team comes here with a great record in cup play—one that stands out far more prominently than that of the national champions. The Arden team has a great booster in W. S. Haddock, treasurer of the U. S. F. A., who asserts it is the best aggregation ever sent out of Pennsylvania, not even excepting the famous Bethlehem team of several seasons ago. Haddock will be here for the game.

The Pennsylvanians have played seven championship games this season, and in that time has scored 17 goals, whereas the opposition has been held to but four. In the last quartet of battles for the team, the opponents have been unable to break through the defense for a single point. The Scullins also have scored 17 goals in their six clashes. But the "other fellow" has been able to bang 10 into the net.

The season's records of the rivals:

SCULLINS.		ARDEN.
4—Ben Millers	3	2—Hamarville	[illegible]
4—W. Frankfort	3	2—Hamarville	1
0—Vespers	0	1—Gallatin	1

3—St. Leos	1	3—Kodak Pk. F. C.	0
3—Bricklayers	1	3—Lorraine, O.	0

One of the players of the Arden team is well known to St. Louis fans who were fortunate enough to see the Ben Miller-McKeesport game several years ago. This athlete is Robert Boyle, the goalie. It was in that contest in 1920 on a mud-covered field, that Boyle played the greatest game between the uprights ever seen here. That he is still quite a "goalie" is shown by the fact that only four games have been scored against him in title battles. This will be his fourth visit to St. Louis.

Jaap and Bookie Stars.

Another star for the eleven is Jaap, the center forward. Jaap was much sought after by Eastern professional clubs at the start of the season, but he would not listen to the financial inducements. Around Pittsburg they regard Bookie, another forward, as a probable member of the United States first Olympic soccer team in 1924. O'Donnell and Donnell, halfbacks, are also regarded as real stars.

Plenty of speed and fine combination play are the strongest points of the Arden team, according to reports reaching this city from Pittsburg. The eleven has already won the Western Penn championship and is a member of the Miners Soccer League. The eleven is still in the amateur cup competition of the U. S. F. A.

Akron Man Will Referee.

J. B. Storrie of Akron, O., will referee the game, which is scheduled to start at 2:30 o'clock. Thomas W. Cahill, U. S. F. A., secretary, will be the national body's official delegate. The admission fee will be $1. Gates will be opened at the park at 9 o'clock for those who wish to purchase tickets early.

Pat Moran Only N. L. Leader Confident of Crowding the Giants

NEW YORK, Feb. 24.

ALTHOUGH the vanguard of baseball players has started southward for their spring antics, there isn't a National League manager excepting Pat Moran of Cincinnati who evinces any enthusiasm over the possibilities of beating the Giants out in the race for the pennant in the coming season.

Most of the remaining managers of the National League are almost as enthusiastic about it as the Republican managers would be over the prospects of electing Uncle Joe Cannon to succeed Charley Murphy as the head of Tammy Hall.

Bill McKechnie, manager of Pittsburg, is optimistic enough to hope that he will have a little luck, and he sighs like a Romeo when he talks about it; but the rest of them feel and act like they had never heard of the Coue method of growing better and better every day.

What those others need is an introduction to the Nancy druggist—or a strong dash of armomatic spirits of ammonia.

Missouri Tigers Defeat Nebraska

Columbia Quint Turns Back Cornhuskers 39 to 23 in Hard-Fought Game.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

COLUMBIA, Mo., Feb. 24.—Missouri turned back Nebraska in a hard fought basketball game here tonight, 39 to 23. At half-time the Tigers were leading, 17 to 9, but twice in the first period the Huskers were ahead and early in the second they were close on the Tigers' heels, scoring seven points in that period before the Missourians again got into action.

Wheat was the scoring star of the game, with eight field goals, while Browning's floor work was the outstanding feature of Missouri's game. All of the Tiger first string, however, played a consistent game.

Riddlesburger's defensive work and the basket shooting of Warren and Usher stood out on Nebraska's side of the court.

Coach George Bond sent in almost an entire team of second-string men in the final minutes of the game. Coach Frank of Nebraska also used substitutes freely.

GIANTS AND YANKEES HAVE MANY HOLDOUTS AS CLUBS GO SOUTH

St. Louis teams should again be pennant contenders in 1923.

Close Race in American.

From present indications, the fight in the American League should be stiffer than ever this year. The Yankees will have a southpaw, something the team did not possess in 1922. Another thing, Babe Ruth and Bob Meusel will be on hand opening day, instead of starting May 15, as was the case in 1922.

Of the others, Detroit and Chicago seem to have strengthened more than rival clubs. The Tigers, with a good club in 1922, have added Del Pratt to play second and Rip Collins, a good right-hand pitcher, as well as Ray Francis, a southpaw. Then, the young flingers developed by Ty Cobb are expected to do better. Chief new assets for the White Sox are Willie Kamm, the $100,000 beauty from the coast, who will play third, and additional strength to the pitching staff.

Connie Mack may furnish the "dark horse." The lanky Athletic leader strengthened his infield by the addition of Sammy Hale. This will permit him to shift Jimmy Dykes back to second base. Hauser and Galloway are fixtures. But Connie needs pitchers, as Ed Rommel was his only consistent winner in 1922. He is banking on Naylor, Harris, Hasty and Heimach to come through.

Tris Speaker will have new talent at Cleveland, with Lutzke, third sacker; Myatt, catcher, and young pitchers the chief additions. Washington has a new manager but owns some mighty good material. Frank Chance has a mighty task on his hands at Boston. Many trades have been made and the Red Sox will probably show many new faces.

Holdouts Handicap Giants.

In the National, Cincinnati, Pittsburg and the Cardinals, if Manager Rickey is able to find the players needed to fill the gaps, are expected to furnish the opposition for the Giants. But to remain in the pennant fight, McGraw must satisfy his disgruntled players. And Cincinnati needs Roush and Daubert, while the Pirates' showing a year ago shows that Schmidt is needed, even though Gooch and Mattox have an added season's experience.

The Cubs have made several changes and if Bill Killefer gets a second and third basemen may have something to say about the flag in the Heydler circuit. It does not look as though the Superbas, Braves and Phillies have strengthened enough to give the other clubs a real battle.

Central Clinches High School Flag, Defeating Soldan

Midcity Team Wins by Score of 28-13, Its Seventh Successive Victory.

Central High School's basket ball team, coached by "Doc" Callan, clinched the Interscholastic League championship by defeating Soldan, 28 to 13, at Cleveland High auditorium yesterday afternoon.

In the night game McKinley won from Yeatman by a close score of 20 to 18.

Central has wone seven and lost none for the season. It has one game still to play, but the outcome of the contest cannot affect the standing of the team. Cleveland, Central's nearest competitor for the championship, has won 4 games and lost 2.

A slight indisposition on the part of Hebberger, star left forward, affected Central's game yesterday. Whereas in previous games he has been a virtual sensation in shooting from the field, he was quite helpless yesterday and failed to register a single point. The five-man defense of Soldan and Rawden's work, particularly, had some bearing on the poor showing of Hebberger.

Cristal, leader of the league in field basket shooting, was in form. He dropped seven shots through the hoop.

Central appeared to be devoting its attention to team play and passing rather than to amassing a great score. Soldan in the first half attempted to maintain a tight defense but gradually Central penetrated and scored nine points before Soldan counted one.

Soldan got two field goals in the first half, one by Shaw and the other by Wackher. The score at the end of the half was 16 to 6. In the second period Coach Callan withdrew his regulars when the score stood at 28 to 11.

The Central Seconds scored their seventh consecutive victory by defeating the Soldan Seconds, 15 to 12.

McKinley Defeats Yeatman.

McKinley's quintet had to come from behind to defeat Yeatman in the evening game, score 20 to 18. At half time Yeatman was leading, 13 to 11, notwithstanding one of its stars, Hannegan, had been removed from the game for four personal fouls.

McKinley, shortly after the second half began, also suffered the loss of its leading player, Syberg, for a similar reason.

Hooch Clause in Contracts Said To Be Cause of Baseball Hold Club Owners Seek to Protect Players From Bootleggers' by Binding Stars to Abstain or Pay Heavy Fines for Breaking Training.

By John B. Foster.

(Copyright, 1923.)

NEW YORK, Feb. 24.—Not in all the history of baseball so many contracts been sent to players on clubs that with clauses written into the documents providing for ample punishment, if said players do not live up to the rules of the club.

And it was learned today that indirectly Mr. Volstead and directly the bootleggers are the cause of it all.

"Yes," said a major league owner to the writer today, "there isn't any use quibbling over words. Bootleggers caused it all. As soon as a team gets into a city that isn't the home town the players find lurking about the lobby a lot of chaps who think the home folks will think a lot more of them if they are seen hobnobbing with the baseball players, and the worst of it is that most of these fellows have ready access to hooch in seemingly unlimited quantities.

Bootleggers Lure Players.

"These parasites tell the players with a great show of secrecy that they know where the best in alcoholic lines can be had, and that one additional player can be let in on the deal. So much mystery is woven into the affair that the players think they are bigger than a visiting politician, and, therefore, they fall hard for the invitation.

"Of course, we all know that an excess of alcohol is never best for an athlete; but the liquid lava that is served here and there to ball players has nearly wrecked some of the best and most expensive stomachs."

It is well known that went to pieces two years ago because the players developed a that couldn't be quenched.

Therefore, the newly "hooch clause" in the originated.

Neale Played 7 Years In Big League With One Good Eye, Doctor Says

PARKERSBURG, W. Va., Feb. 24.

EARL (GREASY) NEALE, former big league baseball player, and now football coach of the University of Virginia, played seven years in the National League with defective eyesight, according to an eye specialist. According to this specialist, Neale's left eye is useless without the use of glasses which he is now wearing.

When Neale was informed of the condition of his left eye he told the examining physician: "I have been playing ball with these eyes for 12 years," and received the following reply:

"You have not—you have been playing with only one of them."

St. Louis Applies For Municipal Tennis Tourney

National Event Virtually Assured Mound City by Officials.

ST. LOUIS WON CUP

Abeken Will Return Trophy to Stimulate Competition.

By Davison Obear.

St. Louis has made application for the National Municipal Tennis Championship for this year. The bid for the park event has been forwarded direct to the executive committee of the United States Lawn Tennis Association, under whose auspices the tournament will be played.

According to reports from prominent tennis officials in the East St. Louis has an excellent chance of obtaining the first national tournament for public park tennis players to be conducted by the national governing body of the game. Chicago and Philadelphia are said to have also applied for the event, but St. Louis will likely have first choice on account of its well organized municipal tennis association.

For a number of years the National Tennis Association has had a committee on the development of municipal tennis. George W. Wightman of Boston is the present chairman of this committee, which has been gathering data on tennis in the public parks of the nation. In addition to promoting tournaments in the various cities, members of the committee have urged the proper officials to improve present equipment and to build more courts in the parks.

St. Louis Holds Cup.

When the National Municipal Recreation Federation was organized eight years ago the United States Lawn Tennis Association donated a large up for tennis competition between the champions of the public parks. In each of the four years that the Federation conducted tournaments, St. Louis players were returned the final winners. Players from New York, Chicago, Kansas City, Cincinnati, Hartford and other cities took part.

The municipal trophy is now held by St. Louis, and as the Federation is no longer in existence, it is, therefore, out of competition. However, the Municipal Athletic Association of this city has offered to return it to the United States Association, according to Rodowe Abeken, recreation director of the Park Department.

"We have returned the trophy with the hope that it will be used for one of the events in the National Municipal championship," said Abeken recently. "As to the tournament itself if St. Louis secures it I will confer with Dwight F. Davis, president of the United States Lawn Tennis Association, relative to the details of conducting the event.

"The Municipal Athletic Association will actively support all plans proposed by Mr. Davis and the Executive Committee of the United States body. Our application for the National Municipal event will be voted on at a meeting of the governing body of the National Tennis Association, which takes place in New York on March 17.

Interest Increasing.

"If the tournament is played here we will invite the park tennis champions of other cities to compete in order to assure a large and representative entry."

The interest in tennis in the public parks has shown a gradual increase since 1919. In that year there were 20,977 permits issued for play on the municipal courts. A total of 151,381 games were played in 1919. As figured by the Park Department a game is equivalent to each hour or fraction thereof under the permit registration.

Figures for the year ending April 1 will, of course, not be available until after that time, but the record will surpass that of the previous year. Permits for the period ending April 1, 1922, totaled 30,978. There were 229,529 games played in the principal parks during that time. A total of 32,823 tennis permits were issued during the period from April 1, 1922, until Feb. 20, 1923. The number of games is likely to reach nearly 250,000, which, with that of parks not under the supervision of the Park Department, will bring the total to 300,000 for the year.

LAJOIE DID NOT BAT UNDER .400 FOR THE ENTIRE 1901 CAMPAIGN

Larry Lajoie holds a unique batting record, something for the crack hitters to shoot at.

Larry finished with an average better than .400 in 1901. Other batters have walloped the ball for .408 or better averages, so there is nothing unusual in the high mark Larry made.

The unusual feature of Larry's batting during the 1901 season was that in making his mark of better than .400 he never once fell below that average during the entire campaign.

That is certainly a mark of consistent work at the bat. Larry was always that style batter, slumps in hitting were a rarity with him.

Short Game Most Important in Golf, Writes Champion Sarazen

Player at His Best When Feeling Fresh and Confident — Titleholder Asserts There Was Never Much Doubt in His Mind About Outcome of Professional Tournament.

By Gene Sarazen,
World's Champion Golfer.
(Copyright, 1923.)

Between the time of the national open championship and the professional championship, I played a number of exhibition matches. I was playing quite well—better, in fact, after the first week following my victory in the open, than I ever played before, because I now had the confidence to go with my game. Consequently, as I look back over the season's play, it is not greatly surprising to me that I won the professional title also.

GENE SARAZEN.

There was never much doubt in my mind about the outcome. I didn't give much thought as to whom I was to meet, nor was I concerned about the results of the matches. I simply went out, day after day, during that week in August at Oakmont, and played whoever my opponent happened to be.

In the third round I met Jock Hutchison, and this was by far the hardest match of all during that tournament.

I can easily understand why Hutchison is such a marvelous golfer. He is plugging all the time—no matter how the going is. We had quite a thrilling match, which ended in my favor after I had been fortunate enough to get four "birdies" in a row on the last four holes.

After this match, I was more confident than ever that I would win because I knew that no golfer in the game fights harder than Hutchison and because I also knew that Jock had played remarkably fine golf all the way. I defeated Emmet French in the final round for victory.

Short Game Is Important.

Since winning these two titles, I have been asked a number of times which shots are most needed to win. My reply is immediately the short game.

Of course, one has to have a golf swing and the ability to play the shots up to the green.

All of the leading professionals and amateurs have this ability. The first 10 or 15 players in this country are practically on a par. Consequently, a man who is playing those short approaches well and who is putting in good form, is likely to be the winner.

It was my short game that enabled me to win the professional title. Hutchison and several of the others played fully as well as I did up to the green, but during that week, I was deadly on by chip shot and putting finely.

You generally play your short game well when you are feeling fresh and confident; the keener you are for the game the more likely you are to play your approaches accurately.

You never saw any golfer who was fatigued or lacking in confidence, play a good short game.

In playing the chip shot it is well to keep in mind that you must always be up to the hole.

Always "Hit the Ball."

"Hit the ball!" is a good maxim to adopt for every shot. You have probably seen golfers hit their approaches timidly and then take three putts.

If your short game is ragged you are apt to lose your confidence and to go timid. There is nothing like being up to the hole or above it on all your short approaches. You will find that you will be getting very close to the pin if you make up your mind that you are going to be past the hole on that intricate little chip.

If you do succeed in laying your approaches up close, or past the hole consistently, you will find that your putting will be better.

Now, in this matter of putting, it is not necessary to be a great putter to win championships, but it is absolutely essential that you putt well and accurately if you are to outstrip the field, for no man ever won a championship who wasn't putting.

Walter Hagen is an extraordinary putter—the greatest in the game, I think. Hagen has a very delicate touch on the green, but he gets down an unusual number of long putts because he always makes it a point to be past the hole. To putt well, the ball must always be hit firmly and squarely; you can't dribble the ball into the cup.

Must Hit Ball Firmly.

Sometime when you go out to a medal play tournament, note the number of putts that are either short or curved off the line. The reason for that is that the putt has not been hit firmly.

Ted Ray, a great putter, makes it a point to hit the back of the cup on every putt, no matter how short it is. I know of no better rule to follow than that.

There are various styles of putting. Francis Ouimet and Jerry Travers, two of the best putters we ever had, stand squarely on both feet and swing the club in pendulum fashion.

I advocate the style that Hagen, Hutchison, Barnes and most of the professionals use—that is, of placing all of the weight on the left foot so that the body will not sway.

I hold my elbows close to my body and use only my wrists. If you get the body into the stroke, you are quite apt to be off the line on every putt.

But if you use only the waist in taking the club back—and, by the way, the club head should never be lifted more than 2 inches off the ground—you will be likely to hold the line to the cup.

It must be remembered also that the putting stroke must be on a level with the ground—not lifted and swung in a jerky manner.

I have discussed this part of the game at length because I feel that it is the most important of all departments of the game. You can recover from a poor shot through the fairway, but a missput is lost forever.

"BIG TEN" COUNCIL ENTERTAINS COACHES IN ST. LOUIS FRIDAY

The St. Louis Big Ten Council, starting as an athletic organization, is planning to enlarge its activities in the coming years, and to work for unification of school interests in other lines, according to H. C. Swartout, Michigan aluminus and president of the Council.

"The Big Ten Councils in St. Louis and other large cities of this part of the country are going to form the 'Middle Western bloc' in education," says Swartout. "We are going to demonstrate that this is the heart of the country, educationally, as it is politically.

"Athletic pre-eminence is an easy, visible standard, and we have taken that up first because it appeals so quickly to students, alumni and the public generally. The Western Conefrence has established its athletic pre-eminence. It has beaten the greatly advertised Eastern schools and forced them to modify their systems. They learned something and they still have something to learn.

"Next Friday, we are going to entertain the athletic directors and football coaches of the Western Conference at our banquet in the Chase Hotel. A year from now, we hope to bring the presidents of these schools together in St. Louis."

Boxing Board Uses New York, Wisconsin Laws

Discards Original Draft and Draws Up New Set of Regulations.

The City Boxing Commission has discarded a tentative set of regulations which it had all but adopted and instead has drawn up a new set of rules which are in effect a composite of the Wisconsin and New York State boxing regulations, it was announced yesterday.

The original draft of the new rules will be placed in the hands of a printer Monday and copies given to the press. A meeting of the commission will be held on Tuesday or Wednesday when an open discussion of the new regulations will be invited, after which those suggestions which are favorably received will be incorporated in the rules and the whole adopted as the rules upon which the commission will act.

"We have not yet received any official applications for dates from promoters," said Secretary Bob Newman yesterday, after the commission meeting. "Promoters are at liberty now, under the provisions of the charter, to apply to the License Commissioner for a license to operate. The Commissioner will then refer them to the boxing board, which will examine the promoter as to his qualifications and either grant or deny him the right of a license."

"We are working in perfect harmony and accord with the Police Department and we are trying to work fast in order that the boxing promoters may utilize the remaining winter days for indoor shows," added Newman.

A bill is now pending before the State Legislature, introduced by Representative John Manning of St. Louis, designed to legalize boxing in the State under a commission.

SAN ANTONIO YOUTH IS VICTOR IN INVITATION GOLF FINAL AT HOUSTON

By the Associated Press.

HOUSTON, Tex., Feb. 24.—Jack Tarrant, youthful golfer of San Antonio, today was the winner of the championship of the ninth midwinter invitation tournament at the Houston Country Club course when he defeated O. S. Carlton Jr. of Houston, equally youthful exponent of the mashie, niblic and driver, 5 up and 4 to play.

For the first 18 holes the match was close and part of the way a seesaw affair. Tarrant, however, finished the morning play, 2 up, on his opponent. At one time in the afternoon play he was 6 up.

Tarrant's ability to make recoveries, to use his iron clubs and his success on the putting greens accounts for his victory.

Throughout the entire match Carlton and Tarrant sent their tee shots better than 200 yards and never very far apart. Each man had several drives of 250 yards.

Children More Appreciative of Musical Classics as Result of Post-Dispatch Free Concerts

Wagner's Fire-Music From "Die Walkure" Played in Fourth Performance of Series by Symphony Orchestra.

The fourth of the Post-Dispatch's 1923 series of free Symphony concerts for school children, given yesterday morning in the Missouri Theater, was a success in just about every possible way.

The house, which holds 4000, was filled clear through the very topmost row of balcony seats. And the big audience was much more attentive than any previous audience at these concerts has been. The children even sat through Wagner's Fire Music from "Die Walkure," the fifth number, without more talking than an adult audience would do during a Wagner selection, and stayed with unanimity for the sixth and last number.

It was a time, too, for the children to get better acquainted with the personnel of the orchestra. First, they gave Conductor Rudolph Ganz a rousing welcome, because the day was his birthday. Music Supervisor Hahnel of the public schools told the children, just before the concert began, that Feb. 24 marked the anniversary of the conductor's first mundane appearance, which was in Zurich, Switzerland. He did not say in what year this occurred, but the best available records show that it was not so long ago—only 1877, in fact.

Then it developed that one of the orchestra, Ellis Levy, violinist and assistant concert master, was the composer of the third number on the program, "Woodland Sketches." The children liked the novelty of having the composer present, and they also liked "Woodland Sketches," with its delicate little tone pitcure of deer and hunters in the forest. So they required Levy to take several bows, after which another of his compositions, a creepy and shivery "Ghost Dance," was played.

Three more members of the orchestra were then introduced to the juvenile gathering. Michel Gusikoff, concert master, played Massenet's meditation from "Thais" as a violin solo, and H. Max Steindel, 'cellist, followed this with Saint-Saens' "The Swan." The harp had such a prominent and such a pleasing part, in the accompaniment to each of these, that Ganz presented the harpist, Mme. Ida Delledonne.

"Soon you will know us all," the conductor remarked as he completed these introductions.

For the children who attended, though not for the orchestra, this was the last concert of the series for the season. The fifth and final concert, on March 10, will be for negro children, and will be given in the Odeon. The use of the Missouri Theater had been given free of charge for the first four concerts.

"How many would like to have these concerts continued next year?" Supervisor Hahnel asked the children, in his introductory talk. From the volume of the response, it seemed that all did.

"I wish to thank Mr. Joseph Pulitzer of the Post-Dispatch, in your behalf, for these concerts," the supervisor continued. "Do you want me to thank him for you?" The children said they did.

Numbers on Program.

Halvorsen's "Entrance of the Boyars" was the first number. The Boyars were Russian aristocrats, and were dainty steppers, to judge from the first tinkling and string-picking strains. Some heavier characters entered soon afterward with the deeper instruments to record their arrival.

Schubert's First Movement from the "Unfinished" Symphony was next, and the conductor said, in presenting it, that he hoped the children would learn to whistle airs from Schubert as they had whistled Mendelssohn's "Spring Song" at a previous concert. The Levy compositions and the two solos, already mentioned, were the next numbers. The Offenbach Barcarolle, given as an encore, had a soft accompaniment in the humming of many children, familiar with the beautiful melody of the Venetian canals.

Another encore was Grainger's "Shepherd's Hey," an old English barn dance, where the Shepherds and presumably, the farmers' lasses accompanying them, nearly shake the barn down with their sturdy dancing.

Perhaps Conductor Ganz was just a little doubtful how the children would take the Wagner "Fire-Music," for Wagner is not, for general audiences, the most listenable of composers, nor is the "Fire Music" his most popular work. So, by way of holding out a bait to attention, he announced that Grieg's "In the Hall of the Mountain King" would be played after the Wagner number. The Greig selection is the reigning favorite with the children, as shown at previous concerts.

Exposition Music.

The last regular selection, Van der Stucken's "Louisiana" march, was composed for the opening of the Louisiana Purchase Exposition, held in St. Louis in 1904. "Hail Columbia" and "Dixie" are among the airs intermingled in it.

As the march was finished, the children stood, but not to leave the theater. "America" was printed on the program under the last number, and the orchestra stood with the children as one verse of the patriotic hymn was sung. "Let freedom ring," the verse ended. And it did ring.

Conductor Ganz declared the concert the most successful that had been given in the two seasons now nearly concluded. He commented on the greatly improved attention and orderliness, as being due to better undertsanding of the works played, and a developing taste for the best in music. "I wouldn't have ventured Wagner's 'Fire Music' last season," he remarked, "but now I think they were ready for it, and even liked it."

KLANSMAN REFUSES TO BREAK HIS OATH

Contempt Proceedings Planned Against Organizer in Kansas, Witness in Ouster Suit.

By the Associated Press.

TOPEKA, Kan., Feb. 24.—Opening of the hearing on the ouster petition brought by the State against the Ku Klux Klan today suddenly developed into a situation as to whether the klan oath supersedes that of a witness.

As a result of the refusal of H. H. Kitchen, a klan organizer, to divulge names on a membership petition, contempt of court proceedings will be started in the Supreme Court on Monday, according to Assistant Attorney-General John G. Egan, who conducted the State's side of the case.

The hearing was opened before S. M. Brewster, appointed as commissioner by the Supreme Court to hear the evidence. Kitchen, who has been in Topeka a week or more, announcing himself as an organizer of the klan, was the first witness called. Questioned by Attorney Egan, he admitted he was a klan organizer, and that a petition signed by persons desiring to join the klan had been submitted to him. Questioned further, he stated that the petition was in a safety box.

"Who has the key?" he was asked.

"One of the boys. Sometimes I have the petition days, and keep it locked up at night," Kitchen answered.

"What is the name of the person who has the key?"

"I have taken a solemn oath before God not to tell," was the cryptic answer.

In reply to orders by Commissioner Brewster, Kitchen maintained his attitude of secrecy, repeating that he had "made an oath before God" not to divulge the names of any member of the klan.

Following application in the Supreme Court to hold Kitchen guilty of contempt of court, Commissioner Brewster said the probable procedure would be for the court to set a time for a hearing, at which Kitchen would be given an opportunity to explain why he refused to answer.

Commissioner Brewster continued the hearing before him until March 1.

Carl McManus, who also says he is a klan organizer, and who was subpenaed as a witness, did not testify today. Attorney Egan desiring to bring the Kitchen refusal to a decision before the case goes further.

Kewanee All-steel Boilers Add value to any building

You will probably chuckle derisively when you read here that a Kewanee All-steel Boiler adds much to the renting and selling value of any large or small building. Yet, here's the statement and here's the fact.

The big reason why it adds to the renting value is that it affords absolute comfort to occupants. The reason why it adds to the selling value is that it operates at low cost and thus makes small inroads on the income.

In other words the Kewanee Boiler is an asset to any building and is in no sense a liability. That it lasts a life-time because of the superior quality of construction, is a big point to any thinking builder, buyer or operator.

"The proof of the pudding is the eating of it." Send to us for the proof, you builders of office buildings, school houses, hotels, warehouses, factories, churches, apartment buildings, etc. This whole country has definite proof to offer.

And the Old Man Behind the Boiler will be tickled pink to tell you boiler's inside history.

AIR FORCE RELIANCE AGAINST ATTACK, SAYS SIMS

ired Rear Admiral, Addressing War Veterans, Says Development of Plane Dooms Capital Ship.

KEEPING NAVY FOR DEFEAT, NOT VICTORY

Major-General Harries Assails Ambassador Houghton as Being Too Sympathetic With Germany.

Rear Admiral William S. Sims, retired, who commanded the American navy in European waters through the period of American participation in the war, declared in a banquet speech here last night that, because of present deficiencies in the naval establishment, the United States is "maintaining a navy for defeat, and not for victory."

His speech was delivered at the dinner of the St. Louis Chapter, Military Order of the World War, at Hotel Statler. He spoke humorously of the wartime Secretary of the Navy as "the late Josephus Daniels, of whom you may have heard," and related that Daniels, being spektical as to the power of aircraft in sea combat, offered to stand on the deck of a battleship under bombardment from airplanes.

"He didn't, and he's still living," Admiral Sims added. "He is the only naval official able continuously to spit to windward."

Admiral Sims related that the Ostfriesland, the captured German ship on which Daniels was willing to stand, was bombarded and destroyed with 2000-pound bombs, whereas aircraft can now carry 8000 and even 10,000 pounds for bombing purposes. His conclusion was that an enemy fleet can never again approach a coast defended by an airplane force greater than the attacking fleet can carry with it.

"Bombs Don't Need to Hit Ships."

"A fleet with 10 airplane carriers can have perhaps 700 airplanes," he said, "and a country that has 2000 airplanes need not worry about an attack. Even time is not a factor. We could let an enemy take Montauk Point and then, if we had enough aircraft, we could advertise excursions to see the enemy fleet destroyed. They can't get away, and the bombs don't need to strike them. The size of bombs which can be carried now will destroy ships if dropped near them."

Admiral Sims declared that "the vaunted capital ship is dead," though he said it was hard for naval officials to admit this. He said an airplane carrier fleet, which could keep out of the range of a battleship fleet easily, could send planes over at its leisure and destroy the battleships.

No Defense Against Aircraft.

He said there was no defense against aircraft, and that on land, where instruments of precision can be used, the ratio of shots to hits was 1200 to 1 or more, while such instruments cannot be used at sea.

As in his speech of a little more than a year ago here, Admiral Sims told of the importance of submarines, and said that hereafter any country with an effective submarine fleet would be able to keep a hostile fleet away from its coast. "No power will be able to blockade our coast if we have an adequate equipment of submarines—even a combination of all the navies of the world could not do it—also, we can't go out and attack a country that is protected by submarines. A South American country with submarines could keep the British fleet away."

Admiral Sims, recalling the recent bbservance of Washington's birthday, took as his topic "Washington and Our First Line of Defense." He said popular histories, which he called "hurrah histories," needed to be rewritten, and that the American people should know the truth about the difficulties which Washington and all American military commanders have encountered, and the losses and reverses the nation has suffered for lack of needed military preparations. He recommended Harris Dickson's "Unpopular History of the United States" to persons who wished to learn the facts in this regard.

"Washington, who told us to prepare for war, as one of the most effective means of preserving peace, would be appalled by our unwisdom and astounded by our unnecessary sacrifices, through disregard of his advice, in all our wars, including the great war," Admiral Sims said.

Would Not Blame Congress.

"The excuse given is our isolation. Some men in Congress argue that the nations have had enough of war, and couldn't be kicked into a war again. Who knows what Germany really thinks about that? Who knows whether Clemenceau was not right when he predicted a warlike alliance of Germany, Russia and Turkey? Who expected a war in 1914, or who expected, after it began, that we would go in?

"Don't blame Congress. Congressmen lie awake nights thinking what will please their constituents. They watch the editorials, too. When first-page news, like the Washington Conference, is printed, there must be editorials. If there is anyone competent to write them, so much the better, but in any case the editorials appear.

"At the time of the Washington Conference, one leading newspaper printed a correct map of the Pacific, and observed editorially, in connection, that the United States, holding Guam and the Philippines, controlled the strategy of the Pacific. A great deal of ignorance was condensed into that statement. Guam and the Philippines have no defenses which would make it possible for a fleet to leave them exposed to attack. Honolulu, which is beginning to be pretty well defended, is 3300 miles from Guam, and the Philippines are another thousand miles away. If we were at war in the Pacific, the enemy could seize Guam, and we couldn't go by it until we had retaken it.

"Hamstrung in Pacific."

"We are hamstrung in the Pacific. Why? Not because the President and his Cabinet don't understand the facts, but because an appropriation for this defensive work, which would cost about one-half as much as one battleship, couldn't get by the House of Representatives.

"If it is proposed to fortify Guam, the Congressmen watch the editorials, and when the usual note of ridicule at the idea of spending millions on a little far-away island is sounded, the Congressmen decide they won't vote for it.

"We once sent the fleet to Guantanamo, on the south of Cuba, for maneuvers that could have been accomplished just as well at Pensacola, merely because it was necessary to spend some money on fortifying Guantanamo, and we knew that if some Congressman got up and said, 'Where the hell is Guantanamo?' it would be impossible to get anything done. So we put Guantanamo into the news, and when we asked for the money after that, we got it.

"I never expressed an opinion against the results of the Washington conference, though I have been quoted in ways that would give that impression. I have explained that the agreement for naval reduction was limited to two classes, battleships and airplane carriers, and that it did not apply to cruisers, submarines or destroyers. The other fellows wouldn't do it.

"Under the 5-5-3 ratio, Great Britain and Japan are keeping up their ratio, and have their naval establishments fully manned. We are not fully manned. We have about 70 per cent of what we ought to have, which means the same as it would mean to a football team to go into a game with 7 players.

"Navy for Defeat, Not Victory."

"You are today maintaining a navy for defeat, not for victory."

Admiral Sims presented his arguments for support of the merchant marine, on which he will speak before the Chamber of Commerce and the English-Speaking Union at luncheon in the Chamber of Commerce dining room tomorrow. He praised the British as "good sports," and told some stories dealing with British comprehension of American jokes.

Major-General George B. Duncan, commanding the Seventh Army Corps Area, with headquarters at Omaha, spoke before Admiral Sims. He read from the printed program the aims of the Military Order of the World War, to combat "Pacificism, Communism, Socialism, Unpreparedness and Disarmament," and said that these were manifesting themselves in various places, among which he mentioned Wisconsin, Minnesota and the State of Washington. He also mentioned concerted attacks on the National Guard in Arkansas and Tennessee.

Admiral Sims will be here through Tuesday. Following his speech at the Chamber of Commerce luncheon tomorrow, he will speak tomorrow night at the University Club, and Tuesday evening he will speak before the Men's Club of Christ Church Cathedral.

Harries Assails Ambassador.

Maj. Gen. George H. Harries, commander-in-chief of the Military Order of the World War, speaking at the dinner said:

"There is now no American military force in Germany. But we have an ambassador in Berlin (Alanson B. Houghton of New York), who weeps copious tears and descants on the horrible sufferings of poor, misunderstood Germany. It is comforting to feel that he will never involve us in any difficutly through developing any serious idea which is out of harmony with German policies."

Gen. Harries said the "pacifist mind, the pro-German mind and the mind that is no mind at all," are heaping up propaganda against France because she has done for herself what all the Allies should have done, in the invasion of the Ruhr. "France was driven into the Ruhr," he said. "We helped to drive her there, by refusing to use even moral suasion on Germany. We have sent over observers of European affairs who are like periscopes—a head used only for visual purposes. We walk behind the chairs and tell everybody how to play his hand, but we buy no chips.

"If we, above other nations, had not yielded to German entreaties for the armistice, the peace treaty would have been signed in Berlin. If we had consented to the three-power agreement, Germany would not have attempted her sneering policy of evasion.

"France went into the Ruhr unwillingly, but she has at least shown the Germans that they did not win the war. Let the dachshund yelp!"

Duke's Bride Will Wear Nottingham Lace Gown

Trousseau, Now Being Collected, Will Include Boudoir Wraps of Satin and Crepe de Chine

By Cable to the New York World and the Post-Dispatch.
(Copyright, 1923.)

LONDON, Feb. 24.—This season's debutantes and brides-to-be are keeping close watch on the details of Lady Elizabeth Bowes-Lyons' trousseau, the collection of which is now well under way. Her wedding gown will be composed largely of lace made in Nottingham factories. In this way she hopes to revive interest in an old British industry.

Part of the trousseau is now being made at her home by Lady Strathmore, her mother, by the latter's maid, and another old family servant. Among one of the first frocks selected by Lady Elizabeth is a lovely dress of fine Brussels lace made by one of the best known Paris designers. A wide scarf of the same lace also has been ordered.

She has already selected several boudoir wraps of satin and crepe de chine, trimed with Malines, filet, and Carrick macross lace. Malines lace adorns a robe of ivory tinted crepe de chine with short, wide sleeves.

Various Kinds of Trimmings.

In some cases white or pink Marabout is used as trimming instead of lace, and one creation of pale blue satin is trrimed with swansdown. Sometimes Rouleaux of the material used for the wraps take the place of other trimmings.

Most of the sets of underwear she has so far chosen are being developed in ivory white, pale shell pink, blue or champagne tones. A number of nightgowns and dressing jackets are made of ivory white satin. One night gown is of white crepe de chine finished with Malines lace, with a deep V-neck and long flowing sleeves. Another, decorated with Carrick Macross lace, is developed in pale pink crepe de chine and made with a yoke.

A white satin dressing jacket has a soft border of Marabout. There is a blue broche rest gown lined with ivory crepe, and another of shell pink crepe de chine with wing panels finished with fine scallops.

Also Sitting for Portraits.

Lady Elizabeth also has been busy sitting for portraits. Sargent has just finised a fine crayon sketch, and Mrs. W. Lee-Hankey is painting a miniature of her. Louis Roslyn has been commissioned by the Society of Natives of Dundee, now living in Torquay, to do a bust of Lady Elizabeth, which may afterward be presented to Dundee.

Many of Lady Elizabeth's wedding presents will take the form of old furniture, of which she already has a small collection. A cabinet given her by Queen Alexandra was of old English oak, and a joint present now being arranged for her from her girl friends by the Hon. Diamond Hardinge also will be furniture which Lady Elizabeth is to pick out herself.

A practical wedding gift was given to the Duke of York this week when he visited the British Industries Fair. It was a complete set of aluminum household utensils, presented by the British Aluminum Holloware Manufactruers' Association.

Grosvenor-Anthony Betrothal.

Society here is agog at the report that the engagement of Lady Ursula Grosvenor, the elder daughter of the Duke of Westminster, to Jack Anthony, famous steeplechase jockey, will be formally announced soon. Lady Ursula just came of age this week.

This romance is said to be the outcome of a mutual love for horses and riding. She has been hunting a great deal in Cheshire this season, and Anthony, who originally was a "gentleman jockey," is now fulfilling his usual professional engagements. He has ridden winners in three grand nationals, the classic English steeplechase, the first time when he was only 12, and he now receives big fees for his services. He is 33 years old.

Lady Ursula, who is the Duke's daughter by his first wife, formerly Miss Constance Cornwallis-West, is extremely pretty, tall and slender, with lovely fair hair.

Son of Horse Breeder.

Anthony's father was a horse breeder in South Wales, and Jack was one of a family of 12. He started riding his father's horses at local meetings there as an amateur, and has been a professional for only three years. He is scheduled to ride Forewarned, the present favorite for the coming Grand National.

The Duke of Westminster is one of the richest of the land-owning Peers, and there is considerable speculation regarding the amount of Lady Ursula's coming marriage portion if the Duke is entirely satisfied with the match.

Lady Hardinge, wife of Sir Arthur Hardinge, is the latest titled woman to enter business here. She is now running the American soda fountain at Duke's, Richmond, for the nightly dances there.

SAYS DOCTOR SOLD HIS DRUG STOCK TO STATE PRISON

Secretary of Penitentiary Board Testifies Before Senate Committee Investigating State Departments.

By the Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Feb. 24.—When Dr. J. A. Waterman of Breckinridge, Caldwell County, was appointed physician to the State penitentiary here, he sold his private stock of drugs to the institution for $192, Walter T. Sloat, secretary to the State Prison Board, testified today before a Senate committee investigating conduct of certain departments of the State government.

Senator Farris, chairman of the commititee, endeavored by questioning to ascertain from Sloat whether this stock of drugs had been handled through the Merrell Drug Co. of St. Louis by Waterman and billed by it to the penitentiary, but Sloat said he did not know as to that, except that Dr. Waterman had been paid directly.

Dr. Waterman also was State Prison Physician under former Governor Hadley.

Whether employes of the State Auditor's office or their relatives had purchased articles from mail order houses with stamps, also was the theme of an inquiry by Farris, directed at William Kruse, chief clerk to State Auditor Hackmann.

Questions as to Stamps.

"Was Mrs. William Goecher of 318 West McCarty street ever an employe of the Auditor's office?" Farris asked of Kruse. No answer had been recorded when Farris propounded the next question.

"Well, was Alva A. Curtis a clerk in your office?" "No. We have a Clarence W. Curtis and we did have a Roy E. Curtis, who came in 1917, and Mrs. C. W. Curtis was there for a short time," Kruse responded.

"Do you know anything about Alva A. Curtis sending, in April, 1919, $7.46 in stamps to Montgomery, Ward & Co. for purchases?" Kruse replied in the negative.

"Do you know anything about an investigation in the Auditor's office about the same person sending $17.50 in stamps on May 27, 1919, at which time 50 stamps of 5-cent denomination and 250 of 6-cent size were sent?" Kruse said he knew of no such investigation.

"Do you know anything about the same Curtis sending $15 in 200 6-cent stamps and 100 8-cent stamps in December, 1918, or $10 in April, 1919, in 100 5-cent and 50 10-cent stamps?" Kruse replied in the negative.

While Farris was examining memorandum in preparation for the next question, Kruse remarked in a sort of aside: "I think Roy's wife's name was Alva, but I am not sure."

"You have a W. C. Robertson in your office, have you not?" Farris inquired, and was answered in the affirmative.

"Do you know anything about a Mrs. W. C. Robertson, who then lived at 600 Broadway, Jefferson City, sending $9.61 in stamps to Montgomery Ward?" to which Kruse said, "No, sir."

'You don't know anything about an investigation in the Auditor's office by the Government?" "No, sir," replied the Auditor's chief clerk.

"Well, then, do you know anything about William Kruse, Box 33, sending $5.55 in stamps to Montgomery Ward in October, 1919, at Kansas City?"

"I don't remember; nobody ever said anything to me about such a transaction and I may or may not have," said Kruse.

Later Senator Irwin, a member of the committee, asked of Kruse, "You or your wife never got any stamps from the Auditor's office, did you?" to which Kruse said, "No, sir."

Increase in Stamp Account

Farris stated that the Auditor's stamp account in 1917 had been $700; in 1918, $851.68; in 1919, $1654, and in 1920, $2900, asking Kruse if he knew of any reason for an increase whereby that account should be multiplied four times in four years. Kruse said that the postage requirements of the office had been much heavier because of the income tax, which was enacted in 1917.

A. D. Reid of St. Louis, traffic manager for the Merrell Drug Co., was before the committee. He was questioned about the Waterman drug transaction with the State penitentiary, but knew nothing of the circumstances.

Kruse was asked in detail about the circumstances surrounding three drafts for a total of $7680.82, drawn in favor of State Hospital for the Insane No. 3, at Nevada, in 1921, by the State Treasurer, which were totaled as $8680.82, or $1000 too much, and a warrant for that amount issued by the Auditor's office. The error was found and corrected in January of this year. Kruse said the error was one merely of bookkeeping, in the Treasurer's office, and that the money never had left the State treasury.

The next session of the hearing will be held Monday morning.

THE FOURTH OF A SERIES OF LECTURES on social service work will be given Thursday night by the Rev. M. Stritch of the faculty of St. Louis University in the law school auditorium, 3642 Lindell boulevard. No admission is charged.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Feb. 24.—An attempt by Representative Whitaker of Hickory County to amend Representative Roney's bill to abolish high school fraternities and sororities, to make it include colleges and universities, was defeated in the House this afternoon.

Roney defended fraternities at the colleges, but said he considered them out of place in high schools. He said that if Whitaker's amendment was adopted it would kill the bill. The measure was ordered engrossed.

Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Feb. 24.—In the election yesterday of Senator Frank H. Farris of Rolla to the chairmanship of the Democratic State Committee to succeed William L. Igoe, the unreconciled anti-Reed Democrats of Missouri took the first official step looking to the 1924 Missouri campaign. Their undisguised purpose was to prevent Senator Reed from controlling the party organization through the period of selecting delegates to the next Democratic nominational convention.

The Reed condidate, Oscar Hackworth of Piedmont, who was chairman of executive committee of the party organization through the last campaign, was decisively beaten, his supporters being able to muster only nine votes for him when 17 were needed to elect.

H. L. Terry of Sedalia was elected vice chairman of the committee. He supported Senator Reed in the primary last year.

Farris Critic of Reed.

In the selection of Farris the Democrats have chosen a bitter critic of Reed. It was Farris who led the revolt of Missouri legislators in 1919, more than 25 following Farris' lead in departing from the chamber of the House of Representatives when Reed was delivering a speech of denunciation of President Wilson and opposing adoption of the League of Nations.

In the last primary campaign Farris, although a candidate for State Senator, left his district and made an active campaign against Reed in St. Louis and in other parts of the State. Farris is known throughout Missouri as one of the strongest of the anti-Reed element, and as one of the stanchest supporters of Woodrow Wilson, and it is doubtful if the committee could have found a chairman who would have been as objectionable to Reed and the Reed clique.

While the anti-Reed forces insist they do not take very seriously the prospect that Reed will be a real contender for the nomination for President, they profess a belief that he will seek to control the selection of delegates from Missouri with the idea of using them in a deal with William R. Hearst and other Eastern interests in the selection of a nominee, and they are determined that the delegates shall be chosen from that element of the party opposed to Reed.

Report as to Reed.

In connection with the possible candidacy of Reed, the word has been circulated among Missouri Democratic politicians that Hearst will have another candidate, and that Reed will not be in the running.

The Reed men picked Hackworth, whose political mentor is Congressman Harry B. Hawes of the Eleventh St. Louis district, for the chairmanship. Igoe's resignation was not presented to the committee until it was believed that the stage had been set for Hackworth's election. However, when it was realized at a meeting of the committee in St. Louis three weeks ago that the country delegates would not support Hackworth, Igoe's resignation was temporarily withdrawn, and the election was postponed until today.

Hackworth came to Jefferson City Thursday in the belief that he would receive 17 of the 32 votes in the committee. It was learned as the committeemen arrived that several upon whom Hackworth was counting would not vote for him because of his Reed connections. Notwithstanding this, Hackworth thought he would pick up enough of the doubtful delegates to put him over, and continued in this belief until the Farris strength began growing last night and particularly when he learned that three St. Louis committeemen, two of them representing Hawes' district, would vote for Farris on personal grounds. These were John F. Byrne and John Orell.

Result of First Ballot.

When the committee met Farris was confident he had 20 votes, but he too was mistaken, the first ballot giving him only 14, while Hackworth got nine. The nine others, one being unrepresented, were divided between former Lieutenant-Governor Crossley, Senator Painter and A. T. Dumm. A second ballot failed to show any gain for Farris and a recess was taken to give an opportunity for the strengthening of the Farris line.

Emerging from the meeting room, Farris severely denounced Dumm and Everett Reeves of Caruthersville, who had not voted for him. He told them he had taken up the fight against Reed when a fighter was needed and that he was "through with them." After half hour of milling, the committeemen returned to the room and on motion of Dumm, Farris was elected by acclamation.

Party Deficit Discussed.

Farris then told the committee that he would endeavor to keep down factionalism, a customary remark for a newly elected chairman, and that his effort would be to strengthen the party in every way possible. He said the Democratic party stood for economy in government and lower taxes, and "without closing a school house."

There was some discussion of plans for raising $26,000 to meet the indebtedness of the committee remaining from the 1920 campaign, and Farris urged the members of the committee to get busy and raise the money. He pledged that his district, the sixteenth, would raise $2000.

The members of the Women's State Committee sat with the men's committee, but had no voice in the selection of a chairman. At the beginning of the meeting, Mrs. W. E. Ewing of Odessa, chairman of the Women's Committee, said the women did not expect to vote with the members of the State Committee, but thanked them for inviting them to attend the meeting. In view of the fact that they had not been invited to sit with the committee, the women took the position that they had played very good politics. After her speech none of the men could nerve themselves to move to exclude the women.

Mrs. Ewing asked the members of the committee individually and collectively to support the measure pending in the Legislature to double the size of the State Committee and to give the women an equal number of representatives with the men on the committee. No motion to this effect was made in the committee.

Bill Urged by Women.

After the adjournment of the meeting, the women met with Senator Kinney, chairman of the Senate Committee on Elections, which has been suppressing a report on the bill for equal representation, but were unable to obtain from Kinney any promise of favorable action on the measure. It is generally conceded, even by the women, that the equal representation measure, known as the 50-50 bill, will not receive a favorable report, at least not until it is too late for it passage.

CHANGE IN TRAIN BULLETIN SERVICE AT UNION STATION

Tracks on Which Trains Enter Shed No Longer Posted Until Trains Are in Yards.

Bulletin service in the midway of Union Station which shows the time of the arrival of trains, the track upon which they enter and whether they are late or on time, has undergone a change as a result of a recent complaint by Attorney-General Barrett that the bulletin system was at variance with the information bureau.

Under the new system the track upon which the train enters the station is not posted until the train has arrived in the yards. This is about five or ten minutes before passengers are discharged.

Under the old system it was the practice to post the name of the train, the time of its arrival and the track number a considerable length of time in advance of its actual entry into the yards. Frequently lateness of the train necessitated a change from the track designated to another track and resulted in confusion. Telephone calls to the information bureau resulted in receiving information which was correct at the time, but when the rived at the station, he such instances that the train tering the station on another This caused many persons arrivals.

Terminal Railroad Association officials said yesterday that the manner of posting arrivals eliminate all confusion.

Germany Must Demonstrate Intention to Keep Her Word, Maximilian Harden Writes

"There Can Be No Improvement in Situation Until Payment Has Been Made on Reparations Obligation."

By Maximilian Harden,
The Noted German Publicist.

Special Cable Dispatch to the Post-Dispatch. Copyright, 1923.

BERLIN, Feb. 24.—Thirty-three printing establishments now are at work making money for the German state. It is said all to be official. But probably only the omniscent mummy, Pharaoh Tutankhamen, knows how many others are secretly enjoying the same pastime. This, judging by the repeated warnings in the public press against specific series of note issues, which suggests the business of uttering bogus currency still is a profitable pastime.

The official presses, operating night and day, are delivering between sixty and seventy billion marks to the Reichsbank, but it is expected the output soon will reach 125,000,000,000. Still, as in the Kaiser's time, these marks bear the promise to pay to bearer the number of "marks" stated thereon. Despite the enormous issue there also is a scarcity and one wonders whether train loads of these worthless marks may not have been sent to the Ruhr to secure wages and to repay the bales of personal currency issued there by the great industrial firms.

Efforts at Stabilization.

Prices for everything here are above all reason. No wonder, therefore, that these billions of new currency disappear so rapidly. The German Government, which has not paid any of its obligations since August, has thrown large accumulations of foreign currency onto the market, besides buying from the victors in the war and from the neutrals more than the former themselves have, in an effort to produce a much desired stabilization. This in the face of the advice of such eminent financiers as Max Warburg, Mendelsohn and Melchior, who say this hope cannot be realized. For the moment they have brought the exchange down from 50,000 for a dollar to 20,000, thus enabling them to purchase relatively cheap coal, cotton, copper and foodstuffs.

But with the dollar went down the price of all stocks to figures which represent less than one-third of their real pre-war value.

Millions of persons who until recently have been able to meet their daily expenses naturally now are furious owing to the shrinkage in the price of their security holdings. The prices of the actual necessities of life have fallen little, if at all, the apparent reductions being confined to Government transactions. Dealers insist that they were compelled to purchase at high prices and cannot sell at any reduction at this time.

Situation Grows Worse.

The situation throughout the country steadily grows worse. It is a simple fact that the great portion of German industries are unable longer to compete owing to the exchange situation and plants gradually are shutting down everywhere. Should the Ruhr blockade become real there must be a terrible shortage of coal, because the little bit of British fuel that has been brought in cost too much to be in reach of ordinary industry. The result will be complete crippling of German industry.

Still officialdom endeavors to continue to compel the public to believe that the artificial inflation of the mark is a "war measure" which will have a very perceptible effect in the Ruhr. It reminds of the old gamble of the Kaiser and his followers in 1914. The proposed gold loan, which is supposed to be an investment and not to reduce the real value of savings of those who invest, comes rather late. Only a few discontented people who have fluid cash or are unable to make immense profits otherwise will take a chance in this proposition, which offers only 6 per cent interest. They will prefer to buy dollars or good industrial shares, from which they will hope to garner enormous dividends.

No country can hope for salvation either through the wand of a wizard or propaganda so far as its currency is concerned, so long as it encourages an immense number of drones in its official class, does not exact from its wealthy classes their true proportion of taxation, prints a billion in new currency every few days, when coal is short cuts down the public schools and cuts out many trains while at the same time permitting movies to be shown three times a day and wastes much electric power in dance halls, restaurants and saloons.

There will be no permanent improvement until a payment has been made on the reparation obligations to demonstrate to the world that Germany will keep her word and an agreement is reached with France whereby there will be a reasonable exploitation of the natural resources existing between the Scheldt and the Ruhr. But as intervention by outside Governments is withheld such a solution seems very far away.

World's Affairs Not So Bad As They Seem, Is View of Rumanian Minister to U.S.

"What Will It All Matter 5000 Years Hence?" Is Philosophical Viewpoint From Which Prince Bibesco Looks Out on Today's Turmoil

Post-Dispatch Bureau,
20 Wyatt Bldg.
WASHINGTON, Feb. 24.

In these days of international gloom when the statesmen of Europe discuss the possibility of another Thirty Years' War as if it were a 30 days' outing, an optimistic diplomat is almost a contradiction in terms. Prince Antoine Bibesco, the Rumanian Minister at Washington, is a diplomat. He is also an optimist. At a moment when all seem to think that things could hardly be much worse than they are he believes that things are not nearly so bad as they seem.

How does he manage to arrive at this comfortable belief? To be sure, not by way of lack of sophistication. Prince Bibesco is nothing if not sophisticated. First of all, he is a diplomat by calling, and lack of sophistication is not a quality of a diplomat's defects. Then he is a Rumanian born in France, which is about the most sophisticated combination as far as national antecedents go. Which brings us to another paradox of his paradoxical personality.

Antoine Bibesco bears one of the greatest names in his country's history. His grandfather was a ruling Prince of Wallachia, one of the two principalities of which the modern Kingdom of Rumania was composed. On the paternal side he traces his descent to the princely house of Brancovan, one of the most illustrious in the history of Southeastern Europe. His maternal grandfather, the Premier Manolake Kostake Epureano, was one of the founders of the modern Rumanian state. Yet this Rumanian of Rumanians is also a Frenchman. He was born and reared in France; his culture is French; he speaks French with his English wife—who is, by the way, Elizabeth Asquith, Margot's brilliant daughter; he has written books in French, also a play, called "Le Jaloux," which a few years ago was produced in Paris and then taken on a European tour by the great French actress, Suzanne Despres. Rumanians say he speaks Rumanian with a French accent (in which, to be just, he does not stand alone, for cultured Rumanians usually contract a French accent early in life, just as cultured Englishmen acquire a Boston accent in the course of their higher education).

How He Gets View.

The Rumanian house of Bibesco occupies an important place in French life and literature. One might almost say that the house of Bibesco is a French cultural institution. The Minister's father wrote in French a story of his own father's reign, an important source work. His Uncle George was an eminent military historian who, among other things, wrote a good account of the ill-fated French campaign in Mexico under Napoleon III. A cousin, the Countess de Noailles, is one of the most distinguished of contemporary French poets. Another cousin, the Princess Marthe Bibesco, has published the memoirs of her grandmother, the Princess de Chimay, nee Pellapra, natural daughter of the great Napoleon. And Prince Antoine's mother, the Princess Helene, had one of the most brilliant literary salons of Paris in the last quarter of the nineteenth century. An erudite musician, she counted among her intimates Gounod, Reyer, Massanet, Saint-Saens, Paderwski and Lalo; also Rodin, Anatole France, Pierre Loti, Jules Lemaitre and a number of others. It was in these surroundings that Antoine Bibesco grew up a Frenchman and Rumanian rolled into one, withal a genuine European.

But to return to the paradox which furnishes the theme of this article—how does Antoine Bibesco, being a diplomat, contrive to be an optimist as well in this year of not so much grace 1923? By the simple trick (simple, that is, if you know how) of adopting what he calls the cosmic view. He refuses to judge current events from the elevation of the fifth floor of the Ritz-Carlton. It isn't elevated enough, he says. Betelgeuse would suit him better. His implied point is—what will it all matter 5000 years hence?

"The trouble with people is that they are trying to understand this world with the aid of history alone. They should consult geology and astronomy, too. If they did, they'd worry less. And even our reading of history is—well, rather superficial," he says. "We concentrate on the ephemeral. With all the excellence of newspapers (and there is no more sincere admirer of the press than I) it is very difficult for us to find out which is the really important news of the day.

"When, in 1902, the Wright brothers made their first six-minute flight, people refused to take them seriously. Learned articles were published to the effect that flying by heavier-than-air machines was a sheer impossibility. Then the world forgot about it. The front pages of the newspapers were monopolized by the eruption of Mont Pelee and the dresses worn by the ladies at the coronation of King Edward VII.

"Who remembers Mont Pelee today? The most important, by far, event of the year 1902 was that six-minute flight near Dayton, O. It has altered the course of world history.

"Today the newspapers are filled with accounts of the Lausanne conference. People are scared out of the quiet enjoyment of their breakfast eggs by all kinds of menaces—French menace, German menace, Turkish menace, Russian menace, Ruhr menace, Balkan menace. And a brief telegram from Dayton, O. (Dayton again!) escapes notice. It is about a Rumanian inventor (one newspaper even made a Russian out of him) working for the United States Government—Dr. de Bothezat, who has practically solved the problem of the helicopter. Now, the helicopter can do two things that the airplane cannot—it can rise vertically and it can hover.

"True, Bothezat stayed up only a few minutes with his helicopter. So did the Wright brothers at first.

"Those six minutes during which

Lloyd George Declares Hughes Pointed Way to Peace

Former British Premier Refers to Famous New Haven Speech as "A Momentous Pronouncement, Obviously Intended for Discussion by the Allies at the Paris Conference—Perhaps the Greatest, Perhaps the Last of the Neglected Opportunities Which Litter the Path of the Troublesome Question of Reparations."

By DAVID LLOYD GEORGE
Wartime Premier of Great Britain

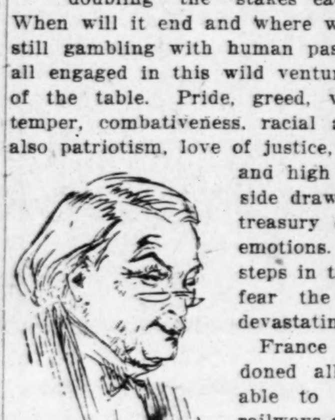
LONDON, Feb. 24.

THE French Government, having conspicuously failed to win its anticipated coup, is doubling the stakes each time it loses. When will it end and where will it end? It is still gambling with human passions. They are all engaged in this wild venture—on both sides of the table. Pride, greed, vanity, obstinacy, temper, combativeness, racial antagonisms; but also patriotism, love of justice, hatred of wrong and high courage. Each side draws from the same treasury of fiery human emotions. Unless someone steps in to induce a halt I fear the result will be devastating.



David Lloyd George

France has now abandoned all hope of being able to run the mines, railways and workshops of the Ruhr by military agencies. In these days you cannot shoot every worker who fails to excavate so many hundredweights of coal per diem, or who refuses to fill a wagon or drive a locomotive when and by whomsoever he is told to do so. She cannot provide the necessary complement of miners and railway men from outside to fill the vacancies created by sulky workers. And even if she could it would take many months ere they become sufficiently accustomed to their new conditions to work without peril to themselves.

So a new policy has been improvised. It is nothing less than a siege of Germany. Sixty millions of Germans are to be starved into surrender. That's a long business, as everyone knows who has been engaged on the difficult operations of strike breaking. We have often witnessed workers, with little support or sympathy from the rest of the community, hold out for weeks after their funds have been exhausted. In Germany all classes are united in resistance. The national pride fortifies endurance and incites to sacrifice, and the ports are still open. Meanwhile, incidents may happen, developments may occur which will create a situation that will baffle all the resources the invaders can command.

An Ill-Judged Enterprise

It is very little use jobbing backward. But there are many who are disposed to say that invasion of the Ruhr was bound to come and the sooner the safer. The Ruhr coal mines were the wild oats of reparation. Get it over quickly. The headache will bring repentance and France will then settle down to quiet life. That's the argument.

I must enter emphatic protest against this view. If this ill-judged enterprise had been put off for a few more months I do not believe any French Government would have embarked upon it. There is no French statesman of any standing who in his heart believes in its wisdom. Now that the credit of France is involved in its success they will all support it. But French opinion as a whole was moving with startling rapidity from this policy. The Parisian pulse was still feverish, but the provinces had completely calmed down. Vacancies occurring in the Senate and the Chamber of Deputies during several months have afforded an opportunity for testing real French opinion, and the results have been sensational.

At election after election fought in typical constituencies all over France champions of Ruhrism have been beaten by emphatic majorities. The masses of French workmen have always opposed this policy. The peasant in every land always moves slowly. But there can be no doubt that the French peasant has had enough of military adventures. His sons were never numbered amongst the "exempts" and the losses in the peasant homes of France were appalling.

Driving through the villages in agricultural France you find yourself asking: "Where are the young men?" The answer invariably comes: "This village suffered severely in the war." You will receive the same answer in the next village and the next. We cannot wonder, therefore, that by-elections in rural as well as in urban France display unmistakable weariness of plans which involve the marching of armed Frenchmen into hostile territory. The sorrowing people of France have good reason to shrink from any course of action that leads to further shedding of blood.

Wanted Decision Postponed

That is why I have steadily favored every scheme that had the effect of postponing a decision as to the Ruhr. Delay meant ultimate defeat for the chauvinists. That is why they strove so hard to rush their Government into this precipitate action. The abrupt termination of the Paris conference, was their opportunity and they seized it with tingling fingers. Until then there had never been a clean break on which violence could be founded. Friends of moderation both here and on the continent had seen to that. There had been reference of questions for the scrutiny of experts and calming adjournment to await their report. When it arrived there were endless suggestions and counter suggestions to meet difficulties. In the end Europe was saved from the catastrophe of once more handing its destinies to the guidance of blind force.

Unhappily, weariness or impatience induced the Paris negotiators in a few hours to drop the reins which had for the last four years held the furies from dashing along their career of destruction. There were many alternative plans that might have been discussed. There was a proposal to refer the whole question to the League of Nations. It is true that when I suggested it in August last M. Poincare summarily rejected it. But the allies also rejected Poincare's proposals by a majority of four to one at that conference.

That did not prevent his repeating them in January—and this time he succeeded in winning over a majority to his view. A little more persistence and less pessimism might have persuaded Belgium, Italy and Japan to aid our appeals to France to trust rather to the League of Nations than to the uncertainties of war. What is still more inexplicable is the failure of the conference to take any note of Mr. Secretary Hughes' New Haven speech.

Neglected opportunities litter the path of this troublesome question. There were the Cannes conversations, broken off just as they were reaching fruition. Had they been continued another week they would have ended in a helpful settlement which would have brought reparations to France, confidence to Germany and peace to Europe. They struck on one of many sunken reefs which bestrew French political seas, and it will not surprise me to find that the whole cargo of reparations disappeared then beyond salvage into the deep with these shipwrecked negotiations.

Again Germany threw away a great opportunity at Genoa when all the nations of Europe came together for the first time to discuss their troubles in a spirit of equality and amity. It is true reparations were excluded at the instance of France from the program of the conference. But the spirit engendered by a friendly settlement of all other outstanding questions would have rendered a reasonable and temperate consideration of reparations inevitable. Germany, by the foolish staging of its Russian agreement, made all that impossible.

Resentment and suspicion were once more equipped with a lash, and they used it relentlessly to drive out all good will for Germany from the purlieus of that great congress. Another lost opportunity.

Neglected Opportunities.

Then there was the bankers' committee, appointed to consider the question of raising an international loan to help France finance the repair of her devastated area, and also to assist Germany to restore her demoralized currency. I remember how eager poor Rathenau was to float that loan, and how sanguine he was it would succeed. He was confident that German nationals who have invested their gold in other lands could be induced to subscribe heavily to the loan. The bankers concerned—all were of the highest reputation in the financial world—were confident that if German reparations were fixed at a reasonable sum investors throughout the world would gladly put their money into a great international loan which would help to restore Europe. The French Government testily declined to consider the essential conditions indicated by the bankers.

Another lost opportunity and Europe at once lumbered along its dreary way to seek another. It came with Mr. Hughes' famous speech. It was clearly the result of prolonged consideration. For weeks there had been rumors of much consultation in Washington on the state of Europe and we were encouraged to hope America meant business. The result was Mr. Secretary Hughes' offer. It was made four days before the Paris conference, and was obviously intended to be discussed by the allies there. An endeavor has been made to minimize the importance of this American approach to Europe. But it is incomprehensible to me how so momentous a pronouncement has been treated as if it were merely the casual utterance of a politician who had to find some topic of more or less interest with which to illuminate a discourse.

Another opportunity lost—perhaps the greatest—perhaps the last. Never has luck striven so hard to save stupidity. But luck loses its temper easily, and then it is apt to hit hard.

D Lloyd George

Hughes Suggested a Commission to Determine How Much Germany Could Pay

SECRETARY OF STATE HUGHES, in a speech before the American Historical Society at New Haven, Dec. 29, said the crux of the European situation rested in the settlement of reparations.

"There ought to be a way," he said, "for statesmen to agree upon what Germany can pay, for, no matter what claims may be made against her, that is the limit of satisfaction. There ought to be a way to determine that limit and provide a financial plan by which immediate results can be obtained. * * * *

"If statesmen cannot agree and exigencies of public opinion make their course difficult, then there should be called to their aid those who can point the way to a solution.

"Why should they not invite men of the highest authority in finance in their respective countries—men of such prestige, experience and honor that their agreement upon the amount to be paid, and upon a financial plan for working out the payments, would be accepted throughout the world as the most authoritative expression obtainable? Governments need not bind themselves in advance to accept the recommendations, but they can at least make possible such an inquiry with their approval and free the men who may represent their country in such a commission from any responsibility to foreign offices and from any duty to obey political instructions. In other words, they may invite an answer to this difficult and pressing question from men of such standing and in such circumstances of freedom as will insure a reply prompted only by knowledge and conscience.

"I have no doubt that distinguished Americans would be willing to serve on such a commission. If Governments saw fit to reject the recommendation upon which such a body agreed, they would be free to do so, but they would have the advantage of impartial advice and of an enlightened public opinion. Peoples would be informed, the question would be rescued from assertion and counter-assertion and the problem put upon its way to solution. * * * *

"There lies open a broad avenue of opportunity if those whose voluntary action is indispensable are willing to take advantage of it. And once this is done the avenues of American helpfulness cannot fail to open hopefully."

SOVIET LEADER SAYS RUSSIA IS AWAITING OPPORTUNITY FOR GREAT REVOLUTIONARY DRIVE

Zinoviev's Speech Indicates Plan Is to Sweep Over Western Europe With Red Army When France and Germany Are Enfeebled.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and the Chicago Daily News.

PARIS, Feb. 24.

SOVIET RUSSIA clings as tenaciously as ever to the dream of carrying the flaming torch of war and revolution through Western Europe but prefers to postpone the actual date of its social and military offensive until 1925 or 1926. Such is the sense of an important speech on Russia's foreign policy made on Jan. 25 before a congress of members of the Bolshevist party and the heads of the Georgian military organization by G. S. Zinoviev, who, as President of the Congress of the Oriental peoples and President of the Executive Committee of the Third Internationale, is second in influence only to Lenine himself.

An official, certified stenographic copy of this speech in the original Russian has just reached the correspondent from Georgia. It demonstrates that everything which has been said in France and elsewhere regarding the Russo-German military menace since the Russo-German treaty of Rapallo was more than justified. After a vigorous attack on the treaty of Versailles and "French imperialism," the soviet leader continues:

"We need rest and will do everything possible to avoid an immediate military conflict. So far as the matter depends upon us we shall be prudent. We shall await patiently the moment when we shall be obliged to intervene in the course of events, not through Foreign Commissioner Tchitcherin, but with the red army. The ideal for us communists is to remain quietly vigilant a few years while the French and German middle classes enfeeble one another, until the moment we can place the heavy sword of the soviet republic on one side of the scales and pronounce our judgment. This would be the ideal strategy. We shall observe what is happening today and stand aside with gun in hand, but when the favorable moment comes we shall strike the table with our fist and say, 'Enough!' It is for the world proletariat to see this problem. Such is our strategy, but we must understand that this business does not depend upon us alone or upon the communist internationale. We shall have to await a moment when we must be ready to take decisive measures and set our forces in motion. Events in Germany have already reached such a point that war can hardly be avoided. The French capitalists are talking more and more strongly. Will it bring a revolutionary explosion? Undoubtedly, but the German workmen, and especially the German communist party, are not yet strong enough to assume power. Our party in Germany has only 400,000 members and we want it to have 1,000,000. However, within a few months Germany may become the center of world events and consequently the German communist party will have to show activity before long.

Pathway of the Revolution.

"The pathway of the great revolution extends, we believe, from Russia across Germany toward France, and later Great Britain, but today affairs are developing in such a manner that the pathway of the revolution will undergo some modifications. It is a question of knowing when we shall begin to play a more active role in the world arena. Will this happen in 1925 or 1926?

"We want our country to have two or three years of rest to enable us to organize our national economy. We need two or three years more of good crops, but events are now marching with such rapidity that we must maintain direct and immediate liaison with the German workmen. Comrade Trotzky has already spoken on this question. We have concluded a commercial agreement question with a great business company in Germany. We shall deliver it a certain quantity of wheat. Already 4,000,000 pounds of wheat have been sent to Germany. How does it happen that the communist internationale is doing an international wheat business?

"It is very simple. German workmen are told: 'If you dare to resist or rebel, you will starve. We shall blockade you. You will have nothing and will die of hunger.' It is therefore important to prove that we can give them bread. Every German workman must be allowed to know that Russia sends wheat to Germany, and then they will say to themselves that if German workmen seize power they would have bread. They could not be conquered by famine; Russia would help them. After that the French would no longer dare to send their army into Germany, because it would be a revolutionary country. A few divisions of a proletarian army could do more to defend Germany than a million men under William II.

Wheat as a Form of Agitation.

"It is a new form of revolutionary propaganda. The appearance of Russian wheat on the German market would be the best form of agitation. Our two peoples are destined to complement one another. Russia is a colossal country, with an inexhaustible reserve of wheat, and Germany is a powerful industrial country, with technic and electrification admirably developed. An alliance of communist Russia with communist Germany would be so powerful that nobody in Europe or even the whole world could resist them.

"That is why those among us who shall live a few years more will see what hitherto has been considered great events are nothing in comparison with what is going to happen in the future. In tomorrow's struggle the French workmen will also arise and we shall have to accomplish a task truly worthy of communists—that of fighting against a bourgeois state in the very streets of its capital!"

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE.

Two Kinds of Law.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

"COLONIST'S DESCENDANT" quite misunderstands the question. "Life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness" does not mean liberty to steal or murder. There are two kinds of actions, aggressive and nonaggressive. Aggressive actions are such as curtail the liberty of action of another. Nonaggressive actions are those in which we may indulge without curtailing the liberty of anybody else.

To rob or to murder are aggressive actions because they destroy totally or in part the liberty of the one who is robbed or murdered. To go to the theater to laugh, or to a church to pray, or to a barroom to get a drink, are nonaggressive actions, because the theatergoer does not prevent the churchgoer from going to church, nor does the barroomgoer prevent the theatergoer from going to the theater. Each one does as it pleases him freely.

But when the churchgoers say to the barroomgoers and theatergoers, "You shall not go to theater or barroom," it is an act of aggression.

Laws made to protect the individual from acts of aggression are just laws, and are to be respected. Laws that are acts of aggression in themselves are to be spurned and derided and broken by everybody who knows what liberty means.

As for anarchism, he will do well not to denounce it until he understands it, or he may find himself as much astonished as Paul was on that memorable journey to Damascus.

Those Missing Cass Cars.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

THE statement by the manager of the United Railways Co. that their Cass and Natural Bridge cars run between one and two minutes apart is incomprehensible in view of the fact that hundreds of people wait night after night from 15 to 25 minutes for these cars.

The "Dope" Monster.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

THE dope monster in the United States is growing fast. Federal authorities have fought it five years and given up. It's beyond control. Four million American men, women, boys, girls, are now narcotic slaves in "the land of the free and the home of the brave."

The United States uses more devilish dope than all the rest of the world put together. Narcotic dealers laugh and grow fat—our citizens suffer and grow lean. Legislation and public spirit collapse. The plague of Egypt is on us. More than 100,000,000 ounces of dope were smuggled into America last year. An ounce of hell for each person in the United States. The wages of dope are crime, immorality, degradation, misery, torture, despair and death.

E PLURIBUS UNUM.

As Russia Does It.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

IN Sunday's edition of the Post-Dispatch I saw by an article that Russia has a President and a Parliament of moderate size, which is not allowed to make the laws, but only allowed to argue and talk. I was much surprised at this. I had never read anything about the new Russian Government before that said anything good about it. It was all rotten and terrible.

In view of all this, it seems remarkable that they have already learned what we seem to have not yet found out, and that is the fact that no large body of men can now, ever could, or ever will legislate intelligently. There are always too many rumdums, and if a bill of merit is ever presented it looks like a crazy quilt when they all have whacked at it.

The writer knows little about Russia, but is heartily in favor of immediately dispensing with the services of 7994 of our 8000 lawmakers and appointing six good men with intelligence to remodel our laws by throwing out all laws restrictive of personal liberty and those that are for nothing but to create positions for the barnacle family. The writer would have no objection to a law whereby the deposed 7994 lawmakers might rent a hall at their own expense and talk all they pleased, at a salary of 50 cents per month for the entire bunch.

A Federal Divorce Law.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

ALLOW me to congratulate you on the splendid editorial appearing in today's edition of the Post-Dispatch, entitled "Legislative Matrimonial Wisdom." The sooner the American public is brought to realize that instruction in the home (and not by legislative enactment) is the cure for our social ills, the better and stronger will be our republic.

I would like for those who advocate a Federal divorce law to answer two questions:

Is it right to force a loose divorce law on South Carolina and New York?

Do they intend to entirely destroy our local government of Jefferson City?

Our Federal courts are already so badly clogged that justice is hardly possible, and if this so-called reform is allowed to thrust itself on the American public their plight will be pitiful indeed.

BAPTIST.

A MOSSBACK DEFEAT?

The proposed amendments to the road law will probably be defeated, according to the Post-Dispatch's staff correspondent at Jefferson City. The adoption of the amendments, as pointed out by our correspondent when they were introduced, would have devitalized the State Highway Commission, would likely have deprived the State of the Federal aid necessary to carrying out Missouri's great road program and thus wrecked the whole splendid project.

It seems that members of the Legislature generally have begun to realize the sinister import of the proposed changes, thanks to public sentiment as expressed in letters and telegrams to Senators and Representatives from individual citizens and civic organizations. In consequence the reactionary design to destroy the present road organization and make the administration of the road funds a log-rolling scramble appears doomed to fail.

The prospect is an occasion for rejoicing, but there is cause for disquiet, nevertheless, in the fact such an attempt should be made. It is only too evident that men are still sent to the Legislature who are peculiarly unqualified for the responsibilities of the office. The Senator or Representative, for instance, who cannot look beyond the boundary of the district he represents, who cannot view a State undertaking in the broad light of the State's welfare, is not equipped for membership in the Assembly. His parochialism unfits him, not only for acting as State legislator, but as a representative of his own direct constituency. Any scheme that would sacrifice the State's interest as a whole for a fanciful local advantage would penalize the locality as well as the State. Our road reactionaries do not perceive this, yet it is an obvious truth, just the same.

When the prospective defeat of vicious pending road amendments is accomplished the practice of heckling the Highway Commission and of trying to swerve Missouri from its determination to build a real system of good roads ought to be abandoned. If this great enterprise is to be carried through successfully the Highway Commission must be able to exercise its judgment and enforce its decisions. It must have the support of public opinion. It ought in fairness to have, also, the co-operation and confidence of the Legislature. That happy condition has not yet been attained, but the repulse of the latest reactionary assault will be a move in that direction.

THE TRAGEDY OF KAROLYI.

A personal tragedy of classic dimensions was consummated a few days ago when a Hungarian court formally declared Count Michael Karolyi a traitor and ordered the confiscation of his vast estates. Karolyi will not mind the loss of his fortune—he had previously offered it to his country—but the brand of treason is a bitter drop to be added to that great man's cup of sorrow.

Karolyi, whom Americans do not know well, is a great man. In the days before the war he was an anomaly in Hungary. Member of the Magyar aristocracy—the haughtiest and narrowest in Europe—scion of a family that traced its descent unbroken for 1200 years, a giant in stature, famed as a horseman and swordsman—this fierce aristocrat was the leader of liberalism in Hungary. It was he who led the losing fight against that grim old imperialist, Tisza.

The end of the war gave Karolyi and the liberals their chance. The republic was proclaimed. Karolyi was elected President, and his first act was to give his fortune, valued at $30,000,000, to the new Government. A new day had dawned. Then, like a stroke of lightning, came a note from the allies establishing the new boundaries of Hungary. It amounted to a soulless mutilation of the country. Hungary flamed in maddened revolt, the Republic fell and Bela Kun and the red flag arose. The Republic had been betrayed by the nations that should have been its best friends.

The Communist regime lasted until the Rumanian army entered Budapest and overthrew it. When the Rumanians withdrew, the reactionary Admiral Horthy came in, and there, with the consent of France and England, he has remained, hanging Socialists, torturing Jews and grinding the peasants—a bloody, if craven, heir of Tisza.

Karolyi and his family are starving in a little town on the Dalmatian coast. All his glories have fled, and there is a price upon his life. But when history has obscured the trivial and outlined the significant events that followed the war, Karolyi and the noble part he played for freedom will occupy a graphic page. His accusers, not he, are the traitors.

JUSTICE FOR THE NEGRO.

We dissent from the doctrine of Federal interference in state cases, but there is some ground for satisfaction in the action of the United States Supreme Court, which remanded the cases of negroes convicted of participation in the Elaine (Ark.) riots. The ground for remanding was that the negroes were not given a fair hearing.

Fourteen negroes and five white persons were killed in the rioting, which, by nearly all accounts, was started by the whites. The Arkansas formula in such cases seems to consist in hanging the negroes who escape the bullets.

SALVAGING DRUG ADDICTS.

The City of Memphis has adopted a new attitude towards the drug addict. It is undertaking, by statute, to define the status of the drug addict as an invalid in the eyes of the law and to prescribe custody and treatment in accordance with that definition. Besides this general act, two bills have been introduced in the Legislature authorizing the City of Memphis and the County of Shelby, respectively, to construct hospitals for the care of those unfortunates and to maintain those hospitals either by tax or appropriation. The bills further provide for co-operation between the city and county in this work.

The inspiration for this proposed body of humanitarian legislation comes from the experience of L. T. Fitzhugh, a City Judge of Memphis. The futility and heartlessness of treating those derelicts as criminals so impressed Judge Fitzhugh that he commenced agitation for a more enlightened policy. His efforts met with prompt response from the various civic associations of Memphis. The Legislature, it seems, has been equally responsive. At any rate, the passage of the bills is confidently predicted.

The treatment of the victims is to be thorough. When discharged from the hospital the ex-addict is to be sent to a farm operated in connection with the institution, where he will be employed at tasks within his strength until the cure is completed and self-respect and morale re-established. The State's supervision does not even stop there. The patient is not finally released until he accepts a position, which has been procured for him, in a new environment far from his old haunts. And though, in effect, "on his own" now, the State will still exercise a friendly, safeguarding supervision.

The plan, of course, is yet to be proved. As a salvaging process, however, it is manifestly sound. And whether its success be great or small, it is incomparably superior to the brutal practice of regarding as a criminal the drug addict who is first of all an invalid.

PLAYING WITH FIRE

At a police court hearing in Springfield, O., in which one W. M. Cortner was charged with riotous conspiracy in Ku Klux Klan headquarters, Edward McDonald testified that on the night he was initiated into the klan two Christian ministers, whom he named, made speeches to the klan members. According to McDonald, one of these ministers said that 85 per cent of the offices were held by Catholics; that the Jews were getting too strong, and that "it's time for us 100-per-cent Americans to step in and do something."

How far these twentieth century Christian leaders are from the ideal of their Master may be judged from a reading of the Parable of the Good Samaritan, in which Jesus condemned racial, religious or any other distinctions, and showed that the only test of neighborliness was need on the one hand and ability to help on the other. The Jews despised the Samaritans, but Jesus held up one of this despised race as an exemplar. And in his ministry he comforted and healed Greeks, Romans and others, without discrimination. He did not even suggest to his disciples that "the Romans are getting too strong," but said, "Render unto Caesar the things that are Caesar's," and "My kingdom is not of this world."

From all of which it is evident that Christian leaders who stand for the ku klux, with its masked and secret plottings and its teachings of race and religious hatred, are playing with fire. Success in their efforts would mean the destruction of the Christian ideal as a guide to humanity. It would signalize the downfall of the church as a spiritual force for good.

HOW RADIO HAS LEAPED.

A little less than a year ago the Post-Dispatch, one evening, experimented with a small radio broadcasting apparatus. The news columns, the next day, recorded the fact that in a home on Lindell boulevard, young people danced to the phonograph music which had been sent out.

Contrast this, if you please, with the achievements of the intervening 11 months. Equipped since last June with everything necessary for powerful radio transmission, reports show that K S D has been heard plainly on the Atlantic 1200 miles out from New York, on an island between Alaska and the Asiatic coast 4008 miles from St. Louis in an air line, and aboard a ship from Australia when it was 840 miles south of the equator and more than 2000 miles west of Peru, in the South Pacific. Members of the St. Louis Chamber of Commerce, cruising in the Gulf of Mexico last Saturday night, enjoyed the symphony concert as it was broadcast from the Odeon by K S D. We dare not hazard a guess as to what the record will be a year from now.

THE STAMPEDE OF THE WILD MEN.

From the New York World.

Take the map of Europe, Asia and Africa. Draw a line from Galway, on the west of Ireland, through Paris, Hamburg, Memel, Petrograd, to Vladivostok, on the Pacific Ocean. Then draw another line running south from Paris to the Sahara Desert and then east to the Pacific. Within that broad belt lies the bulk of the civilization of the Old World. In that territory human civilization arose and matured. Within that belt today you may be able to find two or three Governments, little islands in a great sea, which are not shaken to their very foundations.

Ireland and her de Valera, France and her Poincare, Germany and her Ludendorff, Italy and her Mussolini, Turkey and her Kemal, Russia and her Third Internationale—from one ocean to the other the pace is being forced by the fanatics whose only appeal is to violence. And side by side with this rise of the wild men, as the inevitable lesson and consequence of their behavior, there is destruction of those habits by which alone orderly government can be sustained.

It is in such a world, amid such a jungle of disorder, that the French Government has launched its great offensive. It is against a background of this sort that the affair is to be judged. It is not to be judged by one's sympathies. It is not to be judged by one's affection for the French people. It is not to be judged by the words of a treaty. It is not to be judged by the balance sheet of a budget. It is to be judged only in the light of the supreme fact that a premeditated and deliberate disorder has been provoked at a time when three continents are in chaos.

M. Poincare's policy cannot be judged as an isolated fact. It must be judged by all the consequences. It must be judged in the light of the fact that of the great nations of the world Great Britain, France, Germany and the United States are the four Powers on whom the leadership of a reconstructed world depends.

And what has M. Poincare done to that leadership? He has struck a blow at the foundations of the German Republic from which it may not recover. He has gambled with the financial securities and, therefore, with the ultimate social security of the French Republic. He has driven between France and Germany a wedge of hatred that may poison the life of Europe for another generation. He has driven another wedge between France and Great Britain. And then he has driven a final and deeper wedge between Europe and America.

The isolation of France he has completed. The isolation of America he has fully accomplished. In place of the league to which the world aspired, in place of the alliance with which the war concluded, in place of the co-operation toward which America was again trying to find its way, every nation today is divided from every other.

M. Poincare's Government is not solely to blame for the result. Neither was the Kaiser's Government solely to blame for the war. But M. Poincare's Government today, like the Kaiser's in 1914, is solely responsible for having committed the final aggression which wrecked the last chance of adjustment by understanding. M. Poincare has set in motion one of those landslides of history which any fool can start but only the most heroic wisdom can arrest.

Blame, however, is no longer of any consequence. History will apportion it more fairly than we. What matters today is no longer what Bismarck did in 1871, or the Kaiser in 1914, or Mr. Lloyd George in 1918, or the peacemakers in 1919, or the Senate of the United States in 1920, or M. Poincare in January of 1922. That water has gone over the dam.

What matters today is that the foundations of organized living in the Old World are crumbling. What matters today is that men and Governments in lands that call themselves civilized should shake their minds free of all they've said and thought and committed themselves to doing in these last eight years, should tear the veils from their eyes and see what it means to have the civilization of three continents break apart.

SOCRATES AND HIS PUPILS.

SOCRATES: I have recently given some thought to a very interesting equation. You knew the facilities for expression are such as they never were before. We have an almost bewildering opportunity to make ourselves heard, and it may be said that for the first time we are all finding out what is in one another's mind.

Glaucon: It is wonderful, truly.

Socrates: So it is. Yet having heard by this time from pretty much everyone either by the radio or some other medium, how is one to escape the conviction that we are all as crazy as bedbugs?

Thrasymachus: Is this your conviction?

Socrates: Certainly. We all know that the late war was an incredible madness, but did it ever occur to us that we are incredibly mad?

Polemarchus: Of course not.

Socrates: Yet that will explain how such a thing could happen, and nothing else does explain it.

Glaucon: I am afraid you have us there.

Socrates: Formerly we knew little about one another. The world was big, and we therefore could not realize its total madness. That is not the case now. The world is small, and for the first time we realize how unsolvable are its riddles. We are all mad upon some score. This is proved by the absence of any rational process by which our differences may be composed. It is one thing not to know what the rest of the world is thinking and doing. We can then imagine ourselves quite sane and asking nothing not for the best. It is quite another thing to know what the rest of the world is thinking and doing. We can then realize that we are all as crazy as bedbugs.

Thrasymachus: Yet we dream of peace.

Socrates: I think we are awake now. We dreamed of peace before we realized that by peace each of us means only making the world safe for whatever each of us is crazy about.

Glaucon: That was excellent, Socrates.

Socrates: Thank you, Glaucon. Any of the great blocs in which humankind is divided, whether racial, religious or political, is for peace with it on top and the rest of us lying underfoot.

Polemarchus: That is, our model is the pax Romana.

Socrates: Precisely. Is there some common solvent by which all our differences may be dissolved? Is there some spiritual or material conception in which we could all happily join? Is there some political ideal which we can all unselfishly share?

Thrasymachus: No, by the dog!

Socrates: You may well say so. The world is just now in the flutter of discovery that its conquest for anything is absurd. We only dreamed of that sort of thing in our ignorance of what is in one another's mind. The war was at once the fruit of our common insanity and our introduction to one another's particular craze. We have annihilated space and obliterated the seven seas. The consequence is that we stand revealed to one another at last as Pandemonium itself, each caring only to die for a cause in which nobody else believes.

Polemarchus: You have it, I think.

Socrates: It is good of you to say so. Now let us consider how we may push to the cost of what others are crazy about the particular thing we are crazy about.

In sunset glow and colors rare
Fade as the sun sinks in the West—
Then twilight falls.

The calm serenity that you wear!

That side by side in our home nest
We'll watch and wait and listen there—
Till twilight falls! R. G. E. S.

OUR FOREIGN SERVICE.

From the Springfield (Mass.) Republican.

THE passage by the House of Representatives of the bill consolidating the diplomatic and consular services promises the early accomplishment of an important step in the [illegible] ing the foreign representation of the United States. No Secretary of State can be assumed to have been unmindful of the need of such improvement, but a distinct chapter of progress began nearly 20 years ago. A start was then made toward making the diplomatic service an established profession offering more attraction to young men of ability and giving them greater assurance of not being turned out by the [illegible] of the neck with each change in party control. The work of reform has been slow and gradual, chiefly for the reason that Congress could only be [illegible] to take one step at a time. * * * The chief merit of the consolidation bill, sponsored in the House by Congressman Rogers of this State, appears to be the greater opportunity for the reward of faithful and intelligent service. The State Department should be better able to take advantage of brains and personal equipment. It hardly seems probable that the day will come when our foreign service will become so established that the highest positions, that is the ambassadorships to the great Powers, will be commonly filled from the ranks of those who have worked themselves up from the lowest [illegible]. An Ambassador is looked upon as having something of the political complexion of a Cabinet officer and as being in a large degree the personal representative of the President. There is room a-plenty for further improvement. Our diplomats should be better paid. This applies not merely to those of the first rank, who must generally be selected from among men of large private means; but also to those serving in inferior positions who must always be depended upon for the operation of the permanent machinery of our embassies and legations and for much of the instruction of every new Ambassador in his duties.

JAMAICA'S FUTURE.

From the Montreal Star.

THE story that Great Britain is on the [illegible] of handing over the West Indies to Uncle Sam is one that Canadians have grown accustomed to hearing. It always lies in the back of the [illegible] of some United States Senator, who sees in it an opportunity to get once more on the front page of the big dailies that are ready to "feature" anything the essence of which is to add to the United States' possessions at the expense of John Bull. It was heard of frequently before the war, but, of course, it assumed the proportions of a [illegible] when there came a conference to discuss [illegible] when the motherhood was to repay war [illegible]. The idea is not novel to those as close to Washington as Canadians are. But it does seem necessary to say that, so far, we have not heard a single statesman of any note mention the thing seriously. That Jamaicans are somewhat [illegible] by the story is evident from the fact that it was necessary for Lord Burnham, visiting the island, at a banquet in his honor, to refer to the story and point out its utter lack of probability. Lord Burnham's voice, fresh from London, carried conviction with it.

The only change of status that the Jamaicans need anticipate is confederation with Canada, and they need not dread that, for it would only be carried into effect with the fullest consent of the people themselves. Perhaps this would not be a bad time for a little statesmanlike consideration of the proposals in this direction made by Mr. [illegible] Macaulay.

World Not So Bad Off as It Seems, Says Cheerful Diplomat

Asquith's Son-in-law Thinks We Take Things Too Seriously and Make Mountains Out of Mole Hills for Our Own Agitation and Worry.

Bothesat managed to keep his helicopter in the air have disposed, among other things, of the problem of the battleship—a problem which was so successfully tackled by Mr. Hughes last year at the Washington conference.

"When the helicopter will be perfected all the battleships in the world may be sold for scrap iron. People ought to realize that when you lay down the keel of a battleship you start building something that is already obsolete."

At this point I had to interrupt the Prince's strain of cosmic optimism. "True enough," I said, "but what about the deadlock at Lausanne?"

"Oh, yes, Lausanne," said the Prince. "You see, here again people take the short view. They believe that Lausanne was an attempt to solve something that started last year—or say, in the World War. Truth of the matter is, the keel of the Lausanne conference was laid before America was discovered. In fact, there is a connection between the origin of the Lausanne conference and the discovery of America. For the conference at Lausanne was made inevitable in 1453, when the Turk took Constantinople and established himself as a European power. And America was discovered because, the Turk having taken Constantinople, the overland route to India was blocked and the Spaniards sought a route around the world."

Again the interviewer attempted to recall the Prince from what looked like the beginning of another cosmic ramble to the more pressing worries of the present.

"You, too, are a victim of alarmist rumors," he said. "There is an Oriental proverb which says that soup is never eaten as hot as it is served. Give the Lausanne soup a chance and it will be cool, too.

"Besides, why fret about mere details? The two real problems that have not been solved at Lausanne are—first, the relation of the Islamic world to European civilization; second, the relation of Russia in the world—for that is involved in the question of the Straits.

As to Tchitcherin.

"Apropos of Russia—here's another pathological symptom of acute alarmism. Many people think that just because Rumania has recovered Bessarabia, a Rumanian province which has never belonged to Russia except in the brief period 1912-1918, there is danger of war with Russia. There isn't any. Not a single person in Rumania believes that Russia would fight Rumania because of Bessarabia.

"For one thing, Russia cannot fight. For another, the population of Bessarabia is happy—it wants neither bolshevist nor Czarist rule—neither starvation nor the knout. Bessarabia today is probably the only region of what was imperial Russia which is happy.

"Do you think that the soviet government may adopt an aggressive policy toward Rumania—the same as under the Czar? In many ways the bolshevik regime is duplicating the old Czarist methods and attitudes in the matter of the secret police, for instance, and of suppression of free speech. Isn't there a possibility of Tchitcherin becoming a second Isvolsky or Sazanov, only painted red?"

"I don't think so. Soviet Russia cannot afford a great many luxuries that were indulged in by the old regime. As to Tchitcherin—I know him. I had known him before he became a power—before Mr. Lloyd George made him fashionable. In 1917 I was in London, with our legation, and M. Tchitcherin was—well, in prison awaiting deportation. I always believed in obtaining first-hand information wherever possible. So I obtained authority to visit Tchitcherin in prison, and I discussed the fate of the universe with him. He believed in the unlimited power of his god, Karl Marx, to work miracles. Five years of watchful waiting must have convinced him that there are no miracles—not even Marxian miracles—and that the Marxian dogma must he diluted, humanized. M. Tchitcherin is becoming a realist. The Rumanian delegate at Lausanne was approached by one of his Russian colleagues and asked to settle all outstanding questions. These conversations fill me with hope. Four Rumanian statesmen are realists, too—but not selfish realists.

"Rumania is vitally interested in the success of the Lausanne negotiations for two persons. First, she cannot be indifferent in the face of any development that may endanger her ally, Jugo-Slavia, and her friend, Greece. Second, the freedom of the Straits is for Rumania a matter of first importance, for the Straits are Rumania's gate to the Western World."

France Not Isolated.

The Rumanian delegate, Jean Duca, who, by the way, is the youngest Foreign Minister in Europe, made a determined stand on the question of the freedom of the Straits, and it is not in the last place due to his efforts that this point, so essential from the point of view of world peace, was carried.

"Also, I am satisfied that Izzet Pasha's talk in Bucharest with M. Duca, reported on Feb. 12, convinced the Turkish statesman of the necessity of adopting a less uncompromising attitude. The Turks, who have good, practical sense, seem to understand better what is whispered to them in Bucharest than what is shouted at them in Lausanne, which reminds me—a book might be written on the relation of acoustics to diplomacy. It is not always the biggest noise, for one thing, that achieves the biggest results. There is an Italian proverb which says, Quo va piano va sano e va lontano—'he who walks slowly walks soundly and goes far.'

"What is the position of the Little Entente in the Ruhr question?" asked the interviewer.

"Rumania is always deeply perturbed whenever any difference of opinion occurs between the democratic allies, England and France. Fortunately, Rumania has no military alliance with any country, and is thus free to pursue her policy of peace in any event.

"It is a mistake to think that France is isolated. Belgium is with her, and Premier Mussolini of Italy has sent Italian engineers. And France—the France of Pasteur and Anatole France and Dr. Carrel and Jaures—is not militaristic, as some people think. France believes only in might in the service of right. And Heine's tomb in Paris is covered with flowers. Wagner's operas are applauded and Einstein was received with exuberant friendliness.

"These are more important manifestations of the soul of France than the squabbles of statesmen and the grammarians over the precise meaning of the adverb 'respectively' in the text of the Versailles treaty.

"Yet—50,000 years hence—or 50 years hence—what will be the difference?"

CUBIST ARTISTS GIVE EXHIBIT

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Feb. 25.—The seventh annual exhibition of the Society of Independent Artists, known as the Cubist, opened yesterday at the Waldorf-Astoria. Marie de Jarnet Norris was at the exhibit painting against time. Morris Kantor has an impressionistic painting entitled, "What Do I Seek?" J. Francois Kaufmann has a painting entitled "Father Forgive Them, for They Know Not What They Do." It depicts the marriage at Cana with variations. The Savior has just turned the water into wine, but a person dressed in civilian attire and very closely resembling William Jennings Bryan, is pouring the wine upon the floor.

She prayed and—fired!

In a blind alley, she faced this man with his hideous combination of smile and scar—in her negligee. Her harmless hands held—a Pomeranian and a parrot! But a moment later she had shot him. In "The Pom and the Parrot" is a heart racing hour such as George Kibbe Turner is able to make one live through.

Human emotion is aflame in the "Sand Pile" that Mary Synon takes you to; cold walls of a penitentiary, and skies reddened by the steel mills are the background of her terribly true picture of life.

What would happen if a crook who really did possess a "master mind" appeared to prey on society? "Ledgerdemain" tells you. Arthur Somers Roche shows what a formidable criminal hunger can make of an educated man.

Spend an evening with Rupert Hughes, whose amazing, audacious revelations of New York's history and life are the subject of discussion all around you. Solid hours of entertainment by the indisputable headliners of the field—packed between the red covers of one 25c magazine. Many a dollar has brought you fewer thrills, and less laughs than are to be had everywhere, and every month, for a quarter.

VERDICT FOR LOAN COMPANY IN SUIT OVER $1000 BOND

Security Had Been Stolen From Express Company and Put Up as Surety on Loan.

A jury in the Circuit Court yesterday returned a verdict that the Friedman Loan and Mercantile Co., 1839 Market street, had an interest amounting to $821.30 in a $1000 Liberty Bond replevined from that company by the American Railway Express Co. The bond was one of several which had been stolen while in transit by Arthur Bennett Smith, an employe in the money-order department of the express company. It was pledged by him with the Friedman Co. Oct. 8, 1920. On May 4, 1921, he admitted stealing $14,500 of Liberty bonds from his employer and was sentenced to serve three years in the Federal penitentiary at Fort Leavenworth. His deposition was read in the replevin case.

Smith pledged the $1000 bond as security for a loan of $700, agreeing to pay 2 per cent a month. Previously, it was testified, he had pledged other Liberty bonds with the same concern and later redeemed them, asserting he represented a crowd of gamblers who had pooled their money to bet on the Dempsey-Miske prize fight.

The express company contended that the loan company, which was defendant in the suit, was guilty of negligence in dealing with Smith, but the defendant said that it acted in good faith and did not know the property had been stolen. Judge Miller instructed the jury the burden of proof was upon the express company to show the other company had acted in bad faith. The verdict includes principal, with 2 per cent a month from Oct. 8, 1920, to Dec. 24 of the same year and 6 per cent a year thereafter.

Last October in another replevin suit arising from Smith's pawning of $6000 of the stolen bonds a jury decided that the pawnbroker, the Gallant Loan and Mercantile Co., was not entitled to an interest in the property.

REV. SHUPP, 'DRY' LEADER, DEPARTS FOR HEALTH RESORT

Wife Declines to Name Place to Which Anti-Saloon League Officer Has Gone.

The Rev. W. C. Shupp, superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League of Missouri and recognized leader of the dry forces of the State, who has been suffering from a nervous breakdown since Feb. 1, departed last night "for a health resort." At his home, 5063 Raymond avenue, yesterday, Mrs. Shupp declined to state his destination more definitely.

Christian Bernet, president of the league, said he understood the Rev. Mr. Shupp was going to "Florida, Hot Springs, or some place like that." On Jan. 31 the dry leader had testified in a deposition in the $20,000 damage suit of John Pazdera Jr., in which he and City Detective Edward Sullivan are defendants, growing out of the New Year's raid on Hotel Chase. It was announced a week ago that the Rev. Mr. Shupp might be called to finish his deposition, which was interrupted by his breakdown, next Saturday.

At the time of his collapse members of his family said that he might go to his farm in Southeastern Missouri later to recuperate.

Death Attributed to Alcoholism.

A verdict of death "from acute alcoholism" was returned by a Coroner's July in the case of Patrick O'Neill, 65 years old, a bachelor coal miner of O'Fallon. O'Neill and five other men drank at O'Neill's bachelor quarters. The men went to sleep and when they awoke they found O'Neill dead.

Olive and Locust From Ninth to Tenth

Ready! New Displays of Attractive Spring Furnishings —In the "Little Home"

Ross Crane Says:

THE evening lamp and the easy chair — and father, sitting on his shoulder blades and wondering why he has that pain in the small of his back.

I can tell him—it's the chair, not his technic. A lounging chair for a man should be so constructed and cushioned that when he occupies it in the immemorial manner of men, it supports him—completely.

On Monday afternoon at two o'clock, in the Music Hall, I shall show such a chair in illustration of my talk on "Elements of Comfort in the Home."

I wish it were possible for me to introduce such a chair in a hundred thousand homes in St. Louis, for in so doing, I should insure absolute comfort for one member of the family at least, and thus contribute to the peace and happiness of each household.

TUT-ANKH-AMEN

Silks for Spring

◖ Tremendously in vogue are gorgeously colored Silks in bold Egyptian-print designs, closely resembling those just found on the exquisite works of art in the tomb of Pharaoh Tutankhamen.

◖ In compliment to this monarch, who had such a high regard for art and such a sincere appreciation of loveliness, we now call these Egyptian Silks, "Tutankhamen Silks."

◖ Quaintly conventionalized animals, jagged pyramidal borders, sacred symbols of life and its deepest meanings are most effectively developed in those glorious colorings that only a mind accustomed to sunsets on the Nile or sunlight effects on brilliantly illumined desert sands could conceive. HEALTH SHOW EMPHASIZES NEED OF MILK IN DIET

Exposition Which Will Run Until March 5 at Coliseum Sponsored by Public Welfare Department.

The St. Louis Health Show opened yesterday afternoon in the Coliseum with a fine papier mache cow on a pedestal near the Washington avenue entrance and a large building full of interesting things.

Good health, if the exhibits rightly conveyed the best opinions on the subject, is largely a matter of drinking plenty of good milk and refraining from this or that. For instance the St. Louis Pure Milk Commission has placed a turntable with four little men on it in full view of the crowd. The table turns around and as it turns, "He Drinks Milk," "He Drinks Tea," "He Drinks Coffee" and "He Does Not Drink Milk" each try to pound a plunger hard enough to ring a bell. "He Drinks Milk" was the only man who could ring the bell yesterday.

If this is not proof enough the visitor may visit Division of Public Health, City of St. Louis, exhibits and read charts until he is convinced.

Show to Run Until March 5.

The Department of Public Welfare of St. Louis is sponsoring the show, which is to run from 2 p. m. to 11 p. m. each day until March 5. However, the National Health Shows Inc. is running the exposition and will collect all money paid by exhibitors for space and 65 per cent of the gate receipts. Thus the main section of the floor is held mostly by private firms. The city's 35 per cent will go to a good health fund.

The rules of health illustrated by exhibitors fundamentally are few but have infinite variables. There is the case of the two roosters who have a coop across from the big grape fruit and near the illustrious cow. Observers are told by a placard that the smaller rooster has led an unhygienic life. His comb shows a weakened constitution. The other rooster crows loudly in praise of a milk diet, clean surroundings and health knowledge.

Medical School Exhibits.

Washington and St. Louis universities are off to one side in a room with windows on Jefferson avenue. Medical students of the latter school were experimenting yesterday with the stomach of some animal. They also have a heart muscle in an incubator that works realistically. Washington University has come to the show with a complete exhibit of charts. Among the pertinent facts set forth is the statement that heart trouble, poor digestion and obesity often are mistaken for asthma.

Asthma, the reader learns, is an affliction of the lungs caused by innoculation with a foreign proteid. One boy who went to the school for treatment had been innoculated by the proteids of cabbage. Physicians found the trouble, gave him an antitoxin composed of cabbage proteids and he never was troubled again.

The Division of Health exhibits range along the western side of the building and cover communicable diseases, chemical laboratory work, bacteriological examinations, meat and food inspection, sanitary inspection work, venereal clinic, vital statistics and fumigation. Booths illustrating each phase have been installed.

Preventive Medicine Stressed.

Preventive medicine is stressed throughout the health work on view. The city has developed an anticatarrhal vaccine and a toxin antitoxin for diphtheria treatment as well as various prophylactic measures.

A Better Babies Conference was getting under way yesterday in the large inclosure given over to this work. Dressing rooms shut off from public view and exhibition rooms separated from the onlookers by glass have been provided.

A striking poster exhibit arranged under municipal auspices stretches along the eastern side of the main arena. Patent medicine advertisements are exposed as the pretensions of quacks and a number of alleged panaceas shown to be made of very simple medicines which could not conceivably do the wonders accredited to them. The use of "testimonials" by advertisers of this type is decried as an abuse of truth and confidence. In many cases, the posters say, those who gave the testimonials died of the disease of which they said they had been cured.

In general the instructions given people at the health show are as follows:

Get eight or 10 hours' sleep. Eat plenty of wholesome food and drink at least a pint of milk a day. Bathe at least twice a week. Live in clean, cheerful surroundings and see that ventilation is always good. Beware of "cure-alls." When sick go to a doctor.

COUGHS

ARE DANGER SIGNALS

One of the most popular and effective remedies for affected throat membranes is nature's own healing agent—menthol. Derived from the peppermint plant, it is cooling and soothing. Its antiseptic qualities prevent further inflammation.

Dean's Mentholated Cough Drops are compounded with just the proper amount of menthol and pure cane sugar to make them doubly effective. Pleasant to taste—always beneficial. Now 5c

WILLIAM AND HERMINE HONEYMON AT END

Former Kaiser and Bride No Longer Seen Arm in Arm Along Roads of Doorn.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

DOORN, Feb. 3.—The honeymoon of William and Hermine has at last come to an end, in the opinion of the inhabitants of Doorn. The pleasant walks arm in arm along the solitary roads of the village, under the protection of a captain of the Dutch gendarmerie, ended abruptly several days ago. The disappearance of the couple from the village streets gave rise to numerous rumors to the effect that the former Emperor was seriously ill, or that an attempt had been made upon his life, but investigation has failed to show any authority for either statement.

For about three weeks it has been reported that deep discord existed between the couple. One reason assigned was that William bore with difficulty the dictatorial tone of his wife who insisted that at the castle everyone, not excluding her husband, should act and conduct himself according to her ideas. Hence Hermine has been in constant hot water, for her attitude was resented. Nevertheless both Hermine and her daughter were present at a dinner given on the occasion of William's anniversary.

In spite of the evident tension, it is not believed that a rupture is imminent. Hermine's children are still living with their old nurse in the building at the entrance to the park, and Hermine occupies her apartment in the chateau not far from that of her husband.

This fact, however, seems to be established. Since his marriage William has become thinner and appears much older. All who have seen him during the past few days remark how ill he is looking and how feebly he walks.

PAINTERS' DISTRICT COUNCIL APPROVES WAGE INCREASE PLAN

Unions to Ask Employers for Advance From Contract Wage of $1 to $1.25 an Hour.

The Painters' District Council, composed of delegates representing 1600 members of four local unions of painters, met Friday night at 2651 Locust street and approved the demand made last week by two locals for a wage increase from the present scale of $1 per hour to $1.25.

The painters are under contract with the Master Painters' Association, the employers, until March 15, 1924, at $1 an hour, but will seek an adjustment of the wage scale at a meeting of union representatives and employers this week.

Charles J. Eisenring, secretary of the council, said the painters merely were following the lead of other unions in the building trades. They were the last union to receive the increase to $1.25 in the war period and were the first to accept a lower wage scale in the readjustment. With a new adjustment being made generally, the painters are entitled to share in the increase, he said.

E. J. McMahon, executive secretary of the Master Builders' Association, said that in view of the exceptionally bright outlook for a great building program this year, he anticipated no trouble with the building trades. There are 14,000 members of the building trades in St. Louis, the majority of whom will be affected by wage increases effective in March and April.

REGISTRATION FOR PRIMARY MARCH 9 TO BE ABOUT 245,000

Election Commissioner's Report Shows 6763 Persons Registered Thursday.

Reports on the registration of voters Thursday, compiled yesterday by the Board of Election Commissioners, showed a total of 6763 persons registered in the 28 wards, which is considered very light.

The election clerks completed the canvass of precincts yesterday. The Election Commissioners estimated 15,000 to 18,000 names would be stricken from the books as a result of the canvass, due to removal of voters to other precincts, and chiefly to a ruling by the Attorney-General that a recent constitutional amendment prohibits aliens from voting on their first papers declaring their intention to become citizens.

The present registration is 259,312 and this will be reduced to a figure between 245,000 and 250,000 in the revision of the books for the aldermanic primary election March 9, it was said. The aldermanic and School Board election will be held April 3.

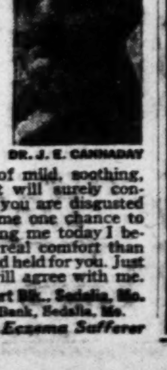
ECZEMA

Also called Tetter, Salt Rheum, Pruritus, Milk Crust, Water Poison, Weeping Skin, etc.



DR. J. E. CANNADAY

I believe eczema can be cured to stay. I mean just what I say: C-U-R-E-D and NOT merely patched up to return again. Remember, I make this statement after handling over half a million cases of eczema and devoting over 20 years of my life to its treatment. I don't care what you have used, nor how many doctors have told you that you could not be cured; all I ask is just a chance to prove my claims. Don't be discouraged but write me TODAY and I will send you a FREE TRIAL of mild, soothing, guaranteed treatment that will surely convince you as it has me. If you are disgusted and discouraged just give me one chance to prove my claims. By writing me today I believe you will enjoy more real comfort than you really thought this world held for you. Just try it, and I feel sure you will agree with me.

NEW LAMP BURNS 94% AIR
Beats Electric or Gas

A new oil lamp that gives an amazingly brilliant, soft, white light, even better than gas or electricity, has been tested by the U. S. Government and 35 leading universities and found to be superior to 10 ordinary oil lamps. It burns without odor, smoke or noise—no pumping up, is simple, clean, safe. Burns 94% air and 6% common kerosene (coal oil).

The inventor, D. G. Johnson, 609 W. Lake St., Chicago, Ill., is offering to send a lamp on 10 days' FREE trial, or even to give one FREE to the first user in each locality who will help him introduce it. Write him today for full particulars. Also ask him to explain how you can get the agency, and without experience or money make $250 to $500 per month.

AWAY 43 YEARS; FINDS WIFE DYING ON RETURN

Sanford Shoemaker, Civil War Veteran, Tells How He "Took a Notion" to Seek Family.

An old man descended the stairs at 1811 Wash street last evening in response to an inquiry for Sanford Shoemaker.

"Are you the Sanford Shoemaker who left his wife and children in Shelbyville, Ky., 43 years ago?" the visitor asked.

"Yes," he acknowledged. "I reckon I am."

He had not heard from them nor seen them until a short time ago, he went on to say. Then in January, he "took a notion" to go back and search. His wife had divorced him and married again, her husband and his son had died and she was on her deathbed at the home of a daughter in Louisville—all this had happened during the 43 years Sanford had been away.

"Elizabeth was a baby and John was 4 years old when my wife and I spit up," he said leaning against the banister for rest while he talked. "I wrote for a time after I left Shelbyville, but got no answer. So I stopped writing. Just lost track. You know how it is?"

The reporter nodded.

"I worked in Indianapolis, Kansas City and Chicago—five years all told and then I came to St. Louis. Been here ever since. About Christmas I took a notion to go back and find my children. A nephew in Shelbyville gave me the address of my daughter, Mrs. Elizabeth Read, who lives in Louisville. I went to see her. She has two children, one of them is married."

His voice became graver.

"Saw my wife, too."

"A reconciliation?"

He shook his head.

"No—just civil."

Then he hurried on to tell how he had found his son, John, who is living in Washington County Kentucky.

"John has grandchildren. I am going to visit him this summer. My daughter, too. She's been up here to see me and writes me every week."

Shoemaker says he is 79 years old, a Civil War veteran—member of the Frank P. Blair Post, G. A. R. He adds to his pension of $50 a month by canvassing for a mercantile company.

BANKRUPTCY PETITION FILED AGAINST UNITED HOME BUILDERS

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

DALLAS, Tex., Feb. 24.—An involuntary petition in bankruptcy was filed in Federal Court here yesterday against the United Home Builders, a housing trust, which was forced into a receivership Jan. 25, in the Sixty-eighth District Court.

The petition in Federal Court alleges the company is insolvent and that an act of bankruptcy was committed when three per cent loan contracts held by the concern were allowed to mature, and loans made, out of the numerical order of the contracts. The plan of operation provided numbering of contracts in the order issued, and making loans in the numerical order in which the contracts matured.

Judge T. A. Work, who ordered the receivership, ruled the company was operated in the nature of a lottery.

The company, which formerly had headquarters in Dallas, and later in St. Louis, now is located at Portland, Ind.

Do You Know Mighty Healing Power of Mentho-Laxene?

THOUSANDS ARE FINDING IT HELPS WHEN ALL ELSE FAILS.

Supremely Good for Coughs That Come With Colds, Grippe, Flu, Bronchial Asthma, Whooping Cough and Spasmodic Croup---Obstinate, Long-Standing Cough, Too.

Great Laboratory Working Night and Day Trying to Meet Demand.

Mayor Writes

Three-Page Letter of Praise —Read This Brief Extract.

Mr. Andrew Lastine, five times mayor of Marne, Iowa: "I have been troubled with coughing spells for fifteen years. I tried nearly every known medicine without any relief. Then about three years ago I bought Mentho-Laxene. The first dose gave me relief. I am now able to rest and sleep and always have a supply on hand."

New Jersey Folks

Beatrice M. Coulson, 275 Bergen st., Newark, N. J.—"My father had suffered with a bad bronchial cough —Mentho-Laxene is relieving him wonderfully."

Maine Father Writes:

"My wife, my 14-months-old baby and myself all had severe colds with bad coughs, too. We took about a bottle and our colds and coughs were well. It is the best I have ever had." E. H. Mulligan, 197 Lincoln st., Bath, Maine.

California Woman Writes:

"For one year and three months I coughed and nothing would relieve me. I tried doctor's prescriptions, and medicines—at least $50.00 worth in vain. I began then to use Mentho-Laxene, and just as truly as I am living, in two weeks' time my cough was absolutely cured." Mrs. Maud Neelon, 104 Harrison ave., Venice, Calif.

Tried All Kinds—No Good

TEXAS MAN WRITES—"I was suffering with a cough for several months. I tried all kinds of syrups and cough medicines, but they did me no good. A friend told me of Mentho-Laxene—which gave great relief." A. L. Zeinaga, 627 Delgado st., San Antonio, Texas.

A thoughtful nurse writes:

"Almost magical results are secured in acute and stubborn Coughs and Colds.

"The very first dose tends to stop the sneezing and snuffling, check the 'tickle' or spasm that causes severe coughing, loosen the catarrhal phlegm and stop the 'running' secretions of nostrils and eyes."

You, too, must know of this cough and cold medicine that millions of people have found to be quicker and better than the old style ones, in breaking up any annoying, dangerous cold and cough!

It is so inexpensive, too! Why, one bottle saves any family about $3.00—and the very first dose usually brings wonderful surprising relief, although it does not contain chloroform or opiates.

It is so refreshingly pure that its soothing, healing, laxative tonic action just drives the worst colds and coughs right out—the sneezing, snuffling, clogged nostrils, and the tickling, strangling, smothering cough is conquered, and blessed restful sleep can be enjoyed.

Ordinary head, throat and chest colds are subdued, often in 24 hours or less! Old chronic cases of from two to twenty years' standing—chronic bronchitis—seem to yield in a few days to this most successful of all cough medicines—Mentho-Laxene. There is none like it—none so good —none so quick—none so inexpensive!

REWARD:—The Blackburn Products Company, Dayton, Ohio, hereby offer a Reward of $1000 if every letter published is not the genuine unsolicited expression of the users of their medicine, given without pay of any kind.

Mighty Healing Power Proven to People Here

Grippe-Cough Quickly Subdued by Mentho-Laxene Helped Three in Family

Jan. 31, 1923.

Dear Sirs: I want to say a few good words of praise for Mentho-Laxene. My four-year-old son and I had a severe attack of the grippe about two weeks ago. We thought he had the whooping cough at first he did cough so hard, but by the steady use of Mentho-Laxene we cured his cough up completely until now he doesn't cough at all. My husband started to feel like he was taking the grippe also, but as he had to work every day, he began taking Mentho-Laxene and took it regular until his cold was entirely gone and he didn't miss a day's work after all. My trouble was in my throat mostly and when I would feel so choked or my throat so dry, a dose of the syrup would ease it at once. As our whole family was benefited from this great medicine I hope others may learn of it and may receive benefits by my writing of our experience. We are all thankful to have learned of this medicine Mentho-Laxene. I remain respectfully, Mrs. L. Baurley, 308 S. Walter St., Robinson, Ill.

Stopped the Cough Due to "Flu"

Dear Sirs: I sure think the Mentho-Laxene is wonderful. It was the only thing I could get to stop my cough and also my children's when we had the Flu. Yours truly, Mrs. R. Silvey, 6229 Wells av., Wellston, Mo.

ST. LOUIS WOMAN SUFFERED YEARS WITH BRONCHIAL ASTHMA

Awful Attacks Relieved by Mentho-Laxene.

Mrs. L. E. Woodson, 2136 Chestnut St., St. Louis, Mo., writes: "I have taken one bottle of essence Mentho-Laxene and am starting on another. It has helped me so much that I cannot say too much for it. I have suffered from (bronchial) asthma for several years and shortness of breath whenever the weather changes. At such times I have sneezing, coughing and also have awful attacks of asthma. A friend advised me to try your medicine, and I did, and it has helped me so much that I could not do without it. My coughing is almost gone and I don't suffer with the asthma now. I think it is gone or on the way of going. I have not been so well in years."

NOTE—We do not claim that Mentho-Laxene can cure asthma, but the benefits of relief alone is worth much to those who are so afflicted. Should it fail to help anyone, purchase price cheerfully refunded.

St. Louis Family Has Adopted Mentho-Laxene Past Three Years

Husband Coughed All Winter Before Taking.

Mrs. E. Suedmeyer, 4307 N. 20th St., St. Louis, Mo., writes: "I am writing in regard to your wonderful medicine, Mentho-Laxene. I must say it has proven its worth in our family for the past three years, as we are all subject to colds in the winter months, and especially my husband always had a bronchial cough all winter, but since taking Mentho-Laxene he is never troubled any more. We have bought six bottles since we began its use, and many thanks to you for the good medicine and the St. Louis Star for the advertisement, which called it to our attention."

Quickly Astonished

WISCONSIN—"Had suffered with a very bad cough for about three months and could not get rid of it—with numerous cough medicines—a friend advised Mentho-Laxene and I was quickly astonished to find my cough gone after doctoring so long in vain." Theresa Meyer, R. R. No. 1, Box 67, Fredonia, Wis.

REDISCOUNT RATE ADVANCE EVENT OF PAST WEEK

Action by Two Eastern Reserve Banks Revives Memories of What Was Done Several Years Ago—Sterling Is Strong.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Feb. 24.—The Evening Post in its copyrighted weekly financial review says:

"With indications of improving domestic business continuing to multiply, special interest has attached during the past week to the raising of the rediscount rates by the Boston and New York Federal Reserve banks and to the further strength in sterling exchange. Reports from the steel industry continued to be supports to bullish activity, although the pace of upswing which is reflected is such as to cause some misgivings. Steel prices have again advanced materially, and there are some fears of a runaway market. The industry reports that the building trades is quite undeterred by recent advances in the cost of building materials, and that the demand for steel for railroad, oil country and automobile uses shows no signs of slackening. Among steel producers the effort still is to increase output, and the advent of spring, with its greater demand for labor, is anticipated with some apprehension. As it stands, however, the industrial situation is extraordinarily strong. Provided the lessons of 1919 and 1920 are not forgotten, the outlook is bright.

Strength of Sterling.

"Raising of the rediscount rate by two of our Eastern Reserve banks naturally revives memories of those two remarkable years. The present situtaion is, of course, essentially different from that of 1919. At that time an extravagant boom was being built on a foundation of spurious demand, the whole thing being superimposed on the inflated values of the war period. The reserves of banking power were drawn down close to the danger point. Now, on the other hand, the movement has a sound basis in the real needs for buildings and for rehabilitation of the railroads. Prices ar lower and bank reserves are high. In a sense, the increase of official rates are merely a recognition of the marked recovery from depression in business and a bringing in line of the rates at the two banks in question with those prevailing at most of their fellow institutions.

"Sterling's strength is a natural result of what has gone before. Last year's persistent rise was merely a reflection of the progress Great Britain has been making in putting her commercial and financial houses in order. The present advance is a response to the same sort of influence. Greater optimism over the Turkish outlook and a flow of European funds to London on account of the Ruhr tangle undoubtedly are bullish factors of the moment. Behind these, however, are Britain's steady recovery of her foreign markets and the consistent improvement in her Government's finances. With floating debt materially reduced, it is now apparent that the fiscal year which is drawing to a close will furnish a substantial surplus to be applied to debt redemption. Even if the outlook for next year's budget, which will include provision for service on the American debt and which will benefit less from sales of war stores, is not so good, it is altogether likely that British taxes will keep a balance on the right side. Meanwhile, the unequivocal assumption of the debt to this country and the conclusion of the funding agreement mark another step in British post-war reconstruction."

"Stock market quotations worked lower during the first hour of trading this morning, but the selling finally met with resistance or slightly above yesterday's low levels. The volume of trading was decidedly less than during recent sessions and business appeared to be largely of professional origin. Bond prices were lower also with practically all varieties selling off under the weight of substantial offerings. Business in the various liberty issues was especially heavy and transactions in some of the speculative domestic corporation bonds were larger than is normally the case on Saturday morning.

Exchange Rates React.

"The reactionary tendency which developed yesterday in the foreign exchange markets continued today. Heaviness in sterling was the principal feature, the quotation declining to $4.70⅝, which represented a net loss for the day of ¾ of a cent. French francs and the other allied exchanges were also weaker, francs dropping 3 poits to 6.04½ cents. German marks, however, remained unchanged to .004¾ of a cent. Reaction continued in the Scandinavian group and Canadian dollars sold at 98.21 against 98.27 yesterday, thus establishing a new low on the present move. Trading was quiet with few offerings and not much inquiry for any of the foreign currencies.

"For the first time in several weeks the weekly statement of the Clearing House shows a deficit in reserve. The deficit amounted to $17,628,000, and compares with a surplus of $19,282,000 a week ago. This was accompanied by an increase of $24,742,000 in loans and discounts the total of which now stands at $4,752,000,000. Demand deposits, meanwhile, decreased $3,484,000 to $2,962,881,000, but time deposits at $387,127,000 show a gain of $21,856,000.

I. C. C. AUTHORIZES STOCK DIVIDEND BY L. & N. ROAD

WASHINGTON, Feb. 24.—Permission was given the Louisville & Nashville Railroad today by the Interstate Commerce Commission to issue $43,000,000 in new stock and distribute it as a stock dividend to present stockholders of the company.

Two conditions were attached to the permission under the terms of the commission's decision. By one of them, the L. & N. company is bound to retain all of its present holdings of securities of subsidiary corporations, and to refrain from disposing of any of them until specific permission of the commission is procured. The second condition is that the company refrain hereafter from capitalizing in stock or bond issues the values arising from any expenditures for improvements, betterments or additions to its line made prior to Oct. 1, 1922.

The stock dividend, the first which any railroad corporation has been authorized to make by the commission since it was given power under the transportation act to supervise capital issues of transportation companies, was declared by the railroad on the ground that its present issues of stock did not fully cover the values of securities held in the corporation treasury, or the value of new investment put into its properties in recent years from earnings.

Notes.

NEW YORK, Feb. 24.—The Sullivan Machine Co. has declared a quarterly dividend of $1 a share, payable April 16, to holders of record March 31, as against the quarterly dividend of 75 cents in 1922.

Shipments of fresh and cured meats from Chicago for the week ending today totaled 33,115,000, compared with 36,717,000 the same week last year.

The Hupp Motor Co. has declared a stock dividend of 10 per cent on common.

BRITISH EXCHANGE CONTINUES RISE, FEATURING WEEK

One Source Credits Upward Movement to Absence of Commercial Bills — Franc Tone Variable.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Feb. 24.—The Evening Post, in its copyrighted weekly foreign exchange review today, says:

"Movements in foreign exchange during the past week were of unusual importance and were regarded as indicating an essential change in international affairs. Most interest was attached to the continued upward movement in sterling, which carried demand rates up to $4.75, the highest level touched since the English Government peg at $4.76¾ was withdrawn on March 20, 1919, the rate for sterling on that day ranging from $4.71 to $4.69. This advance practically started immediately after the British Government arranged for the settlement of its debt to this nation, but in its progress it has been attributed to the manner in which Continental developments were construed. Bankers concerned in recent large transactions in sterling, however, hold to the view that the upward movement in sterling has been due to an absolute absence of commercial bills and to a constant accumulation of requirements against sales of imports and other commercial purposes.

"French exchange showed a variable tone, yielding at intervals, but showed a good rallying tendency and made a gain as a result of the week's trading. Danish exchange was one of the strongest features and also made a substantial advance. German was in decreased demand, falling to .0040¼ from its recent high of .0052¾, but also improved in the later trading. South American exchanges were strong. Indian exchange made substantial progress in recovering from the decline which followed the gold export movement.

"The reactionary tendency which developed yesterday in the foreign exchange markets continued today. Heaviness in sterling was the principal feature, the quotation declining to $4.70½, which represented a net loss for the day of ⅝ of a cent. French francs and the other allied exchanges were also weaker, francs dropping 3 points, to 6.04½ cents. Reaction continued in the Scandinavian group and Canadian dollars sold at 98.31, against 98.37 yesterday, thus establishing a new low on the present move. Trading was quiet, with few offerings, and not much inquiry for any of the foreign currencies."

Following are Saturday's quotations:

—SPECIAL DAILY—

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Feb. 24.—Today's market movement, while extremely irregular, had very little suggestion of weakness. Prices were inclined to slip off during the first hour, but the market hardened again toward the end when better support appeared in United States Steel common and special buying was renewed in some of the oils, the dry goods shares and a few of the high priced rails.

Louisville & Nashville had another jump forward anticipating early announcement of approval of the stock dividend plan and Atlantic Coast Line went along with it. The strength in these stocks helped the entire railway list and had a steadying effect upon the rest of the market.

Although the copper metal was reported higher, the copper shares were indifferent. Sugar stocks were strong for a time under the lead of Punta Alegre and Cuban Dominican, but their advance was not sustained.

In the last half hour when Louisville & Atlantic Coast Line were making their high prices buying came into some of the other rails notably New York Central and Atchison.

The market closed uncertain with a series of small net advances mingled with small net declines. The strength of some of the railway shares was the principal feature at the end.

STERLING MAY GO HIGHER, DECLARES LONDON REVIEWER

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and New York Evening Post.

LONDON, Feb. 24.—Arthur W. Kiddy, editor of Bankers' Magazine and financial editor of the London Morning Post, in financial review today says:

"The rise in your Federal reserve bank rate has given a cold douche to the markets. Hitherto the Ruhr crisis and indeed all political developments have been disregarded in the face of extreme monetary ease, and while conceivably the rise in your rates may not be reflected here, the mere possibility of a change has imparted a check to activity. Keen interest exists in the action of the Federal reserve banks, because opinions here have differed considerably as to how the reserve board would regard the effect of your inflationary tendency with the rise in commodity prices and the advance in sterling.

"Our cables, in referring to sterling, emphasize the improvement of our credit position, partly in connection with the funding of the debt. We are not, however, inclined to overemphasize that aspect, believing that the course of American exchange is more likely to be determined by your general financial currency policy than by conditions here. Nevertheless, I am still inclined to believe that over a period of some months sterling will advance further, possibly even to par, and that the real strain is likely to come much later, when, after partial or complete rehabilitation of European countries, the struggle for international trade really commences. Any long-distance view inevitably prompts serious considerations, because if debtor countries ever are to regain their lost position, there must be much greater economy and harder work. Chancellor of the Exchequer Baldwin made a further excellent speech, indicating that our Government is concentrating on drastic economies. Numerous dismissals of Government employes are taking place, and it is even possible that expenditure for education may be curtailed for a while.

"At the recent annual meeting of the British Overseas Banks Association, a strong feeling was evidenced for accelerating the development of the empire's resources, both by loans and emigration from here. The Duke of Devonshire, who was the chief guest, indicated that our Government is strongly sympathetic.

"The best quarters here are still unable to discern any daylight in the Ruhr and reparation crisis. The French action still occasions misgivings in the financial district. Unless the Ruhr crisis is relieved quickly it is believed that a further fall in the franc is inevitable."

This booklet give facts about getting a higher yield with positive safety that every investor should know.

to Test the Safety of Every Investment

1 Is Your Investment Protected by Property of Permanent Value? "How to Select Safe Bonds" tells why investments should be protected by property having a permanent value well in excess of the amount of the entire loan.
2 Does Your Claim Command Payment Before Other Obligations? The securities that come before all others in obligation to pay promptly and fully.
3 Has The Property a Sufficient Earning Power? A safe property must have an annual earning power of at least two and a half times the total annual interest on the loan.
4 Is The Property Adequately Protected By Insurance? An important consideration, as fire often wipes out overnight a valuable property.
5 Is It Properly Managed? Proper management is essential to insure prompt payment of interest and principal upon maturity.
6 Is The Title Clear? A sure way of insuring against loss through faulty title.
7 What Is The Moral Character Of The Borrower? As important as proper management.
8 Who Offers The Securities You Buy? "How to Select Safe Bonds" tells why even the experienced investor must depend for safety entirely upon the reputation and length of service of the Banking House offering the investment. It tells of the policy which has made it possible for George M. Forman & Company to sell bonds for 38 years without loss to any customer.

CATTLE RULE STEADY BUT HOGS ARE DOWN

Cattle closed steady to slightly higher and hogs, sheep and lambs lower at the St. Louis National Stockyards for the week just ended. Receipts of cattle and sheep were of comparatively light volume, while hogs were in liberal supply. Fluctuations in cattle and calves were slight. Beef steers, compared with a week ago average strong to 15c higher; butcher yearlings steady; butcher cows 25c and some cases 40c higher; canner and cutter cows 10c to 15c higher; beef bulls steady; bologna bulls 15c to 25c higher; stocker and feeder steers steady to strong and veal calves 25c, possibly 50c higher. Virtually all classes of stock, yearlings excepted, were active in the week's trade. Demand for yearlings continued rather indifferent. Receipts were about an average in quality. The bulk of steers suitable for killers varied from $7.25 to $8.75 per cwt., largely, with several droves bringing $9.75, the top. Light yearlings varied mainly from $5 to $7.75, some better kinds $9.25. Butcher cows ranged largely from $4.25 to $6.25, cutter cows $3.25 to $3.75, and canner cows $2.75 to $3. Weighty beef bulls were available at $4.75 to $5.50, medium to good bolognas $4.25 to $5.25, and lights bulls and canners $3.25 to $4. Stocker and feeder cattle varied from steady to strong in the week's session. Steers ranged mainly from $4.50 for plain stockers to $7.50 for a good kind of feeder. Stock cows were quotable at $3.25 to $4.25, heifers $3.50 to $5.50, and bulls $3.50 to $4.50. Veal calves sold on a strong, active basis throughout the week, the majority of best lights centering around the $13 mark, and tops registering $13.25. Values were generally from 25c to 50c higher than the close the previous week. Southern canner yearlings strong, most going from $2.75 to $3@3.50.

Hog Receipts Large.

Receipts of swine for the week just closing have been quite heavy, the six-day supply footing up 111,000 head. This is the second largest run so far the current year and not far from the market's record. Last week arrivals were 87,000 and the same period a year ago only 69,000 head got in. The very heavy marketing of hogs here and elsewhere seem to bear out the Government estimates of autumn and midwinter reflecting increase supplies of pigs farrowed and on feed. Quality of the week's arrivals has been good for the most part although during the forepart of the period there was a rather large proportion of southern light stuff which sold in many cases $1 to $2 per cwt. under choice hard finished natives of the same weight. There was no lack of heavy butcher and well finished swine, however. As could be expected the liberal supplies forced a lower range of prices. The week opened sharply lower but a temporary letup in arrivals luring the midsession afforded some relief and part of the early declines were regained. From Friday on, however, the market again broke under a plethora of supplies and the week closed with losses on various classes ranging as follows: Heavy finished swine 250 lbs. and up 15c to 30c lower, medium butchers 220 to 250 lbs. off 25c to 35c, light butchers 190 to 220 lbs. off 25c to 40c, shipping hogs 140 to 180 lbs. off 45c to 60c, good pigs 15c and 25c lower, peewee pigs the same, rough packer sows 50c to 69c lower, stags 25c to 50c lower. The demand for feeding and stock pigs was been rather light all week, not only here but at other markets and country points as well. The break in fat hog prices has dampened the ardor of feeders and they are now more inclined to sell their corn than to market it through swine. Feeding hogs are 15 to 20 per cent cheaper than a year ago but this is more than offset by corn prices which are 25 to 30 per cent over the range this time in 1922. At the week's close the various classes of swine, good to choice quality, natives, were selling as follows: Heavy finished swine 260 lbs. and up $7.70 to $7.80, medium to good weight 230 to 250 lbs., $7.80 to $7.95, light butchers 190 to 210 lbs., $7.95 to $8.15, shipping hogs 130 to 180 lbs., $8.10 to $8.25, strong weight pigs 100 to 120 lbs., $7.50 to $8, peewee pigs $6 to $7, packing sows $6.25 to $6.50, stags $5.25 to $5.75, immune stock pigs 80 to 100 lbs. $8.75 to $9, feeding sows, immune $7 to $7.50.

Lamb Prices Lower.

All week the receipts were light of both sheep and lambs, which, however, was expected, as they have been running light for several weeks, and it is the time of the year when they are expected to be light. The trade is slightly lower than a week ago on lambs, but sheep are about as high as they have been any time during the past few months. Heavy lambs are poor sellers. At the present time best handy weight lambs are selling at $14.50@14.75; medium and heavy lambs, $13.75@14.25; fair grades, $12.50@13.50; culls, $10@12; mutton sheep, $7.75@8.25; heavy and plain ewes, $6@6.50; wethers, $8.50@9; choppers and bucks, $4.50@5.50, and canners, $2@3. Heavy sheep, like lambs, are poor sellers.

Horses and Mules.

There was no pronounced change in the week's horse and mule market. Receipts were about an average in number, approximating 2000 head on commission, and movement was reasonably active on the better grades in particular. Good, big work horses and the various classes of southerners sold steady, strong in spots. There was no improvement in other clases and plain, half-fed farm horses were at the lowest point of the season. Horses constituted only about 25 per cent of the week's arrivals. Average trade in mules was steady, with here and there a stronger trend indicated on some favored classes. These were fat, good-haired offerings and mules with size. Little stuff sold steady, but demand was rather uncertain.

GRAINS CLOSE LOWER ON LOCAL EXCHANGE

Grain futures closed slightly lower at the week-end on the Merchants' Exchange. Corn led the downward tendency.

In the local cash grain market Saturday No. 2 red wheat was 2c lower, No. 3 red steady to 2c off, and No. 4s 1c to 2c lower. Local mills bought about 20 cars, mostly soft wheat of the cheaper grades and a quantity of hard wheat. Shipping demand was very limited. There was practically no demand for No. 2 red, with possibly 15 cars No. 2 and No. 3 carried over. Hard wheat met fair milling demand at steady prices. No dark wheat was on the market.

Cash corn was steady to ½c higher. Local industries bought freely of both white and mixed and a fair shipping order demand for the same kinds was met but no business in mixed corn.

Cash oats were steady to ½c higher, the advance being recorded by No. 2 and No. 3 whites. Shippers and locals took the offerings.

The early price range was narrow but the bottom quotations were about last night's close. Liverpool opened ¼d to ⅝d higher and closed ⅝d to ½d net higher. There was some evening up over the week end.

GRAIN LIST CLOSES LOWER ON THE CHICAGO BOARD

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, Feb. 24.—There was a little better tone to the wheat market today. Trade was unusually slow but the buying by commission houses at the start took enough wheat out of the pit to make locals sweat who sold it short on the opening bulge. The strength in Liverpool due to the better demand from the continent for cargoes caused the early buying and there was some indication of buying by futures for English account. Advices from Washington tended to lead the trade to believe that there will be activity in Congress in regard to farm credit legislation. The weather map showed precipitation over the entire winter wheat belt with the exception of Western Kansas and Nebraska. Milling demand for wheat was quiet. Seaboard reported some Manitoba wheat worked for export. Market closed ⅛c lower to ⅛c higher. May $1.17⅝@1.17⅝; July $1.14⅜; Sept. $1.12⅝. There was a little reaction late in sympathy with coarse grains.

Corn trade was quiet and price changes were of little consequence. Business was almost entirely local in character. A little commission house selling early turned the market easy. Sales of 50,000 bu of contract corn to go to store were reported. There was some inquiry in the market for corn, seaboard reported, and a moderate business is believed to have been worked. Domestic shipping demand was light. Corn was under pressure of liquidating sales the last 15 minutes and closed ⅛@½c lower; May 74¼@74⅜c; July 75⅛c; Sept. 76c.

Action of oats was the same as corn with trade of reduced volume. Shipping demand was quiet. There was liquidation by corn traders who were long oats and the market closed ⅛@⅜c lower; May 44⅛@44⅛c; July 43⅜c; Sept. 42¾c.

Provisions were higher early on the strength in Liverpool. The market reacted under realizing sales. Some export demand for lard for quick shipment. Lard closed 2½@5c lower and ribs 5@10c lower.

SPOT COTTON CLOSES WEEK AT 29.75 CTS.

NEW YORK, Feb. 24.—Yesterday's advance to 29.90c for May contracts or within 10 points of the long-talked-of 30c level, was followed by moderate reactions in the cotton market today. May sold off to 29.55c, making a decline of 35 points from yesterday's high record and of 10 points from yesterday's closing quotations. That delivery closed at 29.57c, with the general market closing steady at a net decline of 4 to 20 points. The opening was irregular at an advance of 3 to 7 points on old crop positions, but 4 to 15 points lower on the new crop months.

There was some further trade buying and covering of old crop deliveries, but it was supplied by realizing for over the weekend, while there also seemed to be considerable Southern selling and probably some local selling for a reaction. New crop months were pretty well sustained during the early trading. There was considerable selling earlier in the week on reports of good weather in the South and something of a short interest had accumulated which seemed inclined to cover for over the week end. Possibly this demand was promoted by complaints of delayed crop preparations in the Southwest, but it was considered rather early in the season for such a feature to prove of much ultimate importance, and all positions eased off late in the morning under increased realizing. March sold down to 29.50c and October to 25.82c, with the general list showing net losses of 10 to 20 points. The close was a shade up from the lowest on some positions, and after having sold on about even terms during the greater part of the morning, March closed at a premium of 7 points over May. Part of the Southern selling here was attributed to hedging against the increased business reported in spot cotton in the Southern markets, with local traders inclined to believe that some hedges were being sold against purchases from the co-operative organizations. Week end reviews of the domestic cotton goods markets were considered bullish, but no improvement was reported in Manchester.

NEW YORK, Feb. 24.—Cotton, spot quiet; middling, 29.75c.

New Orleans Spot Cotton.

NEW ORLEANS, Feb. 24.—Spot cotton quiet and unchanged; sales on the spot, 426; to arrive 150; low middling, 29c; middling, 29.75c; good middling, 30.25c.

New York Sugar.

NEW YORK, Feb. 24.—The raw sugar market was easier today. Prices were ⅛c lower, with Cubas quoted at 5⅛c, cost and freight, equal to 7.28c for centrifugal. There were sales of 25,000 bags of Cubas, February-March shipment. The raw sugar market was weak under heavy general realizing and final prices were 14 to 24 points net lower, except January, which closed 50 points net lower. The selling seemed to be encouraged by the more liberal offerings in the spot market and the lower ruling in refined. Closing: March, 5.32c; May, 5.51c; July, 5.59c; September, 5.70c. The market for refined sugar was unsettled with prices reduced 25 points by one of the local refiners to the basis of 8.75c for fine granulated. Others, however, remained at 9c, but it was reported that sugar was available in second-hand quarters at below refiners' quotations. Refined sugar futures were easier in sympathy with the decline in the spot market, closing unchanged to 10 points net lower with sales of June at 9.05c and 9c. July and August at 9.20c.

Safeguarding Your Estate

Business Judgment

OF VITAL IMPORTANCE to every man and woman leaving an estate is the selection of an executor or trustee whose business judgment will assure sound administration of the estate. There are numerous cases of individual executors, who, through misjudgment of business conditions, have made investments which in time have resulted in serious losses to the beneficiaries.

It is only after long experience and careful study that it is possible to decide when a certain policy should be adopted to meet changing business conditions.

The St. Louis Union Trust Company, through its years of practice in managing estates involving hundreds of business transactions of almost every kind, has the experience and business judgment so desirable in estate management.

We shall be glad to discuss our Trust service further with you and your attorney, confidentially and without charge.

MILLION PEOPLE every week take PLUTO

IT is largely due to widespread recommendation by the Medical Profession that Pluto Water has become the world's largest-selling laxative, used by a million people every week. Physicians know the danger that lurks in constipation—they know that 80% of all sickness originates in the intestinal tract. They prescribe Pluto because—

¶ 1. It brings quick relief from constipation—30 minutes to two hours. ¶ 2. It is a water laxative—gently flushes the system. ¶ 3. No griping—no after unpleasantness. ¶ 4. Gives an internal bath to the entire intestinal tract. ¶ 5. Bottled at French Lick Springs, Indiana, where thousands yearly seek health.

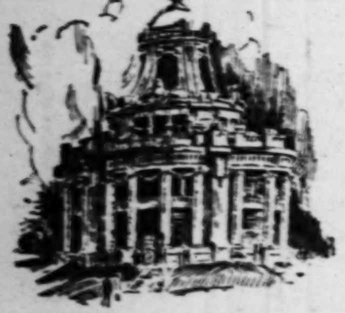
The Gruendler Freezer System



WEST PAVILION
Louisiana Purchase Exposition
St. Louis, 1904

In this building, during the World's Fair in 1904, the first successful Gruendler Freezer Refrigerator was installed and operated. Here it was shown that the Gruendler System using cracked ice and salt could deliver refrigeration that is impossible with ice in block form at a cost of operation that was and is surprising to those not familiar with the method.

The Gruendler Patented System of freezer refrigeration has in a very large measure revolutionized the keeping of perishable foodstuffs. The system is especially applicable to refrigerated display of meats and delicate edibles.

Cracked ice and salt are used without the aid of machinery or chemicals to produce freezing and even lower temperatures. The principle of using cracked ice and salt is old. To Gustav J. Gruendler is due the credit of successfully applying this principle with a circulation of air, without which there could be no real preserving of perishable food.

The Gruendler Company justly feels that through the success of its system many other concerns have been prompted to increase the efficiency of their products with the result that today food merchants are operating with higher type refrigeration.

That merchants throughout the country have fully appreciated the benefits of the system is attested by the rapid growth of the Gruendler Company, making necessary the new and larger quarters in order to properly conduct the business which is now of national proportions.

Be sure to see the exhibit conducted by the Department of Food Inspection at the St. Louis Health Show, this week at the Coliseum.

ociety's Attention Is on the Community Fund Campaign

Next Ten Days Will Be Devoted to Working for Contributions for 40 Charitable Organizations—Junior League "Follies" to be Dispensed With This Year.

WITH social activities curtailed because of Lent, the maids and matrons remaining in town during this period are preparing to devote the next 10 days to the first annual campaign of the community fund, which began Friday, and will continue until March 5, unless the announced goal of $1,081,684 is reached before that day. Forty charitable, social service and philanthropic organizations in St. Louis, comprising what is known as the Community Chest, have banded together in the common interest of raising money with which to carry on their individual work.

The Junior League, Barnes Hospital, the St. Louis Children's Hospital, Big Sister Organization, Young Women's Christian Association, besides various orphans' homes, are participating in the drive for funds now being carried on, consequently society will be deprived of the fun of producing and witnessing the Junior League "Follies"; the annual bazar of the Board of Religious Organizations, and an endless chain of dances, bridge parties and entertainments "for charity." Not that society will forego such things, but that there will be no obligations on its part to foster them in the interest of any welfare agency, for the community fund hopes to raise sufficient money to care for all of its member organizations in its first campaign.

The city has been divided into 42 districts, with 10 or 12 women and girls assigned to each, and all working under the leadership of a general chairman. The campaign affords opportunity for those who give their services in the interests of charity and philanthropy each year to work directly for the 40 agencies rather than for the customary one or more of the past, and as each organization involved has agreed to cease solicitation for one year after the present goal has been reached, society will be free to discharge their obligations without thought of, or interference by, their pet charities.

Women participating in the drive not serving on teams canvassing the city and county for funds, are interested as members of governing boards of its various agencies.

Some of those prominently identified with the community fund campaign are Mmes. Harry Potter, Clarence Hopkins King, Harry C. January, Guy Oliver, Watts Smyth, Ralph Bixby, Robert A. Holland, Auguste E. Ewing, V. W. Bergenthal, Edmund F. Brown, James T. Caradine, F. B. Chamberlain, W. R. Chivvis, George Kimball Conant, Alden H. Little, Edwin H. Steedman, Arthur Corbitt, Thomas Q. Dix, Howard Kehde, Benjamin G. Chapman Jr., J. P. Dubail, Catherine Fertig, H. M. French, F. M. Frampton, Anna Fletcher Harris, John A. Haskell, Glenn Hill, Clay E. Jordan, Joseph W. Lewis, Charles Rice, J. Lionberger Davis, F. L. Scott, Gus V. R. Mechin, Thomas C. Woodward, E. A. Kieselhorst, W. P. Evans, J. M. Hutchinson, F. H. Wielandy, Thomas L. Anderson, Frederick C. Nardin, Herbert I. Finch, Charles Scarritt, and Misses Eppes Hawes, Catherine Louise Crunden, Carol Bates, Marion L. Griffin, Louisa Leete, Geraldine Lermit and others.

A social item of unusual interest here is an announcement, made in Detroit, of the engagement of Miss Isabelle de Mun Palms, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles L. Palms of Detroit, and Harold R. Buckley, son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Buckley of Springfield, Mass. The prospective bride is the granddaughter of Julius S. Walsh Sr., of 4510 Lindell boulevard, and a niece of Mrs. William H. Maffitt. She spends a few weeks each year here. Mrs. Palms is at present the guest of Mr. Walsh. Miss Palms was educated at Eden Hall, Philadelphia, and at Manhattanville, N. Y. She made her debut in December at the Grosse Point Country Club in Detroit.

Mr. Buckley is a graduate of the Taft School, and gave up his college studies to become an ambulance driver for the French during the war. Later he entered an American aviation school and became a Major in that branch of the service. He has been decorated with the Croix de Guerre and received two additional citations. The wedding will take place in the autumn, and the couple will occupy a home of their own on the new Palms estate at Grosse Point.

St. Louisans are interested in the marriage Wednesday of Miss Winifred Wilder Hadley, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. W. F. L. Miss Mary Edwards Becomes Bride of Charles Harold McCrea.

MISS MARY EDWARDS, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Lockett Edwards, became the bride last night of Charles Harold McCrea, culminating an interesting engagement which has existed for several months, although its announcement had been deferred until January, pending the return of Mr. McCrea from India, where he has been in the interest of his business.

The ceremony was performed at 8:30 o'clock, in the Edwards home, 7230 Maryland avenue, by the Rev. Wilkins of the Episcopal Church of Kirkwood, where Mr. and Mrs. Edwards and their family formerly made their home. The bridal party stood under a canopy of smilax, ferns and sweet peas, and those flowers formed a conspicuous part of the decorations throughout the house. A reception followed. The white satin aisle ribbons were held by George Lockett Edwards Jr., and John Edwards, brothers of the bride, and her sisters, Misses Katherine and Mildred Edwards, were maid of honor and bridesmaid, respectively. The Misses Edwards were gowned similarly in crepe, Miss Katherine in robin's-egg blue, and Miss Mildred in pink, each made on long straight lines and trimmed with crystal beading. The maid of honor carried pink butterfly roses and white lilacs, and the bridesmaid's flowers were Columbia roses and pink sweet peas.

The bride wore a simply draped ivory satin gown, with pearls outlining the neck, and strands of them holding the slashed short sleeves. The skirt drapery was caught at one side with a pearl ornament. Depending from the shoulders was a satin court train, lined with pearl studded shirred chiffon, and over the whole fell a filmy tulle veil arranged to her coiffure with a band and clusters of orange blossoms. She carried a shower bouquet of lilies of the valley.

Mrs. McCrea is a graduate of Mary Institute and Wellesley College. She made an informal debut as maid of honor at the Veiled Prophet ball three years ago, and has served since in that capacity.

Mr. McCrea is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter McCrea of Loganport, Ind. He is a graduate of Purdue University and served as a Captain in the army during the war.

SOCIAL ACTIVITIES OF MISSOURI COLONY AT WASHINGTON

From a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 24.—The filibuster in the Senate against the ship subsidy bill played havoc with Washington social plans this week. Dinner after dinner has been abandoned because of Senators ringing up at the last moment and stating that they cannot attend because the Sergeant-at-arms will not let them.

So the smart thing has been to adjourn the dinner parties to the Senate restaurant, where the Senators can slip away for a meal and afterward go upstairs in the reserved galleries to listen to "Jim" Reed give a geography lesson with infinite delay on his project to accept the British West Indies for the British debt.

Filibustering has often been a favorite game at the end of congressional sessions.

President and Mrs. Harding are happily preparing for their jaunt into Florida at the end of the session. While in Palm Beach the Edward Beale McLeans will be their hosts. Mrs. Harding will decline all social invitations at her doctor's advice.

The Vice President and Mrs. Coolidge will remain in Washington at least until the President returns.

Rear Admiral and Mrs. Coontz went to Annapolis on Saturday, where they were the guests of honor at a luncheon given there by the superintendent of the Naval Academy and Mrs. Henry B. Wilson before the basketball game between the Army and Navy teams.

Mrs. Frederick Dent Grant is suffering from an attack of the grip. Prince Michael Cantacuzene came from New York during the week to visit his mother, who is staying with Mrs. Grant.

Former Governor Hadley of Missouri was one of the speakers at the banquet of the committee organizing the American Institute of Law, to simplify the legal code and harmonize conflicting laws, at the New Willard Hotel, Friday night. Several hundred lawyers and jurists came to Washington to attend the sessions and many social entertainments were given in their honor.

Among the books which have been presented to the Congressional Club library during the past month was an autographed copy of "My Quarter Century of American Politics" by the late Champ Clark. The books were the gift of the Missouri delegation in Congress who were fortunate enough to obtain a set which had been autographed by Clark.

Air Commander Patrick Bellinger, his wife and young son have arrived in Washington for several weeks' visit as the house guests of Miss Isabel Wells. Mrs. Bellinger was Miss Miriam Benoist of St. Louis before her marriage, several years ago.

Former Gov. and Mrs. Joseph W. Folk entertained at dinner on Friday in honor of visiting jurists here in connection with the organization of the Institute of Law. Judge and Mrs. Folk were the guests of Interstate Commerce Commissioners and Mrs. Charles C. McChord at the banquet of the Southern Society on Tuesday evening, at which Hon. John W. Davis, former Ambassador to Great Britain, William Jennings Bryan and Col. John Temple Graves were speakers.

The Missouri colony, as well as the great contingent here from Illinois and Washington society in general, were shocked to learn of the death on George Washington's birthday of Mrs. John A. Logan, widow of the Civil War General. Mrs. Logan was nearly 90 years old, but active until her last illness. Mrs. Logan was born Mary Cunningham, in Boone County. She was educated in Missouri and lived there until her marriage to the young lawyer, John A. Logan of Illinois. She was a close personal friend of Mrs. John B. Henderson, widow of the former Senator of Missouri, and also of Mrs. Champ Clark.

Mrs. George D. Hope gave an informal dinner and dance Tuesday for her Missouri guest, Miss Virginia Perry of Kansas City, who shared honors with Miss Helen Husted and Mrs. Thomas Bowles.

Mrs. Breckinridge Long was not at home yesterday, having discontinued her afternoons at home until after Easter.

BISHOP WISE NOONDAY SPEAKER

He Will Conduct This Week's Services at Christ Church Cathedral.

The Rt. Rev. James Wise, Episcopal Bishop of Kansas, will be the speaker this week at the noonday Lenten services of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew at Christ Church Cathedral. He will speak every noon but Saturday, with the general theme, "The Cost of Being an American Citizen; Are You Paying the Price?"

Bishop Wise will preach today at the 10 a. m. service at St. Stephen's Church and at the 11 a. m. service at St. Michael and All Angels' Church; Wednesday evening at Trinity Church; Thursday morning at the Church of the Holy Communion, of which he was rector before his elevation to the episcopate, and Thursday evening at St. George's Church.

Don't Squeeze Black-Heads—Dissolve Them
Squeezing and pinching out blackheads make the pores large and cause irritation. Blackheads are caused by accumulations of dust and dirt and secretions from the skin, and there is only one safe and sure way, and one that never fails to get rid of them—a simple way, too—that is to dissolve them. Just get from any drug store about two ounces of calonite powder—sprinkle a little on a hot, wet cloth—rub over the blackheads briskly for a few seconds—wash off and you'll be surprised to see that every blackhead has disappeared, and the skin will be left soft and the pores in their natural condition.

New Hair Remover in Demand, Say Druggists

(Phelactine Removes Roots and All)

Since the virtues of phelactine as a hair remover became generally known, druggists in this country have been having a really extraordinary demand for this remarkable product. The fact that it actually removes the roots—before one's very eyes—as well as the surface hairs, is of course mainly responsible for its large and increasing sale. The new method is not to be compared at all with the usual depilatory, electrical or other processes. It is entirely safe, non-irritating, non-poisonous, odorless—and instantaneous! A stick of phelactine, used in accordance with the simple instructions which accompany it, is certain to satisfy and delight the user.

BE PRETTY! TURN GRAY HAIR DARK

Try Grandmother's Old Favorite Recipe of Sage Tea and Sulphur

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and luster to the hair when faded, streaked or gray. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this famous old recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, at a small cost.

Don't stay gray! Try it! No one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy and attractive.

CITIES IN CONTEST OVER STANDARDS FOR NURSES

Foristel Leading Support of Measure to Lower Educational Requirements.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Feb. 24.—Whether the standard of education required of registered nurses shall be lowered from a requirement of four years' high school work or its equivalent to that of only a grammar school education is the principal item of contention in a fight being waged in the Legislature between Kansas City and St. Louis groups.

Edward W. Foristel, attorney, is leading the fight to lower the educational requirements. With him to a hearing on the measures came representatives of 10 St. Louis hospitals. Only Barnes, Children's and the Jewish Hospital protested against the proposal, though St. Luke's and St. John's have taken no active part in the dispute.

Kansas City hospitals, without exception, backed up by the Jackson County Medical Society and innumerable civic and women's organizations of Kansas City, are opposing any change in the standard.

Foristel and the hospital men aligned with him contend that, due to the high standing required, there is a scarcity of nurses, especially for the smaller institutions. They contend also that the high standard causes the salaries of nurses to be such that patients in moderate or poor circumstances cannot meet the expense.

There Are Licensed Attendants.

Trained nurses who now have the degree of "registered nurse" declare that the present law on nursing provides for all contingencies, and that hospitals which desire may now have the services of persons of lesser educational qualifications as "licensed attendants," which degree is conferred upon persons 19 years old or over, of good character, who have completed a grammar school education or equivalent, or a course of instruction at any approved school, hospital sanitarium, and who have had experience in a hospital. Nurses of higher training say, however, that the demand for the change is coming principally from practical nurses of slight training, who, despite that fact, want the title "R. N."

The law as it stands, administered by the State Board of Nurses' Examiners, provides that outside of St. Joseph, Joplin and Springfield, persons may care for the sick upon receiving a certificate signed by any licensed and practicing physician, stating that the holder is competent to do so. This enables practical nurses to work in the larger cities and in the rural districts. The law also provides that persons may wait upon their friends or fellow worshipers in any religious sect without interference. These people, however, may not use the title "registered nurses."

The Present Law.

The present nurses' law in Missouri was enacted in 1921, but already has been adopted by the Rockefeller Foundation as a model for recommendation to other States. It requires that applicants be 21 years old, have completed a high school education or its equivalent and a two-year nursing course. The Foristel forces won the first round in the committees of both Houses, committee substitutes for pending bills being reported out favorably.

Miss Mary G. Burman, member of the Nurses' Board and Superintendent of Mercy Hospital of Kansas City, and Miss Frances Shouse, also of Kansas City, are here pleading the case of the registered nurses, while Miss Anna C. Maguire of St. Louis and Mrs. Charlotte Mueller of St. Joseph are looking after interests of the practical nurses.

TICKET ARREST SYSTEM FOR TRAFFIC CASES PUT IN EFFECT

The Police Department yesterday instituted a ticket arrest system for non-hazardous violations of traffic ordinances. Persons charged with minor violations, under the new plan, will be released without a trip to the police station, upon acceptance of notification to appear in Police Court at a stipulated time.

The plan was evolved during conferences between police officials and the Mayor's Traffic Committee. The purpose is to save time of the arresting officers and of the alleged violators. The ticket arrest system will not apply to violations which constitute a felony, such as leaving the scene of an accident, criminal carelessness and the more serious offenses.

Persons who fail to appear in court as directed will be arrested formally. Policemen have been supplied with books of tickets. Space is provided for identification of the violator and details of the charge as well as directions where and when to appear in court.

MUNICIPAL OPERA PRODUCTION CAST HIGHER THIS YEAR

Advance Estimated at About $5000 a Week—Price of Seats to Performances Not to Be Increased.

GREATER ATTENDANCE RELIED ON CHIEFLY

Sound Amplifiers Expected to Increase Demand for Higher-Located, Lower-Priced Seats

Plans for this season's performances of the Municipal Opera involve production expenses about $5000 a week higher than those of last year. The prices are not to be increased, and the management will depend on an increase in attendance to bring the receipts up to the new requirements.

The prices will be: Box seats, $2; reserved seats, $1.50, $1 and 50 cents, and unreserved seats in the last section,, 25 cents. The division of reserved seat sections, as between the different prices, will be the same as last summer, but the number of $1.50 and $1 seats will be less, because chairs of permanent type have been placed in the first 22 rows, and these are wider than the collapsible chairs used last summer.

Sound Amplifiers.

The new sound amplifiers, plans for which have been announced, are expected to increase the demand for the higher-located, lower-priced seats. As to this, Nelson Cunliff, chairman of the committee in charge, said:

"It was our experience last year, when the front seats were sold, that many did not attend the performances because they were afraid they could not hear in the $1 and the 50-cent seats. The sound amplifier will obviate this loss in business and will also attract a large number of patrons who cannot afford the higher priced locations.

"Last summer the capacity of the theater was taxed only on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday nights of each week. The enormous demand for seats for the coming summer leads us to believe that capacity audiences will be the rule at least at five of the seven performances each week. Incidentally, it will be well for St. Louisans to subscribe now for season reservations if they desire good seats for the 1923 performanecs. Advance subscriptions totaling $46,000 have already been received, and these have exhausted the supply of box seats for Wednesday, Thursday and Friday nights. However, there are plenty of the $1.50, $1 and 50 cent seats for these nights, and all-priced seats may be had for Monday, Tuesday, Saturday and Sunday nights.

May Reserve Any Seats.

"There seems to be a general impression that advance reservations may be made only in the box seat and $1.50 sections. This is not true. Subscriptions may be made in advance for all-priced seats, and this is the only method whereby anyone may be assured of good seat locations at all the opera performances. We expect to have an advance sale of $100,000 by May 28, when the first performance will be given."

The average cost of each of the eight productions of last summer was $20,650. The cost of the 10 individual productions scheduled for the coming summer is estimated at $25,000, the increase being due to an increase in salary for the chorus of 90, half salary for the chorus and principals during the four weeks' rehearsal period prior to the opening of the season, increased expenditures in salaries for principals and contemplated improvements in the Municipal Theater and its equipment.

Members of Committee.

The Executive Productions Committee of the Municipal Theater Association, which has charge of the details of the opera season, includes, besides Cunliff, Max Koenigsberg, G. A. Buder, D. R. Calhoun, Col. Joseph Gilman Miller, Fred W. Pape, H. J. Pettengill, Otto E. Rugg and Arthor Siegel. Miss Sarah Wolf is the secretary. David E. Russell, a local theatrical manager, is manager for the association. The permanent offices of the association have been established at 1880 Arcade Building, where reservation of seats may be made.

Warner's
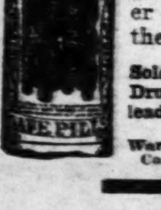
have been the ideal Family Laxative for 40 years—a guarantee of reliability. Gentle in action, they are entirely free from injurious drugs, and are intended especially for constipation, biliousness, indigestion, torpid liver or inactivity of the bowels.
Sold by Wolff-Wilson Drug Co. and all leading druggists.
Warner's Safe Remedies Co., Rochester, N. Y.



What I Have Learned in 47 Years Practice
I HAVE been watching the results of constipation for 47 years, since I began the practice of medicine back in 1875. I am now 83 years old, and though from time to time the medical profession makes some wonderfully interesting experiments and tests, the fundamentals of causes and relief in this particular ailment are unchanged.
But the people take greater interest today in their health, in diet, exercise and the drinking of water. Constipation, however, will occur from time to time no matter how one tries to avoid it. Of next importance, then, is how to treat it when it comes. I believe in getting as close to nature as possible, hence my remedy for constipation, known as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, is a mild vegetable compound. It is made of Egyptian senna and pepsin with agreeable aromatics. Children will not willingly take bitter things. Syrup Pepsin is pleasant-tasting, and youngsters love it. It does not gripe. Thousands of mothers have written me to that effect.
Over 10 million bottles of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin are now sold every year, and it is the most widely bought family laxative in the world. I say family laxative because all in the family can use it with safety. It is mild enough for the infant in arms, effective in the most chronic constipation of an adult. The formula is on every package.
Recently there has been a new wave of drastic physics. Calomel, a mercurial that salivates and loosens teeth, has been revived; salt waters and powders that draw needed constituents from the blood; coal tar disguised in candy form that causes skin eruptions. In a practice of 47 years I have never seen any reason for their use when a medicine like Syrup Pepsin will empty the bowels just as promptly, more cleanly and gently, without griping, and without shock to the system.
Keep free from constipation! It lowers your strength 28 per cent, hardens the arteries and brings on premature old age. Do not let a day go by without a bowel movement. Do not sit and hope but go to a druggist and get a bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It is a generous-size bottle. Take a teaspoonful that night and by morning you will be well. The cost is only about a cent a dose. Use Syrup Pepsin for yourself and members of the family in constipation, biliousness, sour and crampy stomach, piles, indigestion, loss of appetite or sleep, and to break up fevers and colds. Always have a bottle in the house, and observe these three rules of health: Keep the head cool, the feet warm, the bowels open.

I REPEAT MY FREE OFFER
$10,000 worth of trial bottles of Syrup Pepsin free
Last year I agreed to spend $10,000 cash for free samples of my Syrup Pepsin, and send them free and postage paid to all who asked. A tremendous mail was the result. But there must be many who did not write. I would like to get their address this time. So I now renew my offer, in remembrance of my approaching 84th birthday, and will again devote $10,000 to free samples. I am anxious to see one in every American home. Write for yours today. Simply give me your address. Send it to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 515 Washington St., Monticello, Illinois. Mine is truly a free gift; it costs the public nothing.

DEMOCRATS SUPPORT WRENN ELECTION BILL

City Committeemen Clamor for Passage of Measure to Give Machinery to Committees.

By the Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Feb. 24.—Members of the Democratic City Committee of St. Louis are clamoring for the State Legislature to pass the Wrenn bill, pending in the House, and which again would give the city and county political committees complete control of the election machinery, which was taken from them by the Legislature in 1921.

The St. Louis City Committee adopted a resolution last Wednesday in which it declared that "the two democratic election commissioners appointed by the Governor are lukewarm and a handicap to the Democratic party" and called upon the Democratic legislators to pass the Wrenn bill.

This measure, introduced by Representative Wrenn (Dem.) of St. Louis, would allow the political committees to name the judges and clerks of election and would require their choice from any residents of the precinct in which they are to serve.

The present law allows the Election Commissioners to appoint judges and clerks of election without recommendations from the committees and without regard to the precinct in which they are to serve.

The Wren bill, which is out of committee with a favorable recommendation for passage, was placed on the informal calendar in the House. Wrenn Thursday tried to call it up for engrossment at a time when the House was passing bills, which was a parliamentary impossibility. He will try to engross and pass the bill next week.

PROGRESS IN DEVELOPMENT OF ELECTRICITY TO BE ILLUSTRATED

Exhibits at Coliseum March 12 to 17 Will Include Many New Devices.

The progress of 40 years in electrical development will be illustrated by exhibits at the St. Louis Electrical Exposition, in the Coliseum, March 12 to 17. In addition to displays of apparatus that have made electrical history, the latest appliances for use in the home, the office and in industry will be exhibited.

Among the devices to be shown will be an electric waffle iron so heated that its entire surface presents an even cooking temperature; a rolling scrub brush that can be converted into a machine to sand paper, wax and polish floors; a 30 kilowat incadescent lamp — the largest in the world—a tiny vanity pocket flashlight, and a six-ton truck.

An award of $100 is to be given to the young woman selected to appear as Juno, designated the goddess of electricity. The contest is an open one and may be entered by the applicant sending her photograph, measurements, name, address and telephone number to the Juno Contest Jury at Room 1293 Arcade Building by March 1.

BAD COMPLEXIONS ARE POPULARITY RUINERS

"Clear the Skin, Regain That Girly Appearance and Most Other Faults Are Overlooked," Say Authorities on Beauty.

The motion picture screen has done more than any other thing to prove that with a beautiful complexion you can overcome the handicaps of no education, few advantages, poor circumstances and a thin, unattractive form.

If you could see and talk with a great many of the girls and women of the screen you would find that their charm is in their face, and that they rarely ever have that inherent aristocracy which their appearance on the screen impresses you with.

This shows that you can make the same impression on the people who pass you as you walk along among the crowds, or those you come in contact with every day, if you will just let the thousands of girls and women who use the Black and White Beauty Creations be your guide.

If these women were not satisfied with Black and White Cleansing and Peroxide Cream, Face Powder, Soap and many other complexion necessities now sold under the Black and White label, the tremendous sale of more than eight million packages a year would not be possible. Anything can be sold once, but unless it really brings results that thing will not be bought a second time.

REMMERS LIKELY TO HAVE AN OPPONENT

Some G. O. P. Committeemen Against Busch Lawyer for Aldermanic Presidency.

Certain members of the Republican City Central Committee, dissatisfied with Oliver T. Remmers, attorney for Anheuser-Busch, Inc., as a candidate for the Republican nomination for the presidency of the Board of Aldermen, will seek to have another man enter the race before 9 p. m. tomorrow, the closing time for filing declarations.

This became known following a special meeting of the committee yesterday afternoon at its headquarters in the Odd Fellows' Building. Aldermen Edward L. Kuhs of the First Ward, who has said he will make the race, and Joseph Mogler, motion picture theater proprietor and member of the Republican State Committee, were mentioned as possible opponents of Remmers.

Objection to Remmers.

Several of the committeemen object to Remmers because of his close political friendship with City Collector Edmond Koeln. Committeemen friendly to Koeln are for Remmers, but those not identified with the Koeln group would rather back some other candidate.

Mayor Kiel is expected to assume an attitude of neutrality in the aldermanic fights. He is now in Moline, Ill., inspecting a new theater building. He will return here for a day and then go to Excelsior Springs until the day before the primary.

While it is desirable from the viewpoint of the Republican machine to have all committeemen backing one candidate for the presidency of the board, it is not considered probable that such an arrangement can be made with Remmers in the race. He filed Friday.

No Democrat has filed for the presidency of the board. Some Democratic politicians have been talking of Sam Lazarus, head of the Acme Cement Plaster Co., but apparently the idea has not passed the conversational stage. Lazarus could not be reached for a statement yesterday.

Wilbur C. Schwartz, Alderman from the Twentieth Ward, announced Friday that he would not run for the presidency of the board. He probably will seek re-election in his ward. Louis P. Aloe, now president, has announced that he will not seek re-election.

Candidates for Aldermen.

Fourteen Aldermen are to be elected, one from each of the even-numbered wards. Those who had filed up to last night are:

Republicans—Second Ward, Dr. Edward F. Randall, 819A Bremen avenue; Fourth Ward, William F. Otto, 1519A Cass avenue; Sixth Ward, Louis A. Lange, 1302 Clark avenue and William T. Ringhoff, 2742 Caroline street; Eighth Ward, Edward Hirth, 2000 South Second street; Tenth Ward, Otto Schutes 3228 South Jefferson avenue and George Meisinger, 3339 Illinois avenue; Twelfth Ward, W. R. Petty, 6119 Michigan avenue and Charles A. Neumann, 502 Kansas street; Fourteenth Ward, Gus A. Baur, 2227 Missouri avenue and Max Paffrath, 3135 Pestalozzi street; Sixteenth Ward, Adam Reis, 3329 Vista street and Conrad Loesch, 4066 Blaine avenue; Eighteenth Ward, Alfred Bergmann, 2238A North Market street; Twentieth Ward, Henry J. Paul, 4126 St. Louis avenue; Twenty-second Ward, Herman Kralemann, 4444 Elmbank avenue and W. E. Krueger, 4974 Lotus avenue; Twenty-fourth Ward, Chauncey J. Krueger, 2283 South King's highway boulevard; Elmer E. Walter, 5217 Nottingham avenue and William F. Smith, 4617A Macklind avenue; Twenty-sixth Ward, Ralph H. Eilias, 1527A North Euclid avenue; Twenty-eighth Ward, John H. Brod Jr., 1321 Temple place.

Five Years for Holdup.

Sentences of five years in the penitentiary were imposed on George Yengst, 20, of 2523 Cozens avenue, and Fred Lange, 21, of 2830 Lucky street, by a jury in Circuit Judge Grimm's court yesterday for the holdup of a saloon at 2005 Franklin avenue, Nov. 19 last, in which they obtained $35.

ITALIAN AMBASSADOR TO MAKE 3-DAY VISIT

Prince Gelasio Caetani Coming to St. Louis on March 8—Scheduled for Speeches.

Prince Gelasio Caetani, new Italian Ambassador to Washington, will come to St. Louis March 8 for a three-day visit, during which he probably will make several addresses and meet men prominent in the Italian colony of St. Louis.

His visit is looked forward to by Italians with great interest, for his name is one to conjure with the history of Italy. The Prince traces his family through an illustrious line back to the ninth century, when his forefathers were dukes of the city of Gaeta. In the twelfth century John Caetani became Pope Gelasio II, and in 1294, another member of the family, Benedetto Caetani, became Pope Boniface VIII. The family has had heroes in all the wars of Italy, and in the World War Prince Gelasio distinguished himself as an engineer, and his younger brother, Michelangelo, as an aviator.

Prince Caetani directed the engineering feat that blew the top off a mountain in the Col di Lana district in 1916, destroying the "eye" of the Austrian army and allowing the Italians to advance. He subsequently served with the engineers in Macedonia, and with Herbert Hoover in Paris in Italian relief work.

He is a graduate of the Royal University of Rome and of the School of Mines of Columbia University, in this country. He then began work as a common miner in the West and rose rapidly to position of executive and consulting engineer. He has been in Italian politics and took part in the Roman events which prepared the triumph of the Facista Government, and one of the first acts of Premier Mussolini was to urge upon him the Ambassadorship to the United States.

DR. EUGENE A. SCHARFF NAMED CITY HOSPITAL SUPERINTENDENT

Ranked Third in Examination—Appointment Made by Health Commissioner Jordan.

Dr. Eugene A. Scharff, superintendent of the Isolation Hospital during the last year, yesterday was appointed superintendent of the City Hospital to succeed Dr. Rolla Henry, who on Sept. 13, 1922, was found dead on the hospital lawn beneath a window.

In the examination conducted by the Efficiency Board Jan. 4, Dr. Scharff ranked third with a percentage of 84.3. Dr. George H. R. Gosman of Fort Hamilton, N. Y., was first with 87.5 and Dr. George E Taylor of Chicago second with 84.4. Hospital Commissioner Jordan, who under the efficiency rule had the privilege of naming any one of the three, appointed Dr. Scharff.

As superintendent of the Isolation Hospital, Dr. Scharff receives $215 a month and his board and lodging. The pay of superintendent of the city hospital is $250 a month and "keep." The Medical Society is trying to have the salary increased to $300.

MAN FATALLY INJURED WHEN STRUCK BY AUTO

Charles Hertwig, 60, Dies Four Hours After Suffering Fractured Skull.

Charles Hertwig, 60 years old, of 4747A Hammett place, died at the city hospital at 11:30 a. m. yesterday from fracture of the skull and internal injuries suffered four hours earlier when struck at Marcus and Easton avenues by an automobile driven by Jacob Oberwinder, 58, of 1348 North Euclid avenue, a department superintendent for the McElroy-Sloan Shoe Co.

Hertwig was unidentified when taken to the city hospital and did not regain consciousness before he died. Identification was made by police through a laundry mark "Bogasch" on the collar band of his shirt. Policemen learned that a family named Bogasch lived at the Hammett place address and later identification was made by Hertwig's sister, with whom he resided.

Oberwinder told police that he was driving east on Easton avenue at a moderate speed when Hertwig started to cross to the north side of the street. Oberwinder said that Hertwig appeared to become confused and stepped directly in front of the automobile. Police say other witnesses corroborated Oberwinder.

Accident Verdict on Death of Laborer Hit by Auto.

A Coroner's verdict of homicide was returned yesterday against Thomas W. Dempsey, 30 years old, of 1117 Cass avenue, a hauling contractor, at the inquest into the death of Ignac Stachura, 47, a laborer, who died from injuries suffered Thursday when struck by Dempsey's automobile at Fourteenth and Lafayette avenue.

Dempsey, on advice of counsel, did not testify. The evidence against him was given by policemen who said that Stachura was walking across Fourteenth street when Dempsey, in the automobile, turned north out of Lafayette avenue and struck him. They said Dempsey told them he was running slow, in second speed. His bond was fixed at $10,000.

Says You Should Know About Kidneys and Bladder to Assist Their Functions

(By Dr. Lewis Baker)

The kidneys perform a vital function—

What is the meaning of "function?"—The act of performing a natural duty.

The bladder, too, performs a function.

Functional disturbance is not organic disease.

But neglected functional disturbances eventually may lead to organic disease.

Now what is the function or duty, that devolves upon the kidneys in a healthy state?

They act as a filter in removing waste matter, acids, alkalis and poisons from the blood.

If you eat too much at one time, or if you eat too much of one thing—that is, more than your system needs, it is the duty of the kidneys, as one organ of elimination, to help free the system of both the normal and the excesses you have consumed.

And the same is true if you drink too much of beverages other than good pure water. Too much coffee, too much tea or too much wine or other alcoholic drink gives the kidneys an extra amount of duty to perform.

Have you ever observed the downpipe unable to carry off the water from the roof gutters during a heavy rain? The capacity of the down pipe is just so much and following a heavy storm the down pipe "congests"—and all the water cannot go through it.

Just so the kidneys—if the blood fluid is loaded beyond their capacity, the poisons, in a sense, "overflow," and remain in the system, which, if repeatedly occuring, causes aches, pains, fevers, chills, rheumatism, neuralgia, etc. Organic disease of the kidneys, on the other hand, may be likened to a roof-gutter that becomes filled with leaves, twigs and rubbish, which in time causes rust holes, permitting leakage and overflow, both. Neglecting the tired overworked kidneys, in due time brings on the clogged, leaky condition—organic disease.

Balmwort Tablets are intended to help the function of the kidneys before they become actually "leaky" or diseased.

Skilled medical specialists should be employed if you even suspect organic trouble.

The function of the bladder is to act as a receptacle for the liquid waste matters which are strained from the blood by the kidneys and to hold this liquid until convenient to void it. Normally the bladder can retain such liquid all during your sleeping hours without pain, pressure or distress.

If, however, this liquid contains too much acid or other irritants, then you will have pain, pressure and distress with desire to void, perhaps every hour or two.

This disturbs sleep and rest—and like an endless chain, nervousness, weariness and irritation make the kidneys weaker in their functioning powers—and so the trouble grows worse—unless the tonic diuretic and neutralizing action of a medicine like Balmwort Tablets is used regularly to restore, by its aid the natural duties of the kidneys.

Amazing Number Relieved of Backache--Pain!

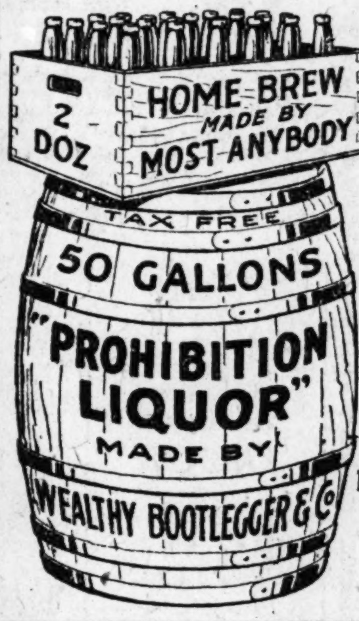
BY BALMWORT TABLETS

Is "Prohibition Liquor" and "Home Brew" Responsible For Great Increase in Kidney and Bladder Trouble?

HEALTH AUTHORITY SAYS IT IS.

Says Poisons in "Prohibition Liquor" and "Home Brew" Causes Congested Kidneys and Inflammation of the Bladder.

Such Conditions Also Due to Damp, Cold Weather, Colds, Grippe, Wet Feet, Etc.



While health authorities may disagree regarding the baneful effects of "Prohibition liquor" and "Home Brew," it is likely that they all agree that cold, damp, changeable weather, subjects all of us to the danger of colds, flu, grippe, wet feet and other exposures which tend to weaken the functional activity of the kidneys, which in turn brings on a long train of distress, aches and pains.

Whatever the cause—the question is: What is the way to get well?

Profit by the Experience of Others and Use Balmwort Tablets—Thousands Have Proved It."

Merchant Tortured Almost Four Years; Grateful For Benefits Want Others To Know

Dear Sir: I wish to say a word concerning the benefits I have had from Balmwort Tablets. I am 36. Merchant by occupation. I have suffered from cystitis—a burning, grinding, cutting sensation in the bladder.

I wrote to Dr. Baker who advised Balmwort Tablets. I have taken one box and have received so much benefit that I am ordering another. The disagreeable sensation is very much relieved and I am sure the tablets will bring eventually a return of health.

I am sure that nothing will cause more unrest or discouragement than the trouble I have had almost four years.

I give Balmwort Tablets full credit and am glad to recommend them to other sufferers. Very respectfully, P. C. Hastin, West Union, Illinois.

So Grateful She Wants To "Tell the World" About Balmwort Tablets. Worst Backache and Pain

Dear Sirs: I thought it would not be fair to you and your splendid medicine if I did not write and let you know how much good it has done for me and mine. I had the worst pain in the lower abdomen and backache—thought sure I would have to have an operation—but I read in the Boston Globe about the wonderful results your Balmwort Tablets were having with different people. I have taken two boxes and from the start they have relieved me.

My son had kidney trouble and backache. I gave him the tablets and he says he "feels fine." He don't complain of backache anymore. I am the mother of 8 children and when anything helps me I would like to "Tell the World," as they say, and let somebody else be helped. Yours for Health, Mrs. W. H. Russell, 31 Dana St., Somerville, Mass.

A Very Grateful Woman Calls Balmwort "Wonderful Medicine"

Gentlemen: With great pleasure I want to praise your wonderful medicine, Balmwort Tablets.

They do all and more than you claim for them, and may the blessing of God be with you for discovering such a wonderful medicine. For 5 years I suffered day and night with bladder pain that was almost unbearable. I got very little rest at night, so at my age (75 years) I was almost played out. I used one box and all my pain and suffering disappeared. But in fear my trouble would return I got a second box and take one occasionally which keeps me in perfect condition.

You have my permission to use this letter in any way to help suffering humanity. Your very truly, Mrs. Laura A. Edwards, 907 Upr. 11th St., Vincennes, Ind.

Inflammation of Bladder Quickly Relieved By Balmwort Tablets, Writes Wilmerding Lady

Dear Sirs: I surely want to say the Balmwort Tablets are fine. I had irritation of the bladder, my back hurt, and a burning feeling in the bladder that sets the nerves wild. The first dose helped me. My sister also took them. She had inflammation of the bladder with pus. She took them after she had been using a doctor's medicine in vain, and got relief at once. We always intend to keep a box handy. My sister and I each have one of your "Health and Beauty" books and would like for you to send one to the address on the coupon enclosed. Thank you.

Mrs. Andrew Nilson, 6 Sprague St., Wilmerding, Pa.

61 Years Old and Hopeless Longstanding Case Quickly Relieved By Balmwort Tablets

Dear Sirs: It is with pleasure and confidence I recommend Balmwort Tablets to any one suffering with bladder and kidney trouble such as I had. I am 61 years of age and consider their action in relieving my case remarkable. I have always worked hard, but was discouraged in regard to my trouble, as I had been treated by two local doctors and if they helped me I never noticed, in any way, so you can see how much I appreciate the help of Balmwort Tablets. Use my letter in any way that will help other sufferers. Respectfully yours,

C. A. Russell, R. F. D. No. 1, Goble, Oregon.

ALTS FINE FOR CHING KIDNEYS

When Back Hurts Flush Your Kidneys as You Clean Your Bowels

Most folks forget that the kidneys, like the bowels, sometimes get sluggish and clogged and need a flushing occasionally, else we have backache and dull misery in the kidney region, severe headaches, rheumatic twinges, torpid liver, acid stomach, sleeplessness and all sorts of bladder disorders. You simply must keep your kidneys active and clean and the moment you feel an ache or pain in the kidney region begin drinking lots of water. Also get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good drug store here. Take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is intended to flush clogged kidneys and help stimulate them to activity. It also helps neutralize the acids so they no longer irritate, thus helping to relieve bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; makes a delightful effervescent lithia water drink which everybody should take now and then to help keep their kidneys clean.

A well-known local druggist says he sells lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in trying to correct kidney trouble while it is only trouble. By all means have your physician examine your kidneys at least twice a year.

Corns

Lift Off with Fingers

Doesn't hurt a bit! Drop a little "Freezone" on an aching corn, instantly that corn stops hurting, then shortly you lift it right off with fingers. Truly!

Your druggist sells a tiny bottle of "Freezone" for a few cents, sufficient to remove every hard corn, soft corn, or corn between the toes, and the calluses, without soreness or irritation.

Someone in St. Louis may be looking for the property you have to sell, or they may be induced to purchase yours if it is advertised in the Post-Dispatch. Phone your order or leave it with your nearest druggist.

I Set Out to Find the Secret of Iron Muscles Like These

And Found That a Slight Change in Your Daily Meals Will Often Astonishingly Increase Your Strength, Energy, Endurance and Physical and Mental Power.

"Hard As Iron"

Years ago, I made up my mind that there must be some vital secret that explained the great difference between the muscular strength, health and power of strong and weak people you meet every day. One man has muscles like iron, is full of strength and energy and hits hard both mentally and physically. Another is weak, aneamic and run-down. His day's work leaves him tired out and exhausted and he is always ailing, complaining and doctoring, without ever seeming to get any better.

For years I made a special study of these conditions consulting a great number of physicians and chemists. Science has now proved that your real strength, energy and endurance; that mysterious force that enables you to dominate and control others and win in every walk of life, all depend upon the strength and nature of the millions of cells that compose your body and brain, and the physical strength of these cells depends absolutely upon the food you eat—that is, the material with which they are built, just like a house that is built of boards and mud is not so strong as one built of stone and iron. The most important element in building strong forceful cells is a peculiar form of iron found in the husks of grains, peels and skins of certain fruits and vegetables, but modern methods of cooking throw these important things away so that today probably not one person in twenty has 100% iron in his body—a most alarming condition.

If you are anxious to build up your strength and bodily powers, you should at once try mixing a little of this peculiar form of iron with your daily food, to help build strong iron-like cells. Surprising results have been obtained in many cases, in two weeks' time. In fact a former medical inspector and clinical physician of the Board of Health of New York City said to me "There are countless numbers of men today who at forty are broken in health and steadily going downward to physical and mental decay. Yet there are thousands of these same men who undergo a remarkable transformation the moment they get plenty of iron into their blood." This newer form of iron is comparatively inexpensive and may be obtained from your druggist under the name of Nuxated Iron, to be mixed with your food as directed on each package. Do not make a mistake and get one of the old forms of metallic iron instead of Nuxated Iron, which is a totally different thing. Many a prizefighter has won championships because professional trainers know the secret of great strength and endurance which comes from having plenty of iron in your blood. It would seem that the average man would realize how much more important it is for him to build up his strength and resistance to disease and go right to the nearest druggist and get a package of Nuxated Iron. I guarantee that you will be delighted with amazing results or your own druggist will refund the full amount you paid.

WIFE FAILS TO GET JUDGMENT

A jury in the Circuit Court yesterday was unable to decide a controversy over ownership of a bedroom set between John A. Ryan, a furniture dealer at 122 Collinsville avenue, East St. Luis, and his wife, Teresa, of 375 North Taylor avenue, St. Louis. Judge Miller declared a mistrial.

Ryan and his wife separated Jan. 15, 1922, when he replevined the set. He said it was in his room at the Taylor avenue address when he lived there, but belonged to the company of which he was president. When he moved the set he replaced it with another bedroom outfit, he said. Mrs. Ryan declared that the furniture in controversy was the property of their foster-child, Ann, 9 years old, being a Christmas gift from Ryan. Mrs. Ryan sought a judgment against her husband for $200, alleged value of the property. He is suing her for a divorce.

GRAND JURY TO INQUIRE INTO DEATH AT HOSPITAL

Coroner Fails to Fix Responsibility in Case Where Patient Said He Had Been Punched.

The Coroner having failed to fix responsibility in the case of Thomas Hogan, 46 years old, janitor at St. Francis Xavier's (College) Church, Grand and Lindell boulevards, who died Feb. 16 at City Hospital from peritonitis resulting from a crushed kidney, the grand jury will investigate the circumstances.

Hogan was received at the hospital the night of Feb. 14 after he had fallen through the window of a lunchroom at 701 South Broadway. The receiving physician diagnosed his case as alcoholism and, after siphoning his stomach, sent him to the prison ward, where he was held on a charge of destruction of property.

Twenty-four hours later Hogan was seized with violent nausea and an operation disclosed his bladder was lacerated. He told doctors and policemen that he had been punched in the stomach by the attendant who held the hose in his mouth when he was being siphoned.

The attendant referred to by Hogan was arrested and denied having struck Hogan. An autopsy showed Hogan's kidney had been crushed, but no evidence was brought out at the inquest indicating how he was injured.

PILES CURED WITHOUT OPERATION By Dr. Henrich's Method TO STAY CURED

No Cutting. No Pain. No Chloroform. No Hospital. No Danger. No Loss of Time. Consultation and Examination Free—Tell Your Friends.

PILES PERMANENTLY CURED

PILES are not only in themselves one of the most deplorable evils with which humanity can be afflicted, but by reflex action through the nervous system they are the cause of many other ailments, seriously affecting the physical and mental condition of the sufferer. General constitutional disturbance is inevitable from the beginning and particular functional and organic troubles often follow, some of them of the gravest and most dangerous character.

The continued discomforts and irritation caused by the Pile Tumors pressing on the nerve fibers and blood vessels underlying the same, often exhaust the strength and undermine the constitution by interfering with the general circulation.

Digestion is impaired, the food cannot be properly assimilated, and the system, deprived of sufficient nourishment, becomes less and less able to bear the burden.

I have made a lifelong study of Rectal Diseases, and for the past 27 years have practiced this specialty in St. Louis and vicinity. I resort to No Surgical Operation, but this mild treatment is easily administered by me and does not even interfere with one's daily duties. So great is my confidence in what I can do that I give a written Guarantee of a Permanent Cure when I discharge a case. Call at once. Out-of-town patients receive immediate service.

SPLENDID CURE MADE ELEVEN YEARS AGO—STILL CURED

Lensburg, Ill., Jan. 20, 1914.

W. P. Henrich, Ph. G., M. D.

Dear Doctor:—I write to advise you that I am very thankful to you for the splendid cure you made Jan. 18, 1912, of my serious case of Piles with which I was afflicted for 15 years. The method you employ is the only way to be cured, and I recommend all Pile sufferers to try your wonderful treatment.

Very truly yours,
LOUIS F. STAHLMANN.

BLEEDING AND PROTRUDING PILES CURED 11 YEARS—STILL CURED

Dr. W. P. Henrich.

Dear Sir:—After suffering for nine years with Bleeding and Protruding Piles, you cured me permanently, without the knife or chloroform; also removed a polypus. It took only four treatments, and now I feel like a different person. I advise anyone suffering with Piles to take your mild treatment at once.

Yours respectfully,

"Captain Applejack" at American; Darkness Envelopes Jefferson

Wallace Eddinger and Mary Nash in English Farce—Germaine Mitty and Eugene Tillio at Orpheum.

OWING to the affection with which Chicago continues to embrace William Hodge and his latest homespun opus, twice scheduled for disclosure here, the Shubert-Jefferson will remain idle this week, leaving the field to Walter Hackett's "wildly farcical adventure," entitled "Captain Applejack," which casts anchor tonight at the American. This is a London comedy of piracy on the Spanish main, which had its first American production on Dec. 30, 1921, at the Cort Theater, New York. Several of the original cast survive, including Wallace Eddinger, Mary Nash and Hamilton Revelle.

A notable dance feature, leading the Orpheum program, is that of Mlle. Germaine Mitty and Eugene Tillio of the "Follies Bergere" in Paris. Florenz Ziegfeld brought them to America in the summer of 1921 for a few weeks' appearance in his "Follies," where they scored an unusual success. The Woodward Players, at the Garrick, are undertaking Salisbury Field's three-act comedy, "Wedding Bells." Two former St. Louisans, George Doan [illegible] and "Bobby" Reed, are new accessions to the troupe.

"Captain Applejack" has been described as a combination of burlesque melodrama and crook comedy travestied. The hero, Ambrose Applejohn, is a timorous, respectable and conventional young Englishman who becomes bored with the comforts of his house on the coast of Cornwall, and determines to seek romance and adventure abroad. They promptly come to meet him in his own homestead.

THERE rushes into his quiet life a woman describing herself as a celebrated Russian dancer, fled from Moscow with the priceless jewels of a Grand Duchess, and pursued by a ferocious emissary of the Bolsheviki. To afford a hiding place for the diamonds, Ambrose reveals a secret cabinet; but he finds in it a parchment purporting to disclose that one of his ancestors was the famous corsair, "Captain Applejack," who changed his name—"there's a brain for you," comments Ambrose—to Applejack, in order to baffle the King's police. Other visitors appear—all of them London crooks, in search of the pirate's hidden treasure.

In the second act Ambrose falls asleep and dreams he is the bloodthirsty buccaneer who sailed the seas two centuries ago. He is now the ancient cutthroat ancestor in command of his pirate ship, hunting down treasure-laden galleons of Spain. His fancy pictures his visitors and the members of his household as members of the crew. The intrepid Applejack swears, bullies, murders and defies his mutinous crew of ruffians.

Then there is a third act, in which Ambrose, restored to his own person, retains energy enough from his dream to outwit the crooks—only to discover that the parchment was placed in the cabinet by a crafty real estate agent, whom he had commissioned to sell the house. In the present company, besides those named, are Phoebe Foster, Helene [illegible], John Gray, Lorena Atwood, Horace Pollock, Harold Vermilye, Walter F. Scott and Francesca Ro[illegible], lately of the Woodward Players.

Walter Hampden and "The Scandals."

TO the American, next Sunday night, comes the 1922 redaction of George White's big revue, "The Scandals." Walter Hampden, tragedian, pays his second St. Louis visit next week at the Shubert-Jefferson, with the following repertory: Sunday night, "The Taming of the Shrew;" Monday, Thursday and Saturday nights, "Hamlet;" Tuesday night, "Macbeth;" Wednesday matinee, "The Merchant of Venice;" Wednesday night, Philip Massinger's Elizabethan comedy, "A New Way to Pay Old Debts;" Friday night,

Miss Reed Smokes Pipe in Her New Play

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Feb. 24.

HOW a gorgeous Spanish courtesan of international appeal found love and died for it is the theme of "Hail and Farewell," a new play by William Hurlburt, which was produced Monday night at the Morosco, with Florence Reed, again playing a terrifically lovely girl gone wrong, in the star role. In the first act she laughs shrilly and shrugs her shoulders upon all poor admirers; in the second she feels the urge of deep affection; and in the third she tilts the fatal poison to her lips.

Why? It's because, although Isabella Echevaria has been a fast and wicked lady (she even smoked a pipe), still, when she loves, she loves. And, rather than permit her notorious name to conflict with the diplomatic success of Phillipe, Comte de Villeneuve, Isabella will end it all. And she does.

This somber climax in the elegant Parisian apartment of the unhappy Isabella is acted with exquisite feeling by Miss Reed, and it arrived after three acts of almost continuous talk on her part, out of which one gains the impression that she has been little neglected by the moneyed boys from home or abroad. It seemed a little bit sad that so amorously eminent a national figure should lie there on a beautiful pink couch and die for the sake of one French Count. Especially since an American gold mine owner has been trying for months to get her to go to California with him.

As in the case of Hurlburt's other play of a season ago, in which lilies of the field were shown to be still possessed of hearts of gold, "Hail and Farewell" minces no words nor situations while it is introducing its principal player to the folks out front, and it travels its course in workmanlike fashion.

New Harvard Prize Play.

THE Harvard prize play, "You and I," by Philip Barry, which was shown Monday night at the Belmont, is a skillfully written dramatic comedy with a first act of terse, sparkling wit which, had it been followed throughout, would have placed the piece at the top of the season's list. Even the Harvardian school, however, goes in for sentiment, and the last two acts gradually approach the wistful happy ending without which few prize plays can ring down the curtain. The piece as it stands is good entertainment, immeasurably better than 99 in 100 of its kind.

The playwright has a good theme to bite into when he sets out to prove that for a man, an artistic career is not to be thought of in the same breath with an early marriage. H. B. Warner, as a man of 40, has a WALDEMAR YOUNG has begun the adaptation of "Salomy Jane," from Paul Armstrong's play based on Bret Harte's story. This will be George Melford's next production, following "You Can't Fool Your Wife."

Agnes Ayres will take a leading role with Antonio Moreno in "The Exciters," under the direction of Richard Ordynski. John Colton, author of "Rain," is adapting the stage play to the screen.

"If Winter Comes" Now on Stage in London

LONDON, Feb. 24.

THE popular vogue enjoyed by A. S. M. Hutchinson's famous novel, "If Winter Comes," has been great enough to insure success to a dramatic version of the story—so far as anything can be said to be sure on the stage. In all events it has been great enough to make the appearance of a dramatic version a certainty. That certainty has now come to pass at St. James' Theater.

Mr. Hutchinson and his collaborator, Basil MacDonald Hastings, found themselves confronted with the duty of making an adaptation of a book which is not specially fitted for that purpose. The novel is long and discursive; and the task is further complicated by the need to preserve as many as possible of the touches of observation and sympathy which were the secret of the book's appeal. The result is a play which, while not ranking exceedingly high on its intrinsic merits, takes an honorable place in its own particular class.

We first meet Mark Sabre at the moment when he has at last managed to get passed for the Army. His wife is already deep in her war work with her discreet admirer, "Hopscotch" Millet. Lord Tybar is already performing prodigies of valor at the front; and Mark's project of bringing Effie Bright into his house as companion to his immaculate wife has just been mooted. A good deal of unavoidable telescoping has had to be done in this first act, with the result that those who have read the book will probably find it slightly more impressive than those who have not; but Radio Week Will Be Featured at Missouri With K S D Film and Trade Display.

"ADAM AND EVA," with Marion Davies is the feature picture at the Missouri for "Radio week." It is the Cosmopolitan-Paramount version of the highly successful stage play of the same name, which ran on Broadway for over a year. A fortune is said to have been expended on gowns to adorn the star. Joseph Urban designed the settings and Robert Vignola was the director.

The story is rich in comedy appeal. Tom Lewis has the role of James King, a Wall street broker, whose family's extravagance almost ruin him. The daughter (Marion Davies) is an expert in spending of hard-earned money. Her father, in exasperation, puts an employe in his place to care for her and then goes to South America to recuperate. While he is gone the employe reforms the family. T. Roy Barnes, William Norris, Percy Ames and William Davidson are in the supporting cast.

"The Mystery Box," an all-radio picture, with a showing of Post-Dispatch Broadcasting Station K S D in action, is one of the big features on the Radio week program. Radio mysteries are explained by animated scenes so clearly shown that practically every baffling problem is solved. In addition there will be a miniature exposition of radio goods in the spacious Missouri lobby, and as an extra attraction, Yerkes' Flotilla Band broadcasts numbers from the stage over K S D, all of the broadcasting apparatus being visible to the audience. The band has also been styled "The Happy Six" and "The Columbians."

Thomas H. Ince's comedy drama, "Bellboy 13," with Douglas MacLean, is the principal attraction at the Grand Central, where much stress is laid upon a musical presentation, "Opera vs. Jazz," an original travesty with book and lyrics by Ralph Nicholls and music by Gene Rodemich.

"Bellboy 13" is billed as one of the best of the Ince comedy productions. The situations are along farcical lines.

"Opera vs. Jazz" is laid in a courtroom, where the attorneys for the two combatants introduce witnesses to prove the respective popularity of each. The audience, acting as jurymen, decides which is the more popular. Opera is represented by James Stevens and Arthur Geary, former Municipal Opera favorites; Fanny Block, contralto; Ruth Hazlett Wunder, soprano, and the Lucia Sextette.

The attorney for Jazz introduces Taylor, Macy and Hawks, the Dennis Sisters, Bill Bailey, xylophone syncopater; the Musical Burglars, a saxophone quartet; Grace Brinkley and Marie Lenhardt, dancers, and a jazz chorus. Rodemich's Jazz Orchestra sides with the syncopated artists, while his Concert Orchestra lines up with the operatic talent.

The film version of Bertha M. Clay's novel of "Thorns and Orange Blossoms," is featured at the West End Lyric and Capitol theaters, together with a revival of the Harold Lloyd comedy, "From Hand to Mouth," in which Mrs. Lloyd and "Snub" Pollard appear with the comedian.

Kenneth Harlan, Edith Roberts and Estelle Taylor have the principal roles in "Thorns and Orange Blossoms." Harlan plays the young American, Edith Roberts is the girl to whom he is engaged, and Miss Taylor is the fiery Spanish dancer whose love for the hero causes all the trouble and thrills.

"A Blind Bargain," a feature picture said to be unique in its power to evoke creepy sensations, opens at the Delmonte Theater today for the week. Also on the bill is the St. Louis Club Jazz Orchestra.

"A Blind Bargain" is founded upon a story by Barry Pain called "The Octave of Claudius," a pseudo-scientific story of a half-mad surgeon who believed he could prove the truth of evolution by transforming man back into his early simian characteristics through transferring into his body the glands of monkeys. He induces a struggling young au-

"CAPTAIN APPLEJACK" AT AMERICAN; DARKNESS ENVELOPS JEFFERSON

Charles Rann Kennedy's "The Servant in the House;" and Saturday matinee, "Romeo and Juliet." Hampden's leading women are Mary Hall, Mabel Moore and Elsie Herndon Kearns. Beginning March 11, the Shubert-Jefferson is to present a musical comedy, "Tangerine," with Julia Sanderson.

Mlle. Mitty, at the Orpheum, was born a Basque, and inherited lithe muscles, as well as a spirit of freedom and daring, from mountain ancestors. Her act, with M. Tillio, is said to combine the Apache dance with classical technique, and to include astonishing athletic features. Tillio was for many years a member of the ballet at the Paris Opera House. The dancers were recently starred in "Les Revue des Etoiles," at the Casino de Paris.

Others on the same bill are: Billy Arlington, popular comedian, playing a tramp role in "Mistakes Will Happen;" Jimmy Carr, and his company of Jazz players and syncopated singers; Bill Bailey with his banjo, in a musical act with Lynn Cowan and Estelle Davis; Gertrude Moody and Mary Duncan, in a song and chatter turn; Charles Irwin, monologist; Mallia and Bart, comedians, in "The Baggage Smasher;" and Galetti and Kokin, newcomers in this city. Next week's headliners at the Orpheum will be Van and Schenck, singers, who for three seasons were featured in Ziegfeld's "Follies."

"Wedding Bells" at Garrick.

A MATRIMONIAL mixup is the theme of "Wedding Bells," at the Garrick. A wealthy young New Yorker meets and swiftly weds a girl while on his way to tour the Orient; by a series of mishaps they are separated immediately. Weeks afterward he returns home, convinces himself that his wife has obtained a divorce, and prepares for a second wedding. The wife turns up in the nick of time, and readjustments, including two other couples, bring the proper conclusion. Hazel Whitmore and John Warner have the principal roles.

The Gayety this week is placing particular stress on Jean Bedini's revue, "Chuckles of 1923," which ran three months last summer at the Oxford Music Hall in London, and so pleased the British public that Bedini was engaged to put on a second production, "You'd Be Surprised," now running at the Alhambra Theater.

"Chuckles" is said to retain many of its London features, including a chorus of "Oxford Girls," trained by the famous Tiller; and Billy Wells and the Eclair Twins, Australian dancers. Cliff Bragdon and "Coo Coo" Morrisey, Americans, are the leading comedians, and Mabel Howarth, from Australia, is prima donna.

Other Vaudeville Bills.

BEGINNING with today's matinee, the Rialto presents Karyl Norman, a female impersonator, advertised as "The Creole Fashion Plate;" Antonio and Mabelle de Marcos, from Buenos Aires, with the Seven Musical Sheiks; Harry Faber and Ursa McGowan, in a comedy, "The Compass," and several other acts. A new bill begins Thursday, with Karyl Norman, who remains for the week, in a different offering.

George Wilson, one of the oldest survivors of the famous minstrels of the past, appears at the Columbia the first half of the week, with a company, in a black-face skit called "Stranded." Others on the bill include Christie and Bennett, impersonating a brace of "Southern gentlemen;" the Erettos, comedians; Harvey, Henry and Grace, in a musical act, and the Larkins, in a comedy of furniture moving. A new bill begins Thursday. The film features are "Free Air," after a story by Sinclair Lewis, and "The Ninety and Nine," adapted from a play by Ramsay Morris.

Caterina Marco, an actress popular many years ago, appears at the Grand in an act called "Favorites of the Past," with Charles A. Loder, Harry Bartlett, May Hobey and Frances Cinglehurst. Other acts are those of Joseph Herbert Jr. and his company, in "The Honeymoon Ship;" Hal Sanders, violinist, and Ruth Glanville, saxophonist; Mantell's mannikins, in "Le Petit Cabaret;" Billy Doss, blackface singer; Kingston and Ebner, Dave Winnie and Fred Lewis.

The German Stock Company tonight, at the Eagle Auditorium, will give a benefit for Mme. Clara Gefrer, who will appear in a farce called "Heaven on Earth."

"ADAM AND EVA," "BELLBOY 13" AND "A BLIND BARGAIN"

thor, whose mother faces death for want of the proper medical attention, to agree to submit himself to be experimented upon in return for the money and care that shall restore his mother to health.

Unable to buy his release from his bargain, after falling in love and becoming engaged to the daughter of the publisher who accepted his book, the writer is seized by the surgeon and bound to the operating table. As the surgeon enters his private dungeon to get a monkey he is crushed to death by one of the human wrecks, results of previous experiments, imprisoned there. The writer is released by the surgeon's wife and the hunchback.

There is a ballroom scene in which beautiful girls dance amid clouds of soap bubbles. The roles of the doctor and of the hunchback are acted by Lon Chaney. In the cast are Jacqueline Logan, Raymond McKee, Virginia True Boardman, Fontaine La Rue, Aggie Herring and Virginia Madison.

The Liberty has a double feature program, with Tom Mix in "Romance Land" and Al St. John in "Young and Dumb."

Mix, in his picture, has followed the lead of Douglas Fairbanks and gone to the days of chivalry for inspiration. The story tells of the adventures of a youth who has been so saturated with Scott's "Ivanhoe" that he starts out to emulate that hero. There is also a girl whose soul is tuned in with the romantic. She has read of King Arthur and she deludes herself into the belief that she is the Fair Guinevere. When the two novel-mad young persons meet there are some weird adventures.

"Love Letters," Universal special, featuring Gladys Walton, is this week's major film at the Rivoli. Miss Walton has the role of an overall factory worker who conceals love letters in outgoing garments. The consequences of this form the motive of the plot. In the cast are George Cooper, Edward Hearn, Fontaine La Rue and Alberta Lee.

"IF WINTER COMES" NOW ON STAGE IN LONDON

Owen Nares as Mark Sabre.

IT follows closely the main theme of the book; Mark's failure to get on with Mabel Sabre, the growing antagonism between Mabel and Mark, Effie's return with her baby, Mabel's indignant refusal to take her in, and her scandalized retreat and growing suspicion when Mark insists upon doing so. We see Effie and Mark defying the world; Mark's departure for Brighton and Effie's preparations for suicide. Then comes the inquest at which Twyning's part in hounding down Mark is cleverly brought out; and, finally, there is the scene where Mark, having discovered young Twyning's guilt, burns the evidence when he hears of the boy's death, and finds peace in the arms of Nona.

The outstanding feature of the production is undoubtedly the personal triumph of Mr. Owen Nares as Sabre. We cannot help a sneaking feeling, after reading Mr. Hutchinson's book, that his hero might after all "be easier to read about than to live with. Mr. Nares corrects this impression. He sticks close to the author's original conception of the part, and is so convincingly human and lovable that our tendency to wonder whether, after all, there was not a very great deal to be said for Mabel Sabre, disappears. More than this, Mr. Nares aotually makes the inquest scene (utterly unconvincing in the book, and only barely satisfactory as rewritten in the play) seem possible. Mr. Nares has probably never done anything better than this, so far. The three chief feminine characters are all cleverly acted, without producing any performance of exceptional brilliance. Miss Grace Lane is as self-righteous and conventional a dean's daughter as ever looked down a religious nose; but the part is too one-sided to be altogether convincing. The Mabel of the book was completely justified, according to her lights, in everything she did; she was a genuinely ill-used woman, whose misfortune was that she had made an unsuitable marriage. But the Mabel of the play shows something like venom.

Play's Reception Is Cordial.

MISS BARBARA HOFFE makes a beautiful Nona, a little lacking in emotional power; and almost the same may be said of Miss Helen Spencer as Effie. Neither of these two ladies make any particular mistakes; they just do not touch any great depth. Mr. Ernest Mainwaring is a sound "Hopscotch" Millet, solid and stupid and conventional as Mabel could desire. Mr. Tarver Penna is one of the chief successes of the play as Twyning, though the part is a little obvious, on the Uriah Heap pattern. Mr. Stafford Hilliard as a dignified coroner, and Mr. Eric Stanley as a bullying lawyer, both distinguish themselves at the inquest—and so, it may here be said, does Miss Iris Vandeleur as the loyal Low Jinks.

As we have said, the success of this play was practically a foregone conclusion before the curtain rose; and its first night reception was certainly fervid enough to confirm this idea. If the play is hardly likely to please the public to quite the same extent as the book, it does at least reproduce its spirit to quite a remarkable degree.

WHAT THEY ARE DOING IN THE MOVIE STUDIOS

Fool Your Wife," were guests of honor at the International Silk Show in New York recently. Miss Joy appeared in the Chinese costume she wore in "Java Head." Miss Naldi had a rich, red gown of brocaded silk.

First scenes in Dorothy Dalton's new Paramount picture, "Fog Bound," which is being directed by Irvin V. Willat, were made near Palm Beach, Fla., on Lincoln's birthday. The company, which includes David Powell, Maurice Costello, Martha Mansfield, William David, Warren Cook and Jack Richardson, left New York several days before. Scenes are also to be made later in the Everglades, Florida, after which the company will return to the Long Island studio for the completion of the interiors.

A complete projection outfit and screen was installed in the "Mess Tent" on location at the Meek ranch in Southern Utah where scenes were made in the Paramount production of "The Covered Wagon." The films were shipped to Hollywood each night and the developed prints sent back as soon as possible so the director and members of the cast could see the results of their work as they progressed.

Cecil B. de Mille, Paramount producer, objects to actors and actresses who get excited. Recently, while making scenes in "Adam's Rib," he stopped the action long enough to caution one of the members of the cast who had become too emotional. "Acting," says Mr. De Mille, "is an art, not an emotion. Good acting is produced by a body and a brain in perfect control. Excitement means loss of this and consequent loss of interpretative efficiency."

"Daughters of the Rich" has been selected by John M. Stahl for production as his next all-star offering through Associated First National. This will be Stahl's first picture since "The Dangerous Age," which is now scoring a big hit throughout the country. It is estimated that at least six months will be spent on the new production.

Thelma La Nier's story, "The Other Side," which is now being filmed as the first of the series of independent productions to be made by the Hugh Dierker Productions, is a story of married men and women who find their greatest difficulty in seeing "the other side" of everyday questions and problems that are constantly arising. Charles Clary, Fritzi Brunette, David Butler, Peter Burke, Pat O'Malley, E. M. Kimball, Herbert Standing, Helene Lynch, Harmon MacGregor, Cleve Moore, a brother of Colleen Moore, and others will be seen in the cast.

Gilovitch, the Russian baritone, who is shortly to make his debut with the New York Metropolitan Opera Company, it is said, appears in a few of the scenes of "Refuge" in which Katherine MacDonald stars. The singer got into the picture through the invitation of Victor Schertzinger, the well-known composer-director, whom he met at the Schulberg studios, Hollywood.

Strongheart, the dog star of "Brawn of the North," with a team of "huskies," will compete in the hundred-mile sled race at Banff, Alberta, during the week of Feb. 26.

"Daddy" is the title of Jackie Coogan's latest First National picture.

Few People Know How Useful It Is In Preserving Health and Beauty.

Nearly everybody knows that charcoal is the safest and most efficient disinfectant and purifier in nature, but few realize its value when properly prepared and taken into the human system for the same cleansing purpose.

Charcoal is a remedy that the more you take of it the better; it is not a drug at all, but simply absorbs the gases and impurities always present in the stomach and intestines and carries them out of the system.

Charcoal sweetens the breath after smoking, and after eating onions and other odorous vegetables.

Charcoal effectually clears and improves the complexion, it whitens the teeth and further acts as a natural and eminently safe cathartic.

It absorbs the injurious gases which collect in the stomach and bowels; it disinfects the mouth and throat from the poison of catarrh.

All druggists sell charcoal in one form or another, but probably the best charcoal and the most for the money is in Stuart's Absorbent Lozenges; they are composed of the finest quality Willow charcoal powdered to extreme fineness, then compressed in tablet form or rather in the form of large, pleasant tasting lozenges, the charcoal being sweetened to be smooth and palatable.

The daily use of these lozenges will soon tell in a much improved condition of the general health, better complexion, sweeter breath and purer blood, and the beauty of it is that no possible harm can result from their continued use, but on the contrary, great benefit.

Many physicians advise Stuart's Absorbent Lozenges to patients suffering from gas in stomach and bowels, and to clear the complexion and purify the breath, mouth and throat. They are also believed to greatly benefit the liver. These lozenges cost but thirty cents a box at drug stores, and you get more and better charcoal in Stuart's Absorbent Lozenges than in any of the ordinary charcoal tablets.

The Best Cough Syrup Is Homemade

Here's an Easy Way to Save $2 and Yet Have the Best Cough Remedy You Ever Tried.

You've probably heard of this well-known plan of making cough syrup at home. But have you ever used it? Thousands of families, the world over, feel that they could hardly keep house without it. It's simple and cheap, but the way it takes hold of a cough will soon earn it a permanent place in your home.

Into a pint bottle, pour 2½ ounces of Pinex; then add plain granulated sugar syrup to fill up the pint. Or, if desired, use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup. Either way, it tastes good, never spoils, and gives you a full pint of better cough remedy than you could buy ready-made for three times its cost.

It is really wonderful how quickly this homemade remedy conquers a cough—usually in 24 hours or less. It seems to penetrate through every air passage, loosens a dry, hoarse or tight cough, lifts the phlegm, heals the membranes, and gives almost immediate relief. Splendid for throat tickle, hoarseness, croup, bronchitis and bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, and has been used for generations for throat and chest ailments.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggists for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

Be Careful What You Wash Your Hair With

Many soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much free alkali which is very injurious, as it dries the scalp and makes the hair brittle.

The best thing to use is Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo, for this is pure and entirely greaseless. It is very cheap and beats anything else all to pieces. You can get Mulsified at any drug store, and a few ounces will last the whole family for months.

Two or three teaspoonfuls of Mulsified in a cup or glass with a little warm water is all that is required. Simply moisten the hair with water and rub the Mulsified cocoanut oil in. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, cleanses thoroughly, and rinses out easily. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and is soft, fresh looking, bright, fluffy, wavy, and easy to manage. Besides, it loosens and takes out every particle of dust, dirt and dandruff. Be sure your druggist gives you Mulsified.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets do that which calomel does, and just as effectively, but their action is gentle and safe instead of severe and irritating.

No one who takes Olive Tablets is ever cursed with a "dark brown taste," a bad breath, a dull, listless, "no good" feeling, constipation, torpid liver, bad disposition or pimply face.

Olive Tablets are a purely vegetable compound mixed with olive oil; you will know them by their olive color.

Dr. Edwards spent years among patients afflicted with liver and bowel complaints, and Olive Tablets are the immensely effective result. Take one or two nightly for a week. See how much better you feel and look. 15c and 30c.

Matzenauer Sings on All-Wagner Program

THE thirteenth of the 15 regular programs comprising the second season of Mr. Ganz as director of the Symphony Orchestra will be presented Friday afternoon and Saturday evening at the Odeon. Every selection will be taken from Wagner's operas, and the soloist will be Mme. Margarete Matzenauer, mezzo-soprano, whose success here last year with the orchestra led to her re-engagement. She will sing Adriano's recitative and aria, "Gerechter Gott," from "Rienzi," and "Brunhilde's immolation scene from "Goetterdaemmerung."

The orchestra numbers will be the overture to "Rienzi," the prelude to the first act of "Lohengrin" and the introduction to the third act of the same opera, the "Waldwebben" music from "Siegfried," and Siegfried's death music and funeral march, from "Goetterdaemmerung."

Carolyn Cone-Baldwin, pianist, of New Orleans, will be the soloist at today's popular concert at the Odeon, and will play MacDowell's Second Concerto. The orchestra's program will include d'Albert's overture, "Improvisator"; the fourth movement, "In the Garden," from Goldmark's symphony, "The Rustic Wedding"; "Dance of the Hours," from Ponchielli's "La Gioconda"; the Magic Fire Music from "Die Walkuere," and the march from "Tannhaeuser."

At the two concluding pairs of regular concerts, the orchestra will present as soloists Michel Gusikoff, on March 9 and 10, and Sergei Rachmaninoff, March 16 and 17.

Isa Kremer Friday Night.

ON Friday evening, at the Odeon, Miss Isa Kremer, much praised as an interpreter of ballads in many languages, will give her first St. Louis concert. Her selections from the Russian will be "Cherie," "Buffon's Ballad" and Moussorgsky's "Hopak;" from the French, "Le Petit Navire" and "Lison dormait;" Italian, "Chitarra Napolitana," "Marchiare" and Rossini's "La pastorella dell' Alpi;" Jewish, "A lied von a Feigele" and "Maseltoff," and English, "Butterflies" and "South Carolina Croon Song."

She will be assisted by Kurt Hetzel, pianist, who will play Liszt's Twelfth Hungarian Rhapsodie and Chopin's A Major Polonaise and Valse in C-sharp Minor.

After an absence of several years, Mischa Elman will give a recital at the Odeon on Tuesday evening, March 6. His program will include Lalo's "Symphonie Espagnole;" Handel's D Major sonata, Korngold's suite, "Viel Laermen um Nichts;" the Chopin-Wilhelmj "Nocturne" and Sarasate's "Jota."

The Liederkranz Club will give its second concert of the season at Alhambra Grotto on the evening of March 15, under the direction of Hugo Anschuetz. The principal number will be Max Bruch's cantata, "Fair Ellen," for mixed chorus and soprano and baritone soloists. A number said to be new to this city will be a fairy tale, "Sir Oluf," with text by Von Wildenbruch and music by Ferdinand Hummel. This is for women's chorus, piano and violoncello. Excerpts will be given from "The Flying Dutchman" and "Rienzi." Max Mueller-Bode, former solo 'cellist with orchestras in Berlin, Dantzig and Petrograd, will be one of the soloists. The others are St. Louisans—Mrs. Helen Traubel Carpenter, soprano, and Raymond Koch, baritone.

Musical Miscellanies.

ON account of Director Frederick Fischer's absence with the Symphony Orchestra last week, the Thursday rehearsal of the Pageant Choral Society was postponed until 5:30 o'clock this afternoon at the Musicians' Club, 3535 Pine street.

Beethovens C Minor Quartet will be one of the numbers on the program with which the New York String Quartet will make its first bow here, at Sheldon Auditorium, on the evening of March 12. This is the new organization's initial season before the public. It was organized three years ago, under the patronage of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Pulitzer.

Word arrives that Miss Edith Piper, a former student at Mary Institute, recently made her operatic debut at Asti, in Italy, as Nedda in "I Pagliacci." She is studying in Milan, whither she was sent by a group of St. Louis friends after she sang at a reception given by Mrs. Edward A. Faust. A series of musicales for her benefit was arranged by Mrs. George Niedringhaus of 10 Westmoreland place.

Members of the music faculty of Lindenwood College will give a program tonight in Roemer Auditorium. Those taking part will be Miss Elizabeth Falmer, soprano; John Thomas, pianist and director of the department; Miss Agnes Gray, violinist, and Miss Ariel Gross, pianist.

There will be a recital at St. John's Episcopal Church, 3666 Arsenal street, this evening at 8 o'clock, with Paul Friess, organist; Earl Rivearson, baritone, and Russell E. Horton, tenor, as soloists.

P. G. Anton and Arthur Davis will give a 'cello and organ recital this afternoon at 5:30 o'clock at Christ Church Cathedral, Anton's numbers being the "Meditation" from "Thais" and Saint-Saens' "The Swan." The Cathedral choir of men and boys will also sing, with Chester Merton tenor, as soloist.

Foreign Waiters Flood London.

This is particularly noticeable in Soho and some of the leading West End restaurants, which are managed by Italians, Greeks and Polish Jews who prefer waiters of their own race rather than Englishmen.

New Capek Comedy Has Longevity for Theme

PRAGUE, Jan. 15.

ANOTHER play by Karel Capek of "R. U. R." and "The World We Live In"—pieces that the American theater already knows—has not only been produced here, but published in Bohemian. It is called "The Makroupulos Affair," and its theme is longevity. In his preface, the author is at some pains to rebut an accusation that he plagiarized Shaw's "Back to Methuselah."

"This new comedy," he explains, 'began to occupy my mind some three or four years ago—that is, even before "R. U. R.;" at that time, however, I conceived it as a novel. Now I am left with only one more task before having disposed of my old supplies. The present play was suggested by the theory advanced, I fancy, by Prof. Metchnikoff, that the process of growing old constitutes an autointoxication of the organism. I mention these facts in advance because last winter B. Shaw's new work, 'Back to Methuselah,' appeared."

Capek then points out that, so far as he can surmise from his limited knowledge of Shaw's play, there are considerable differences between the two pieces. It may be added that the resemblances are superficial and accidental. The subject of longevity is at least as old as the legend of the Wandering Jew. Capek here is only deriving new effects from old material, just as in "R. U. R." he imparted a fresh vitality to the Frankenstein motive.

What to Do With Recipes.

IT is in his treatment that Capek shows remarkable originality. The last act, for instance, contains a debate on the problem of longevity. The chief male characters discuss what is to be done with the recipe of Makroupulos, court physician to Rudolf II, for the prolongation of human life. Vitek, a solicitor with altruistic leanings, is in favor of distributing it wholesale.

"Let's give everyone 300 years of life!" he exclaims. "That will be the greatest event since the creation of man. * * * Good God, to think what could be made of a man in 300 years! Fifty years to be a child and pupil; 50 years to find out about the world and see all there is to see; 100 years to work for the benefit of all; and then 100 years, when we have learned everything, to live in wisdom, to rule, to teach and set an example!"

Dr. Kolenaty, a matter-of-fact barrister, replies that our system of society is founded on the brevity of life—for instance, contracts, pensions, insurance, wages, the law of inheritance, and so on. "And then there's marriage," he says. "My dear fellow, nobody's going to get married if it's to last for 300 years. Man alive, you're an anarchist! You want to upset the whole order of society!"

"Aristocracy of Longevity."

HAUK, a senile nobleman, suggests a perpetual process of rejuvenation, and Dr. Kolenaty becomes the spokesman for a sally of Capek's grotesque humor.

"We'd start a wholesale trade in years. I say, that's an idea! I can see the orders coming in: 'Send us by return 1200 years of life, popular fittings, Kohn & Co.' 'Express 2,000,000 years, first-grade quality, superfine packing, Vienna branch.' Hauk, that's not at all bad."

Finally, Jaroslav Prus, the type of masterful egotist, is all for establishing an "aristocracy of longevity," the gift to be conferred on only a select few.

In this attractive scene, which abounds in those flashes of buoyant fantasy which distinguished "R. U. R.," Capek indicates the possibilities of his subject matter. But he does scarcely more than indicate them. Actually, when the precious recipe is produced, everyone shrinks from the responsibility which the possession of it would entail, and like a similarly precious document in "R. U. R.," it is destroyed.

There is much interest in conjecturing what kind of a play might have been evolved if this scene had formed the beginning and not the conclusion of it. Capek has, however, certainly justified the method which he selected. In thus saving up the climax for the end, he had to maintain the dramatic interest throughout.

Singer 337 Years Old.

He achieves this largely by means of his central character, the mysterious singer Emilia Marty, who was born in 1585, who began life as Elina Makropulos, the daughter of Hieronymus Makropulos, and who reappeared under such guises as Eugenia Montez, Ekaterina Myshkin, Elsa Mueller, Ellian MacGregor, and numerous others.

She it is who, as the embodiment of the idea of longevity (to which she is very unfavorably disposed) dominates the play. She it is who intervenes in the lengthy lawsuit between the Prus and Gregor family secrets, and who, with various results, inflames various male hearts.

These are matters for the stage rather than for the library. Yet, thanks to Capek's brisk and witty dialogue as well as his ability to depict human beings, "The Makropulos Affair" belongs to literature no less than to the theater.

Matters of Current Interest to St. Louis Lovers of Art

It is an almost invariable fact that in a one-man show an artist's works suffer by comparison. Technique becomes the paramount consideration, not only because of its similarity but its dissimilarity as well. Separate canvases often offset one another in the glory of some and the disparagement of others. In John F. Carlson's present exhibition at the Newman-Keelan galleries, the ratio is very nearly even. His versatility in subject, purpose and handling is probably the direct cause of the good balance observed here.

Of course, Mr. Carlson is best known for his rugged woodland scenes. Great blankets of snow carpet the forest interiors between the huge old tree trunks, stark and cold in the wintry dawns or twilights. Tangles of barren branches cross themselves over a woodland path that is lost in the snow, or perhaps the sunlight of a winter afternoon glares upon the drifts that have swirled or been shoveled into piles by the inmates of the shacks of a little village. Carlson's great, powerful style here finds full opportunity [illegible].

But the artist has other moods. He is not only a poet of strength, but [illegible] sentiment. The large painting entitled "Abandoned" is illustrative of this. It is twilight, with [illegible] mystic solitude. An old, deserted barn is dimly seen in the half light. Nothing remains to bespeak its erstwhile habitation except a few [illegible] wisps of hay, where the old haystack stood. The barn is slowly falling to pieces. Each storm tears loose another board. Around the [illegible], the dusk of evening shields its memories like a veil. In the distance all is quiet. The twilight seems to stretch on and on forever.

"Spring Morning."

How different is this canvas from the fresh, live young green of the "Spring Morning." Tender young saplings seem to flaunt their slenderness as they burst into leaf at the call of spring.

"[illegible] Pasture" shows still another mood. This is a smaller canvas and it is interesting here to note the painter's consistency in handling, even though reduced in proportion. The scene is a hilly pasture. Short [illegible] or cedar trees are clumped in [illegible] and threes on the rocky hillsides. A crow with beating wings [illegible] steadily ahead, and the light, [illegible] over the mountains as it is overtake the flying bird.

Carlson's manner of painting is easily followed. It is apparent that his pictures are first blocked in with a sort of wash of turpentine and thin paint. After this is dried, the actual paint is applied in great, rich brushfuls. Some of his pictures we find to be painted on burlap instead of canvas. In this way a coarser, more rugged aspect is given to the finished picture from the very start. In his manipulation of white, we often see a rather popular process. The white is generously slapped upon the canvas and then flattened with a palette knife just before the paint is thoroughly dry. It gives an opacity to the white which contrasts effectively with the rough appearance of his strong brush work.

The present exhibition will remain on view for approximately one month.

One hundred paintings have been [illegible] to the Detroit Museum for exhibition. Among them, the still life picture entitled "Fish, Fruit and Flowers" by Mrs. Kathryn Cherry of St. Louis, has been included. Such appreciation of work done by St. Louis artists is rapidly increasing with the progress attained by our painters.

St. Louis Exposition of Industrial Arts.

About three years ago a St. Louis Exposition of Industrial Arts and Crafts was organized by the St. Louis Art League with the general cooperation of some of the largest interests in the city, and was held for one month at the old Southern Hotel. Despite the generous support of many leading townspeople, newspaper men and industrial concerns, the exposition did not achieve the success it warranted. It was in October, 1919—a most inauspicious time, first, because the influence of the war upon the majority of commercial houses caused a shortage in wares which resulted in the cancellation of many of the planned exhibits and, second, because it necessitated working through the very hot summer when most people were indisposed. However, the actual exposition, whatever its proportion, was well received, and the value of such an assembly was recognized and commended.

A National Exposition of Industrial Arts and Crafts was anticipated, not to be held in St. Louis necessarily, although instigated by this city's example to the local undertaking. The business depression universal just after the war rendered such an enterprise impossible at the time and caused the realization of the idea to be postponed until a later and more prosperous period.

Now, with the return of commercial conditions to relative normalcy, the Art League proposes again to undertake a St. Louis Exposition of Industrial Arts and Crafts, the purpose of which is to illustrate the combination of beauty with utility in industrial products, as well as to show the possibilities of greater application of art in commercial output. This time, instead of endeavoring to generalize the display, the exhibits will be separated and specialized. There will be a series of exhibitions of definite phases of industrial art, as of furniture, printing, architecture, advertising, metal work, textiles, gardening, interior decorating, glassware and ceramics, wallpaper, silversmithing, etc. This series will be called the "Downtown Tollinart Exhibitions." The exhibits will be loaned by the leading manufacturers and commercial houses of the city. The league proposes to begin the series about the first of April, immediately after its display of newspaper art, cartoons, illustration and news photography, which will be held during the month of March. It is not yet decided whether the industrial exhibits will be placed in the league rooms or in some better-lighted quarters which will offer more facilities for display, arrangement and inspection.

Immediately following the present exhibition of prints by the Misses Williamina and Grace Parrish, which occupies the galleries of the Artists' Guild, a display of costume designs by Miss Marguerite Breen will be hung. Miss Breen's lovely designs are well known in St. Louis, having "come to life" in the annual pageant of the Fashion Show and in many of the productions of the Players' Club, the Junior Players' fairy plays and the activities of the Community Playground. The exhibit of Miss Breen's water color sketches and designs will continue probably for the entire month of March.

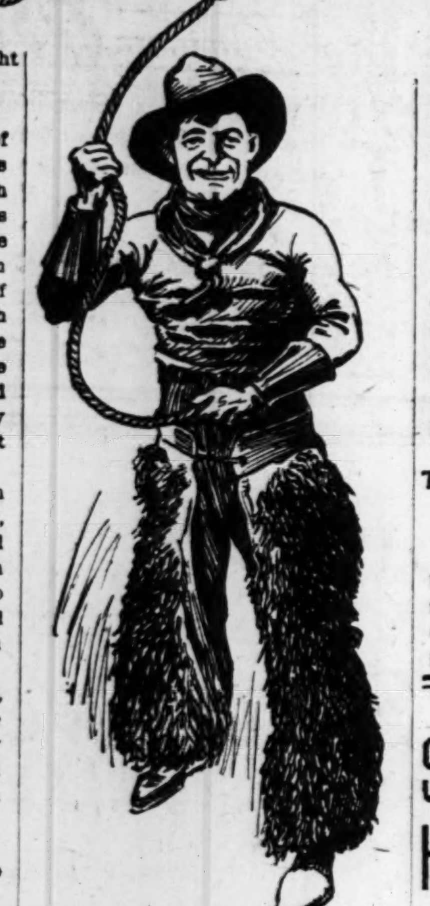
Will Rogers the Cowboy Humorist Says—



(Copyright, 1923, by the McNaught Syndicate, Inc.)

By Will Rogers.

THERE used to be some sort of an old saying, I think it was by Henry Cabot Lodge, which ran, "An awful lot of water has passed over them boulders since last I saw you." Well, friends, an awful lot of Snow has rolled off your Shovels since I communed with you last week. I see where the Weather Bureau predicts more Snow for the Northwest. Good Joke on the Weather Bureau. They can't have any more. They haven't got any place to put it.

I would love to see this storm and Snow end as quick as anybody, but I would love to see it get cold enough so that these Girls with these Goulashes on would hook up the top two Buckles. They sound like a runaway mule with chain harness on.

The Storm hit everybody, I guess, in this country except the people who ride in the New York City subways. By the time they find their right trains and get home on them it's Spring.

See a lot in the Papers about the Four La Montague Brothers, Society Bootleggers, who were sent up for four months each. Now I knew these boys. I don't mean to be Egotistical or high brow when I say that I knew them as I was not fortunate enough to know them in a social way on account of not being able to patronize them. But I was saving up, and if I had had a good season this coming year I was going to buy a Bottle from them. Well, they were Dandy fice Boys, nothing stuck up about them at all, when you consider that they had reached the top in their line, and were purveyors to the richest and, of course, prohibition families. They did this in what is already an overcrowded Profession. Still, they were just as plain as you or I. They didn't seem to realize their importance or the envy they had aroused among the great majority of our People.

Just shows you that Class will tell. Look on the opposite, or Prohibition, side. William Anderson, chief of the Antisaloon League, lost his head completely the minute he reached the top of the Prohibitionists. He couldn't stand prosperity. His name was in all the Papers every day and he billed himself like a Circus. He gloried in his position, while these real fellows with 10 times the Class and prestige—you never heard of them at all. Why? Because they were Gentleman and their dealings had always been with Gentlemen. You see, when it comes to the showdown, Class will tell. He wouldn't even plead Guilty.

Look what the Warden said after they had been there a few days: "These are real fellows and I wish we had more like them here."

Now did you ever hear of a Warden complimenting a Prohibitionist that way and saying: "I wish we had more of them?" No! Nobody ever did.

New Jersey Breaks a Record.

NEW JERSEY broke a life-long precedent last week. She made the front page without a murder. They put on a little religious Tableau similar to the Passion play over in (I can't spell that name). Anyway, they put this on in a Church on Sunday, and all were hauled up and fined for immorality and Vice. Now they are changing Psalm singing in Jersey from Sunday till Monday, and then, I suppose, pay a theatrical license.

They will be arresting some Preacher next Sunday and claim he was doing a Monologue on the Sabbath. I think this play disturbed the peace of the Detectives who are working on the Hall Murder Clews. What's worrying me is how the Police ever found out where the Church was.

We had quite a few Notables in to our Show last week, which I introduced to the audience. We had Stanislavsky, the head and the principal Actor of the Russian Art Players, in to look us over. Wanted to learn just how not to act by seeing us. I tried to get him to speak in his native Tongue and I would interpret it for him (he speaks no English) as I do that very often when I am introducing some Moving Picture Producer who don't use our Mother Tongue either. Well, these Russians are having a wonderful season here in New York; even the weather is with them. I doubt if a Russian in the summer time would be as attractive. Nobody in New York knows what they are talking about, so it has developed into a fad or game to make your neighbors, sitting around you, think that you know. Nothing, outside of Grand Opera in a Foreign Tongue, has BORED the rich out of more money than these (so-called) simple Russian Peasants.

We are a fine Nation to call some other Nation simple. The best acting I saw there was by the audience. When you take three thousand people that act like they like a thing when they don't know what it's all about, that's real acting—on the Audience's part.

We also had in Morris Gost, the Great Theatrical Manager who brought them over. He is the first Man to discover that the price is the thing. Keith and the Orpheum Circuit had been trying 20 years to get Vaudeville even up to $1.50. Along comes Morris Gest with a Vaudeville troupe from Russia and charges $5.00 and they have been here for two years.

The Growth of Highbrowism.

YOU know there is a great tendency all over the Country now to be High Brow. Everybody is fourflushing and pretending they are not what they really are, especially here in New York. More people should work for their Dinner instead of dressing for it. Half the stiff bosom Shirts worn nowadays, the Laundry is due on them yet.

There are men belonging to swell Golf Clubs today, who if their wives ever wanted a Cook, would faint. Their dues are paid before the grocery bill.

We also had Mildred Harris Chaplin, Charles' first wife, whom I introduced, and, say, she is beautiful. An awful lot of divorcing going on now in the movies—getting ready for next season's marriages.

I see where my good friend Harold Lloyd got married. Now there is one of the finest Boys you can find in this or any other Business. The income that he makes now is really astounding, yet he is just a plain, lovable fellow and I want to join along with the rest of the World in wishing him happiness. And the same goes for Charlie when (I say "when") he gets married. For he is a Genius; and they don't raise many of those things any more.

I have often been asked if Charlie Chaplin is funny off the screen. YES! I have never had the pleasure of an intimate acquaintance with him, but enough to have heard him pull some terribly funny stuff along any line you mention, and he is also of a very serious mind and well informed on the deep questions of the world.

Been an awful lot in the papers about some old King in Egypt, Tutankhamen. They are digging him out with all his junk with him. Well, the U. S., not to be outdone by Egypt, opened up one of our sailor's graves to see if the Russian Crown Jewels were not buried with him. Even if they had been, what right did they have to dig him up? So you see there is nothing as silly as a Government when they pull a bone. This fellow was just a Sailor who died in Russian Waters, so they think he has the Crown Jewels. Suppose if King George lost his Crown they would search Harvey.

SHE DARKENED HER GRAY HAIR

Tells How She Did It with a Home-Made Remedy.

Mrs. E. H. Boots, a well-known resident of Buchanan County, Ia., who darkened her gray hair, made the following statement:

"Any lady or gentleman can darken their gray or faded hair, and make it soft and glossy with this simple remedy, which they can mix at home. To half a pint of water add 1 ounce of bay rum, one small box of Barbo Compound and ¼ ounce of glycerine. These ingredients can be purchased at any drug store at very little cost. Apply to the hair every other day until the gray hair is darkened sufficiently. It does not color the scalp, is not greasy and does not rub off. It will make a gray-haired person look twenty years younger."

longing to paint — a dream he chucked overboard 21 years before at the altar.

Warner sees the sixpence at his feet as clearly as he does the bright moon overhead. Matters are coming to a head despite his inhibition of the smock complex. They grow worse when the son, a boy, with talent indicative of a great architect, proposes to follow in the footsteps of his father and wed the sweet young thing at the next country house. Geoffrey Kerr is an admirable young Harvard man with an Eton accent and Frieda Inescourt, as the girl, can challenge a full dozen of the most beautiful women in America and win on points.

That Happy Ending.

HERE was the start of what might have been a fine play, and which now is a comedy that has every reasonable right to a six months' run. But Prof. Baker's pupil shuns the hard reality of a rat-infested garret and in the end packs the son off to Paris for study with an income sufficient to support a wife in Montmartre style.

It is a bit unfair to the audience for a playwright to offer a man a choice of two vital things and then give him both by an ironic self-sacrifice on the part of the father. If a man at 40 has no right to a career, then assuredly Dr. Osler's jest that pneumonia is a great boon is not far from wrong.

The cast is a perfectly chosen one. Mr. Warner always could be the best of saintly heroes, and Lucille Carlisle as the sympathetic and marvelously understanding wife is deft and smooth in simulating 20 years of unbroken love. Beatrice Miles has her second chance on Broadway in the part of the comedy maid who serves as the father's improvised model and makes the most of it.

Fannie Hurst's "Humoresque," With Laurette Taylor, Tuesday Night.

AT last Miss Fannie Hurst's dramatization of her story, "Humoresque," will arrive at the Vanderbilt Theater Tuesday night, with Laurette Taylor at the head of the cast. Other new productions of the week will be William Ricciardi's comedy drama, "Mister Malatesta," at the Princess, Monday night; and "Roger Bloomer," an American play, by John Howard Lawson, which will be presented Friday night by the Equity Players at the Forty-eighth Street Theater. The play is in 32 scenes. The cast is led by Henry Hull and Mary Fowler. The Moscow Art Theater promises two productions not previously seen here—three scenes from Dostoievsky's "The Brothers Karamazoff," and Turgenieff's one-act play, "The Lady From the Provinces."

"The Guilty One," with Pauline Frederick, after a road tour, including St. Louis, will arrive March 19 at the Selwyn Theater, supplanting Mme. Nazimova in "Dagmar." . . . Certain producers believe they see a way, by means of "invitation" or "subscription" performances, of getting around the well-known blue laws prohibiting theatrical exhibitions on Sunday. As a test, it is announced that Wagstaff Gribble's "March Hares" will be given at the Little Theater on Sunday evening, March 11.

A new play which borrows its name from Nietzsche and some of its incidents from the life of Schopenhauer, is "The Blond Beast," by Henry Myers, which is being shown in off hours at the Plymouth. It is described as "a present-day comedy, with a philosophical caveman and a flapper in mortal combat." . . . Rehearsals are under way for Sidney Toler's play, "The Exile," starring Eleanor Painter and Jose Rubens.

"Helen of Troy (N. Y.)."

THE playwrights of "Dulcy" and "To the Ladies," Messrs. Kaufman and Connelly, have finished a piece in which their satirical humor and mocking fancy should shine—to-wit, the text and rhymes of a musical play, "Helen of Troy (N. Y.)." . . . For once the public has not warmed to Mr. Gillette in more or less familiar parts. Not so long ago he began a tour with "Sherlock Holmes" and "Dear Brutus" for contrasting plays. Now, before he has visited any metropolitan city, the journey has come to an abrupt end.

Report runs that Florenz Ziegfeld will produce no new "Follies" until next spring, and that the "institution" will henceforth be biennial rather than annual. The present entertainment will run its course in New York, it is said, and then be dispatched to other cities well through the course of 1923-24. In the meanwhile, musical plays like that prepared for Fannie Brice will tenant the New Amsterdam.

Miss Kummer's playful little comedy, "Good Gracious, Annabelle," was badly received in London, where Miss Marie Tempest recently produced it. . . . Shaw's "Ceasar and Cleopatra," unacted in America since Forbes-Robertson's day, has caught the eye and ear of the Theater Guild for next season. This organization also announces a production of "King Lear," with Rudolph Schildkraut in the title role. . . . "The God of Vengeance" moved this week from the Greenwich Village Theater to the Apollo.

Another One!

OF course, Booth Tarkington has written a new play, called "Bristol Glass," which is to open in Chicago on April 9, with Gregory Kelly and Ruth Gordon. . . . The Moscow Art Theater's example in forbidding applause and curtain calls until the end of the play has been adopted by eight productions now running in New York.

Despite the prestige of Mrs. Fiske, returning after three years' absence, "The Dice of the Gods" did not do well in Chicago, and closed there tonight. It lasted only four weeks. Chicago critics diagnose the fatality as "an indifferent play clouding a brilliant performance." . . . Plans for staging "The World We Live In" at the Auditorium next month are said to have been abandoned. After the scenery and other paraphernalia had been shipped to Chicago, it was found that other engagements at the Auditorium would interfere with continuous playing. The production may be made there later in the season.

The Theater Guild will celebrate its fourth birthday with a dinner at the Waldorf-Astoria next Sunday evening. Frank Crowninshield will be toastmaster. The speakers include Heywood Broun, Laura Hope Crews, Alexander Woollcott, Walter Lippmann, Dudley Digges, Eleanor Robson Belmont, John Corbin, Walter Pritchard Eaton and Constantin Vladimir Stanislavsky.

Among those assisting at the reception preceding the dinner will be Edna St. Vincent Millay, Margaret Wycherly, Joseph Schildkraut, Kathleen MacDonell, Arnold Daly, Lucille Watson, Margalo Gillmore, Louise Closser Hale, Louis Calvert, Lillebil Ibsen, Henry Travers, Effie Shannon, Phyllis Povah, Basil Sydney, Violet Heming, Frank Reicher, Blanche Yurka and Florence Eldridge.

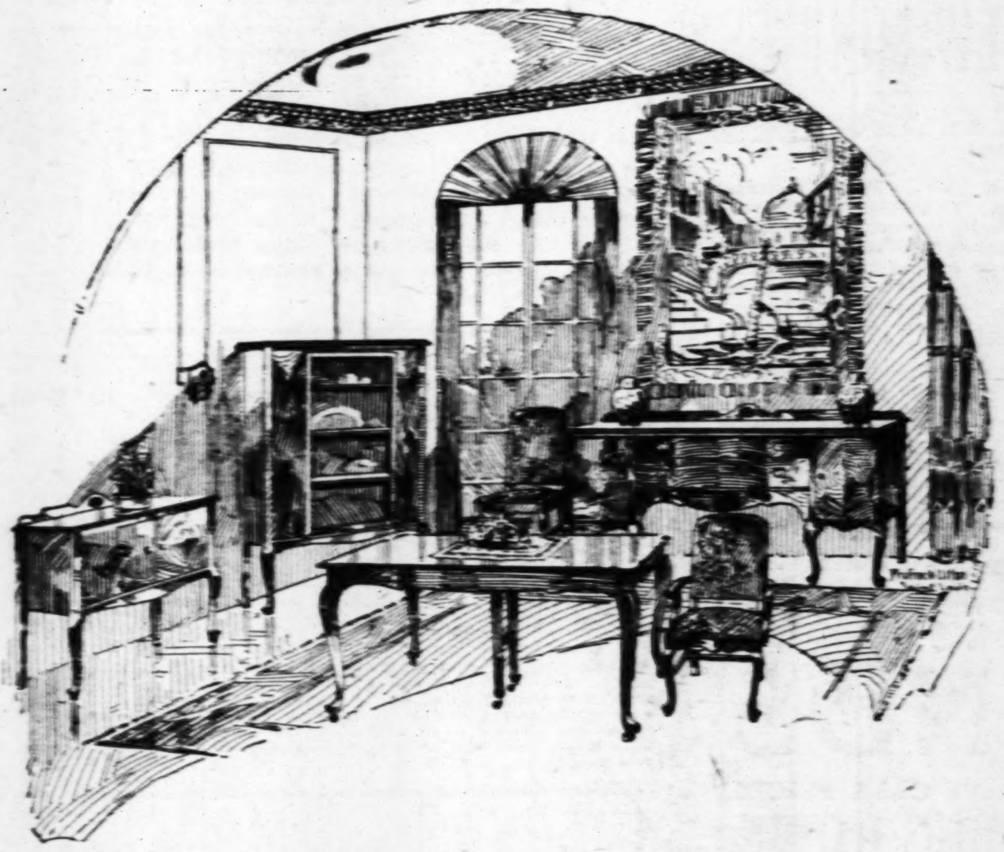
The Once-a-Year Sale Event
Enters Its Last Week



EDITORIAL
A Few Study; Many Benefit!
The average age of Americans has lengthened fifteen years in the past fifty-two years, from 41 in 1870 to 56 in 1922.
Health reports show that the St. Louis death rate is only twelve persons annually out of every 1000 inhabitants. Again science triumphs!
Our health, our conveniences, our pleasures were never so well provided for since civilization began.
But just as we wonder at present over past improvements, so will coming generations wonder at their improvements over ours.
TIME WILL NEVER END; WONDERS WILL NEVER CEASE!
(Signed) Henry Prufrock
Feb. 24, 1923.

OUR major furniture sale of the year is drawing to a close. Unless you want to pay more for it—don't put off buying that furniture you have been thinking so much about. Wholesale costs of furniture are daily mounting higher and higher and many of the Suites we are offering in this sale cannot be bought from the factory at the prices we are asking for them

PRUFROCK-LITTON'S store has always been famous for its comparatively low prices on quality furniture. Our February Sales are known far and wide as the furniture bargain event of the year. And now, this last week of the sale is teeming with opportunities.

WE have gone over our stock and made further price revisions; a few new suites delayed in transit have arrived and everything is in readiness to make this the biggest sale week in our history.

The Table is 45x60 inches with a six-foot extension and the 38-inch wide Serving Table is a useful piece. The China Closet has a glass panel in front. Sample Lamps Reduced
About twice a year we reduce all of our table, bridge and floor lamps and our customers have learned to look forward to this event to secure a lamp of distinction at a modest cost.
A manufacturer of high-grade lamps exhibited lamps in our space at the recent Grand Rapids show and we bought the entire line of samples at a big reduction. These samples have just arrived, fresh and new, and they are marked at tempting prices.
Other lamps, used to ornament our display rooms and now slightly soiled, are greatly underpriced for immediate clearance.
The top floor lamp illustrated has a black base, delicately carved and polychromed. The shade is of rose silk covered in black georgette and trimmed with gold lace braid and black silk fringe. Special $55
The second lamp, a bridge lamp, has a black and gold base, elegantly carved. The silk shades come in a variety of the popular shades of rose, tan, maroon and other wanted colors. Reduced to $22

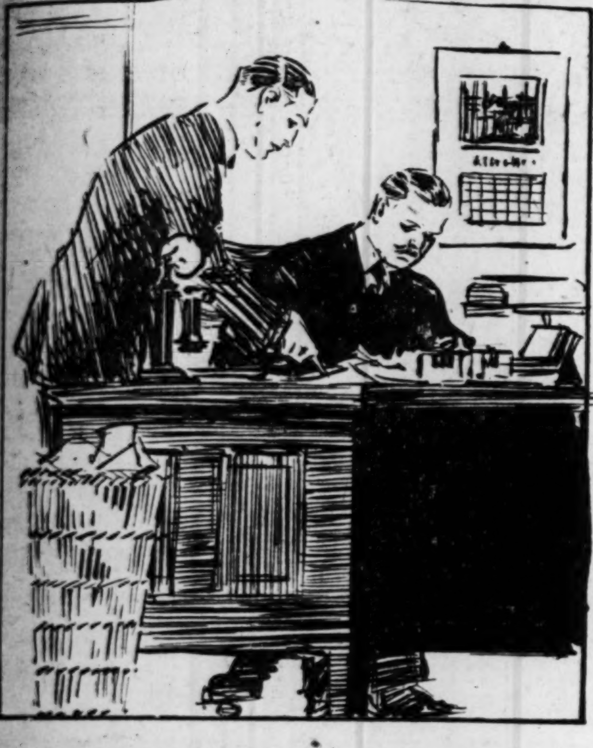
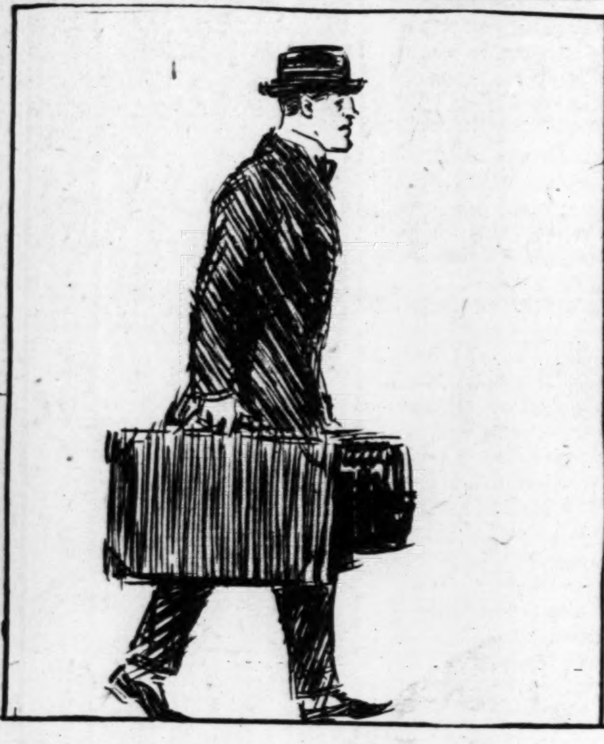
TRUE LIFE STORIES
PART FIVE ST LOUIS SUNDAY MORNING, FEBRUARY 25, 1923. PAGES 9—16.

How the Banker Double-Crossed the Great Yegg Syndicate in a Deal in Stolen Bonds

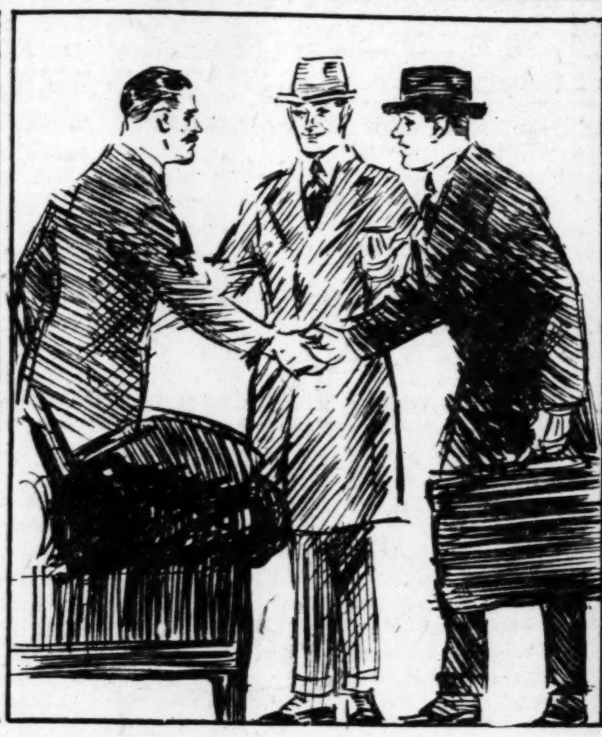
AS "MR. X OF DAKOTA," HE SOUGHT CHEAP SECURITIES TO MAKE UP HIS OWN SHORTAGE



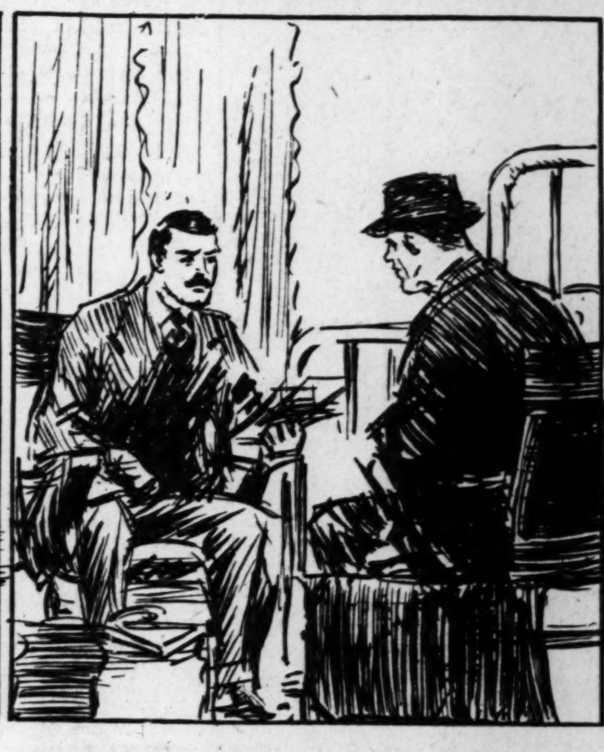
Clew to yeggmen's bond syndicate developed through the effort to sell 10 $1000 Philippine bonds in Minneapolis that had been stolen from a Cincinnati bank, in daylight robbery, by a gang supposed to have headquarters in St. Louis.



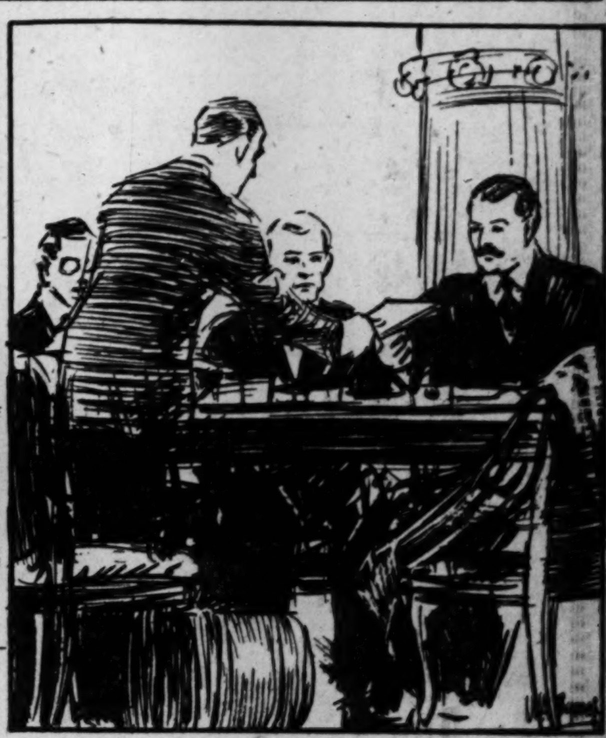
Banker Matthews then went to Minneapolis where, getting in touch with the stolen bond syndicate's intermediary, he represented himself as "Mr. X.," a North Dakota banker, short in his accounts, and anxious to buy good securities cheap so that he could restore what he had stolen.



Finally, after much negotiation, with the intermediary, arrangements were made for the delivery of certain securities to him upon a proper advance of real money, which, the intermediary said, was necessary to convince the gang of his good faith.



Shortly thereafter, the intermediary appeared with the 10 $1000 Philippine bonds that the robbers had stolen from Mr. Matthews' bank and, upon the payment of the sum agreed upon, making $5000 in all, the bonds were turned over to the banker.



In subsequent deals, $70,000 more in bonds were delivered to Mr. Matthews along with $80,000 in currency taken from the Denver mint in the daring daylight holdup last December. The serial numbers of these bills were known and they were "too hot" for the gangsters to cash themselves.

And They Sold Him $160,000 Woth of 'Stuff,' Including $80,000 Which St. Louis Robbers Took From His Own Bank and $80,000 in Currency Taken From the Denver Mint for Which He Paid Them Only $28,000 — Then They Became Frightened and Ended Negotiations but Not Before He Had Gathered Evidence, Which, Bank Detectives Say, Will Result in the Rounding Up of the Whole Gang.

The Cincinnati banker who, as "Mr. X," recovered $160,000 in securities from the stolen bond syndicate.

By F. A. BEHYMER

A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch

CINCINNATI, O., Feb. 21.

IT was diamond cut diamond in high finance when E. H. Matthews, Cincinnati lawyer and bank president, matched wits with a nationwide ring of bank robbers and their agents, who had more than $2,000,000 of stolen securities and currency to sell. He played the crooks' own game and beat them at it, winning $160,000 from them on a discard of only $28,000, quitting the game $132,000 to the good.

Incidentally he helped gather evidence against them which Government agents and Pinkertons are following, with prospects of a roundup of a score of the boldest bank robbers in the country, who are believed to have had their headquarters in St. Louis.

"Frozen assets," the rock upon which many a flourishing banking enterprise has been wrecked, placed the bank robbers' ring at a disadvantage in the money mart. The treasure caches of the robbers were choked with perfectly good money which they could not spend and gilt-edge securities which they could not negotiate without more risk than prudent robbers like to take.

In their dilemma they turned to fiscal agents who would undertake to sell the plunder at bargain prices. In dealings of such delicacy fiscal agents require the services of subagents, wherefore it came about that a subagent intrusted with the merchandising of contraband collateral bethought him to double cross the crooks and maybe turn an honest penny or at least conserve his conscience by playing into the hands of constituted authority. And presently the crooks were trafficking, all unaware, with one of their victims and not only getting the worst of the deal, but letting themselves into the net of the law.

Enter the "Defaulting Banker"

They thought they were dealing with a South Dakota banker who had been doing a little bank robbing on his own account in the polite way of appropriating to his own use the resources of the bank whose destinies he directed, and who wanted to make good his shortage by buying cheaply the securities which other bank robbers by more uncouth methods had extracted from other banks. He was the "Mr. X" of the equation. They never saw him, and for good reasons of their own he never saw them. But their agent told them he was "on the square," and they had confidence in their fiscal agent and he had confidence in his subagent, and the whole outfit walked steadily forward into the net which had been spread for them after they robbed the Hamilton County Bank at Walnut Hills, a Cincinnati suburb, Sept. 18, 1922.

When that robbery was planned, probably in St. Louis, according to the detectives, the robbers, with the shortsightedness of their kind, canvassed only the prospects of getting the money and getting away. They did not inquire who was president of the bank. If they had been told that he was also a lawyer, it would not have meant anything to them. But that was where they made their mistake.

Getting the money and getting away with it was accomplished with comparative ease, as they had expected. The bank was in an outlying community center at Woodburn avenue and Madison road. At 9:30 a. m. five men suddenly appeared in the bank and with drawn revolvers drove the employes into a back room. The money chest, in which the securities were kept, was in the rear of the vault, protected by two combinations. One of the robbers took M. C. Greife, the cashier, in there and ordered him to open the combinations. He opened one and stalled over the other until the robber hit him on the head and knocked him unconscious.

Robert Wallace, the head teller, was then brought and was compelled to open the combination. Meantime, as customers entered the bank, they were lined up with the employes until there were 18. The robbers took $12,500 cash, $35,000 Liberty Bonds and $218,000 municipal, industrial and other bonds. The people in the bank were told that if they showed themselves outside within 10 minutes their heads would be blown off. The robbers walked out and disappeared.

Certain Bonds Unlisted As Trap

When it came to listing the losses, President Matthews, functioning as Lawyer Matthews, suggested that nothing be said about $32,500 of easily negotiable bonds, by way of encouraging the robbers to the sooner and the more carelessly attempt to dispose of them. So it was given out that the loss was $232,000. The trap was set and Matthews sat back to wait and watch.

Meantime, events were shaping at Minneapolis which were driving the quarry toward the trap. Back in May 26 men had been indicted there on the charge of conspiring to rob the mails in a wholesale way. The indicted men included bank employes, lawyers, pawnbrokers, second-hand dealers and Stanley McCormack, vice president of the H. S. Stevens Brokerage Co., one of the indicted men, was alleged to have trafficked in bonds stolen from the mails. This man had a friend who tried to get him out of the trouble. This brought him into contact with McCormack and others. His efforts in behalf of his friend gave him standing with the other indicted men. They concluded that a man who would trouble himself about an indicted friend could be trusted and was worth cultivating. They needed somebody that they could trust. Selling stolen currency and securities calls for salemanship, finesse and faithfulness. They sized the man up as having the required qualifications.

They sought him out and, although he exhibited a certain wariness, he gave them to understand that he was not averse to doing some selling for them if the goods were as represented. To convince him that the goods were all right, one of them brought him $10,000 of Philippine Government bonds. They did not tell him where the bonds came from nor mention the circumstance that they had not been listed among the securities stolen from the Hamilton County Bank. The robbers and their fiscal agent had probably concluded that the Hamilton County Bank people did not know that they had been robbed of these bonds, which would have manifest advantage in merchandising them.

The intermediary, it seems, was a person who preferred to make money honestly. It occurred to him that if he could find out from whom the bonds had been stolen he might be able to do business with the former owners as profitably and at less risk than if he undertook to market them regardless.

Gang Begins to Nibble at Bait

He asked Chief Postoffice Inspector Ralph Hugdall at Minneapolis if anybody had reported $10,000 worth of Philippine Government bonds as lost, strayed or stolen. The inspector didn't know, but he would make inquiry. He asked the Chief Inspector at Cincinnati if he knew anything about them. The Cincinnati inspector asked Matthews if anything like that had been taken from the Hamilton County Bank.

That was how Matthews found out that the robbers had begun to nibble at the bait of his trap. He went to Minneapolis and met the intermediary and the game of wits began, with "Mr. X." of South Dakota sitting in the shadows and playing the intermediary against the fiscal agent who played with the robbers in the dark background. The price which the intermediary had been told to ask for the Philippine bonds was 50 cents on the dollar, or $5000 for the lot. Partly to show that "Mr. X" meant business and partly because $10,000 Philippine bonds were a good buy at $5000, even if he was buying his own stuff, Matthews bought them for $5000.

The man from whom the intermediary received the bonds had told him that with $5000 to show good faith he could get the marketing of $273,000 in Liberty Bonds.

When the $5000 was paid over to him he went away and was gone a week. He said he had been to Chicago and Fort Wayne, Ind., but that the holders of the Liberty Bonds were afraid to trust him with them and were going to relay them by automobiles to Minneapolis.

Negotiations continued, with the mythical South Dakota banker pressing for securities. Word came that if "Mr. X" would put up $3000 to show good faith a batch of $70,000 bonds would be sold to him at 60 cents on the dollar. Matthews put up the $3000, to show how anxious "Mr. X" was to get the bonds. As a further evidence of good faith "Mr. X" was asked to make a payment of $20,000 on the $70,000 bonds. He turned over the $20,000 to the intermediary and the $70,000 bonds were turned over to him. They proved to be, as Matthews had hoped, part of the bonds stolen from the Hamilton County Bank.

Impatience of "Mr. X" Is Rewarded

The mythical "Mr. X" was in a bad fix. His shortage was likely to be discovered at any minute. And if it came to that he would be out of the market as a purchaser of stolen securities. He intimated that unless more were forthcoming, he would turn back the $80,000 and demand his $28,000. The intermediary passed the word along to the fiscal agents and the agents passed it along to the bank robbers. By way of getting the interest of "Mr. X" and keeping him in line they sent back word that they had $973,000 worth of bonds but they also had $200,000 of currency stolen from the Denver mint which was very much in the way, as the serial numbers were known and it could not be spent without too much risk. Wouldn't the kind "Mr. X" take some of that stuff off their hands at 60 cents on the dollar? By and by they would have more bonds for him, between $2,000,000 and $3,000,000 worth.

Matthews did not want to buy Denver mint currency, so that intermediary demurred on the ground that it was "too hot" (thieves' slang for dangerous), as murder had been committed in that robbery. The fiscal agent was reluctant to turn it back to the robbers. He hid it in the basement of the house of a friend. The negotiations continued and Matthews decided that in order to avoid arousing the suspicion of the fiscal agent and the robber he would accept it. So it was brought from the friends' house and delivered to Matthews—16,000 nice new $5 bills. He did not pay the 60 cents on the dollar, though. Instead, he used it try to compel the gang to deliver the bonds.

Something went wrong then. The mysterious "Mr. X" fell under suspicion. Or maybe it was only excess of caution. Anyway, before any more bonds were delivered something leaked out and the robbers and their fiscal agent, with their shelves still cluttered with currency and securities, shut up shop and the deal was off. The $80,000 in currency has been returned to the Government. As a purely business proposition it was probably fortunate that they quit when they did. As it was, Matthews had $80,000 in bonds and $80,000 in currency, for which he had paid only $28,000. If the thing had gone on, he would in a little while have separated them from all their hard-earned wealth and they would have had to go to work for a living.

Names of the Gang Known

As it is, they still have no end of currency and securities, but the difficulty of selling them even at the bargain prices they are willing to take has been greatly increased and Government agents and detectives, well-armed with the information which developed during the game of wits, are closing in upon them. The prospects are that most of them in the near future will have greater troubles than those which grew out of the embarrassment of riches that are difficult of negotiation.

Not only the fiscal agent, but other members of the "clearing house" are know to the authorities and numerous arrests are considered certain.

Information obtained by Matthews in the course of the negotiations leads him to believe that the syndicate operating in Minneapolis and St. Paul acts not only for gangs which robbed the Hamilton County Bank and the Denver mint, but probably for the different bank robber bands in the country. These bands, he believes, after robbing a bank, hide the securities in different places until they can be worked off through the Minnesota clearing house. At the time that the overtures were being made for the $973,000 in securities, Matthews was told that $70,000 of the amount was in St. Paul and $473,000 in Chicago. The fiscal agent, during the negotiations, made frequent trips to different cities, from which Matthews inferred that he was keeping in touch with different gangs.

There is one indication also that plunder obtained in Canada was cleared through the Minnesota organization. With the $70,000 worth of bonds delivered in one batch by the intermediary were Canadian Thrift Stamps to the amount of $405. These were turned over to the Government officials. It has not been announced whether their ownership has been traced.

The Hamilton County Bank was broken by the robbery. The loss of $265,000 so depleted its resources that it could not continue. It was

BENJAMIN PURNELL AND MRS. MARY PURNELL

The couple are known as "Benjamin and Mary" and are the leaders of Benton Harbor's eccentric religious cult which was founded by Purnell in 1904 for the announced purpose of assembling the remnants of the 12 lost tribes of Israel. The sect owns widespread property interests and operates the Benton Harbor street car line. The men wear long hair and beards.

BENTON HARBOR, Mich., Feb. 24.

THE courts of Michigan, which in the past have heard much but seen little of "King" Benjamin Purnell, long-haired and shaggy-bearded leader of the House of David, are busily engaged just now in a game of hide and seek with the prophet of Benton Harbor's eccentric religious colony with the expectation of bringing him into their presence for the first time when two damage suits, filed against him recently and totaling $800,000, come to trial in the spring.

Just where "King" Benjamin is sojourning has not been clearly established as yet, although his absence from his customary haunts has been noticed for two months or more, but the popular belief in the region of Benton Harbor is that he will be found on High Island, an almost inaccessible retreat in Lake Michigan, when officials decide that his appearance before a tribunal is necessary.

In the meantime, his resourceful attorneys are bending every effort to keep this from becoming necessary and are seeking through technicalities and dilatory proceedings to prevent the suits from coming to trial.

There are several obvious reasons why "King" Benjamin might dislike to appear in court. For one thing, some of his former adherents assert he has taught his subjects—and they have believed his word—that he is no common mortal, but is a messenger of Jehovah and, therefore, above all laws and courts designed for ordinary men, who, beside him, are but as "crawling serpents and red dragons."

His response to a court summons, then, would almost certainly expose his reputation to uncomfortable hazards and make an embarrassing explanation to his followers necessary.

Another reason for his shyness readily appears in the seriousness of the charges behind these damage suits which are made by two young women, former members of the sect, who declare they were subjected to indignities at the hands of Purnell from the time they were 10 years old and finally, when he had tired of them, were forced into marriage to men they scarcely knew in order to protect himself.

Harrowing Story Told by Sisters

These young women are sisters, Mrs. Ruth Bamford Reed and Mrs. Gladys Bamford Reed, 17 and 19 years old, respectively. Until about a year ago they were among the faithful subjects of Benjamin. Then suddenly they were compelled to marry, they allege, and shortly afterward were "deported" without funds and left to shift for themselves. They are now said to be separated from their husbands and are hiding in Detroit until they shall be called upon to testify.

Harrowing is the story they recite in their petitions, which were filed recently in the Court of St. Joseph—a story of weird ceremonies and mystic rites, conducted with impressive solemnity as a mask for a vicious and insidious cult of immorality.

Girls of tender age, they assert, are initiated into the secrets of the "inner chamber" by "King" Benjamin himself, then taught by their elders that they have been particularly blessed. When Benjamin tires of having them around, it is charged, they are married to men chosen in a lottery and are then either forbidden to live with their husbands or are ousted from the colony.

Once, it is related, when an investigation of the sect's practices by the State of Michigan seemed imminent, some 24 couples were hastily summoned and married with a single ceremony, and at another, 12 girls were compelled to wed husbands selected for them under threat of being imprisoned on an isolated island in the lake.

The attorney for the sisters, Walter M. Nelson of Detroit, who promises a complete inquiry into the colony's habits, declares that he can produce no less than 63 women who have had experiences similar to those related by his clients with Benjamin, under pretense that his conduct was part of a religious ceremony, and he further announces that he is ready to prove that there have been numerous instances of compulsory marriages, like those described by the Bamford sisters.

"Blackmail," Say Prophet's Followers

In reply, Purnell's attorneys come back with the charge that Nelson is at the head of a plot to blackmail the House of David and its 62-year-old leader through baseless scandal tales. Members of the sect have rallied to the cause of their "king" with affidavits testifying to the uprightness and holiness of Benjamin and even the mother of the girls has filed suit for an injunction to restrain her daughters from continuing with the cases. The present indications, however, are that the charges will be threshed out in court.

Circuit Judge Des Voignes of Paw Paw has denied the motion of Purnell's attorneys for the dismissal of the suits, on the ground that the petitions for the appointment of a "next friend" for the girls were not properly verified, and has ruled that Nelson may amend the petitions and continue the case. There are four counts in each suit and $100,000 is demanded on each count. Of all the numerous actions that have been filed against Purnell in the last few years this is one of a very few that promises tangible results.

There is still other litigation, however, that is intimately bound up with the suits of the Bamford sisters and which is causing "King" Benjamin no little trouble on its own account. This is the suit of John W. Hansel and his wife, Mrs. Esther Johnson Hansel, former members of the colony, which was filed at Grand Rapids a year ago. This action demands damages of $80,000 upon the allegation that the Hansels were ousted from the colony without remuneration for their property, which, they say, they turned over to the sect, or for their labor.

As a counter attack, Purnell has filed suit for $200,000 damages against the Hansels, alleging that Hansel, at the time of his expulsion in 1920, was identified with a rebellion against the rule of Benjamin and was planning to set up a new colony, to be known as the "League of Nations," over which a woman was to rule as "queen." In the course of that uprising, Purnell states, the headquarters of the sect was looted after a "gas attack" and $100,000 of the colony's funds stolen. The queen of the new colony was to have been Gertrude Bully, once a leader among the women of the cult, he alleges.

Colony Rallied to Benjamin's Aid

Charges of immorality against Benjamin were aired at the first hearing of the suit brought by Hansel, but the "king" was exonerated at that time by affidavits signed by members of the colony. It happened that two of these affidavits were signed by the Bamford sisters. Purnell's lawyers now seize upon this point as evidence of a blackmail scheme and charge the girls with perjury in their recent petitions, but Attorney Nelson answers that they were forced to swear to Benjamin's holiness.

H. T. Dewhirst, head of Purnell's legal battery and now a member of the sect, asserts that Mrs. John Hansel, who formerly was the private secretary of Benjamin, is a partner of Nelson and the Bamford sisters in the plot and he produces three affidavits signed by sisters of Mrs. Hansel purporting to show that she sought to induce them to join in the conspiracy, testify that Benjamin wronged them and share in large sums Nelson was said to have promised he would obtain for them.

And so the controversy rages on. The trial of the suit brought by the Hansels is set for March 19 and it is believed that the Bamford suits may come up some time in April.

Story Told by Bamford Sisters

The story of the Bamford sisters, as given in their affidavits, which are similar, goes back to 1904, when "King" Benjamin made his pilgrimage to Australia in search of converts to his faith, teaching that the colony was the resting place for the remnants of the 12 lost tribes of Israel. Many religiously inclined persons joined the sect, and among them were George Bamford, a man said to have had property at that time worth $100,000, and his wife, Elina.

Now one of the first requisites for membership in the House of David is that all property of the converts be turned over to the colony, and, according to Attorney Nelson, that means to Benjamin Purnell, the prophet.

So Bamford and his wife turned over all their worldly effects, including even family jewels and Mrs. Bamford's wedding ring, and came to Benton Harbor to live in Benjamin's "blessed colony."

Shortly after the arrival Bamford died. Gladys was a baby then and Ruth was born a few months later. Her affidavit, which is typical, relates that as a child she knew no other atmosphere than that of the House of David, but that her life was like the lives of average children until she reached the age of 10, when she was initiated into the secrets of the "inner chamber." Her story goes on somewhat as follows:

"There were 27 girls in my class and we went to school to several different teachers, but all of them taught us that whatever 'King' Benjamin did was holy, sacred and right, and that all other men were wicked and lowly in comparison with him. Then, often, the 'King' himself would gather several of the little girls together in his room and read to them from his holy writings.

"There was a sideboard in the room and it was covered with dainties. After reading to us he would give us candies and other good things to eat. We thought at first that it was a great treat to be called before the 'King.'

"Then one day I noticed that he was watching me with a queer look in his eyes and when the class hour was over he called me into his room alone. As I went in I heard the lock click behind me and I was badly frightened, but he told me he was a holy man and could do no wrong."

After that, she says, she always did as Benjamin directed.

That was in 1914, the affidavit states, and similar incidents occurred at short intervals until 1920, when Ruth rebelled and was immediately ordered to marry Robert P. Reed, who was almost a stranger to her. They were then given a ticket to Johnstown, Pa., she asserts, and left there stranded, with but a few dollars derived from the sale of her bridegroom's bicycle.

The affidavit of the elder girl closely resembles that of her sister, except it relates that once when a teacher found her weeping after the initiation into the "inner chamber" she comforted the child by telling her that she had been a party to a divine ceremony. Gladys also related that Purnell once told her that love was a religious rite which only he could perform and that it was her duty to obey him in all things. She was forced into a marriage with Benjamin Thomas Rubel, she says and they were sent away to Grand Rapids, Mich.

So startling have these charges been that thousands of residents of Benton Harbor and St. Joseph, Mich., who know members of the David colony almost as neighbors, have taken sides with a vengeance. Benton Harbor and St. Joseph are practically one city, though they have separate governments. Some there are who agree with Benjamin's attorneys that the girls are insane or are engaged in a blackmail plot. Others are convinced that there are love cult practices in the colony and urge that a sweeping investigation be conducted.

"If we are insane it is because of what we have gone through," the younger girl is said to have answered when told that Benjamin's attorneys intend to use that charge in fighting her case. "We are not insane. We are only asking for what is ours. The House of David got all our father's money and Purnell's wife is even wearing mother's wedding ring."

The Purnell legal talent has been getting affidavits concerning the Bamford sisters, too, and Edith Meldrim, secretary of the bearded leader, has prepared one which declares their charges are false, that Purnell never mistreated them, but was always kind and indulgent and fatherly toward them.

Other Evidence Against Prophet

Another is presented by Dr. L. B. Estes, a member of the strange sect. In this document, read in court, he swore that he believed the girls to be partially insane, that their grandmother had died of insanity and that their uncle was committed to an asylum in Australia. Their mentality, he asserted, was about that of girls 12 and 13 years old.

But there is still more evidence tending to substantiate the stories of the Bamford sisters. This was introduced by Mrs. Hilda Prichard Hansel about a year ago in her annulment suit, heard in Chicago. She, too, was brought up in the House of David from childhood.

In 1914, she said, she had been forced to marry Russell L. Hansel, one of Benjamin's adherents, on 24 hours' notice, under penalty, if she refused, of being imprisoned on a wild island owned by the colony near Traverse City.

"I was compelled to go through with this wedding to please the commanders," she testified in court. "My sister, Lena, who underwent similar treatment, and I were too young to understand. We had been brought up in 'King' Benjamin's house since we were children. When they told me I would have to marry I was trustful and agreed. There were 11 other girls. We were taken into a room, lined up against a wall and our prospective husbands came in and looked at us.

"I drew Russell Hansel. I had never seen him before. They told us if we refused we would be exiled to an island in the northern part of Lake Michigan.

"After the ceremony I went to my mother's house and never saw my husband again. It was against the faith for husbands and wives to associate."

The Prichards also came from Australia. Mrs. Prichard, the young woman's mother, who left the colony with her daughter soon after the marriage, also testified.

"My eyes were opened by the marriages of my daughters," she said. "Previously there had never been a word about marriage among any of the members. But 'King' Benjamin got into trouble with the Federal authorities and decided all the girls would have to marry. In all there were [illegible] girls."

Prophet Dodged Courts in 1914

Mrs. Hansel won the annulment suit she sought.

The trouble referred to by Mrs. Prichard came in 1914, when a Government investigation of the colony was launched following charges preferred by former members. At that time also Purnell considered discretion the better part of valor and dodged the courts.

The House of David, or of Israel, as it is sometimes called, was founded at Benton Harbor in 1904 by Purnell and his wife (known to the followers as Benjamin and Mary), for the announced purpose of gathering together 144,000 of the children of Israel, the remnants of the 12 lost tribes. These, according to the preaching of the leaders, were to become free from all sin and also free from the power of death. They and their posterity, the founders taught, would live to reign on earth a thousand years with Christ upon his second coming. The core of their doctrine of immortality is the scriptural passage bearing the promise of Christ: "I am the resurrection and the life; he that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live; and whosoever liveth and believeth in me shall never die."

Adherents of the faith numbering more than 2000 have gathered in Benton Harbor from all parts of America and foreign countries, chiefly England and Australia. It is said that every State in the Union is represented in the colony. These zealots profess to live lives of celibacy, to abstain from the use of tobacco, liquor and animal flesh, and to utter no word that is obscene or profane. Their study, beyond the rudiments of education and music, is confined chiefly to the Bible as interpreted by Benjamin.

Their principles also include complete communism of property and privileges, as nearly as occupation permits, in clothing, food and other personal necessities. They reinforce their argument for communism by citing the examples of Adam, Noah, Moses and the children of Israel in their wilderness campaign of 40 years. All

Two Mystery Children in George Gould's Latest Romance Introduced in Court Proceedings as Co-Heirs of Great Jay Gould Fortune

His Attentions to Actress Long Before First Wife Died and His Marriage to Her Shortly Thereafter Recalled

Now Recorded Formally as "the Children of George J. and the Present Mrs. George J. Gould" — They Are Five and Seven Years Old Respectively–The Couple's Marriage Was Secretly Solemnized Last May.

Mere Stepchildren Have No Legal Rights as Heirs and Their Status Will Be Determined by Court Ruling —Some of the Complications That Have Followed Other Gould Romances, Many of Which Have Been Unconventional.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Feb. 24.

WHEN Supreme Court Justice Guy, in this city a few days ago, made his appointments of a referee and certain guardians in connection with the legal accounting of the $80,000,000 estate of the late Jay Gould, famous railroad magnate, there was one item in the list that aroused more than ordinary interest.

As a general thing, a dry legal matter like the appointment of a guardian is not an event to cause excitement, but in this particular case the announcement carried a reference that immediately caught the attention of that part of the public which, since George J. Gould's secret marriage last spring to Mrs. Vere Sinclair, has been speculating at some length and detail upon the family connections of two Sinclair children and their probable status as heirs to part of the Gould millions. It referred briefly to the selection of one Thomas F. Keogh to be guardian of "George Sinclair Gould and Jane Sinclair Gould, children of George J. Gould and the present Mrs. George J. Gould."

This reference, to be sure, and, as far as that is concerned, the inclusion of the Sinclair-Gould children's names among those of the other heirs, did not clearly define their right to lay claim to any of the great family fortune, but it did throw an interesting light upon the mystery which had attached to the presence of these children in Mrs. Sinclair's household for several years before her marriage to Gould.

It all comprises another engaging episode in the course of the romantic family, noted the world over for marital turbulence, divorces and unusual love affairs.

It is remembered that ever since Mrs. Sinclair moved to the handsome five-story town house at 22 West Seventy-fourth street, where Gould is said to have visited her frequently, these children were seen almost daily going into or leaving the residence or taking their walks with their French nurse on Riverside Drive or Fifth avenue. Their presence and the regular visits of Gould to the house excited no little comment.

Often, he would dash up to the place in a small coupe, with a French chauffeur and remain for several hours in the middle of the day. The gossip of the servants was to the effect that he maintained the establishment and gave them their orders, sending them on errands for Mrs. Sinclair. The children went by the name of Sinclair, but nobody could remember of having seen a Mr. Sinclair. In fact, Mrs. Sinclair had appeared to be a widow and was seldom seen in the company of men other than Gould.

How Gould's Interest In Her Began

The name of Mrs. Sinclair had been linked with that of Gould ever since she came to New York from England in 1913, taking a feature part in a London theatrical production called "The Girl on the Film." She was then known as Miss Guinevere Jeanne Sinclair. It was observed soon after she began to appear at the Forty-fourth Street Theater that Gould became a regular attendant and that when the season ended and the company returned to England, Miss Sinclair remained in New York, After that, she and Gould were seen together so frequently that they became familiar figures on Fifth avenue. Comment buzzed for a time and then appeared to wear itself out.

The two continued to walk and drive together until 1915, when Miss Sinclair went to live upon a somewhat secluded estate near Quaker Ridge on the Boston post road. Her home there was an old-fashioned house, which stood far back from the highway, with its lawns surrounded by a tall hedge. She was known to trades people as Mrs. Vere Sinclair, but she seldom appeared in public and little is known of her life or assications during the period of her residence there. A year or two later, however, she moved to the beautiful mansion on the hill of Manursing Island, Rye. There she had the most expensive English make of automobile and was surrounded by a veritable army of servants who looked after the mansion and its spacious grounds. Neighbors saw her frequently, but she took little, if any, part in social affairs. Instead, she devoted most of her time to outdoor sports and to the care of two small children.

Jane and George Sinclair, the two children who are now officially recorded in the New York courts in connection with the appointment of a guardian for them as "the children of George J. and the present Mrs. George J. Gould."

There was considerable talk at the nearby Apawanis Club and the Manursing Club to begin with, and Gould's frequent trips to the island on yachting parties and his enthusiasm for playing tennis on the courts at Rye did not serve to abate the neighborhood comment. Especially during the summer of 1921 was gossip rampant in the vicinity of the clubs.

Remarried Soon After His Wife's Death

In the fall of 1921, however, came the death of the first Mrs. Gould, and little was seen or heard of Gould's association with Mrs. Sinclair until about the middle of the following June, when the announcement of their marriage was received from Paris. First reports were to the effect that they had been married there, but investigation disclosed the wedding had taken place in Lakewood, N. J., on May 1, 1922, shortly before they sailed for Europe. Judge Harry E. Newman of the Ocean County bench and an old-time friend of Gould, told of performing the ceremony at his residence in the presence of three witnesses. In the license the bride gave her age as 29, the number of her marriages "one," her name as Guinevere Jeanne Sinclair and her father's name as Alexander Campbell Sinclair "of Dakota."

The two children were about 5 and 7 years old at the time of the wedding.

The couple remained in Europe after announcing the marriage and are there now, where Gould is said to be under the care of a physician following his serious illness of last fall in Scotland. Dispatches from France recently have stated that the Goulds have rented a house at Nice and plan to spend the remainder of the winter there.

By remarrying, Gould gave up property left to him by his late wife which was valued at nearly $3,000,000. This included the late Mrs. Gould's home, Sixty-seventh street and Fifth avenue, and the property at 177 East Sixty-seventh street, which was to be divided among the seven Gould children.

George J. Gould and his recent bride on the steps of the villa they have lease for the winter at Cap Martin, France. Mrs. Gould before her marriage was Mrs. Vere Sinclair, formerly of a London theatrical company.

The death of the first Mrs. Gould, it will be recalled, occurred on Nov. 13, 1921, when she was playing golf with her husband on the links at their country place at Lakewood. She formerly was Edith Kingdon, a noted beauty in her younger days, and she also had appeared on the stage. From the time of her marriage to Gould in 1886 she was well known as a hostess, but more especially as a mother devoted to her seven sons and daughters.

Suit Over Accounting of Estate

The suit for the accounting of the Gould estate is an outgrowth of criticism by Frank J. Gould, a brother, and other members of the family of the handling of the fortune by George J., who was removed as a trustee by Justice Whitaker in 1919 on the ground that "he has demonstrated he has no adequate realization of the duties of a fiduciary and that he was an unfit person to discharge the duties of a trustee."

Litigation over the judicial settlement of the estate has been in the courts for many years. Last year George J. Gould brought an action in Surrogate's Court to compel the trustees of the estate to pay him $645,000, allegedly due him in accumulated income. He was restrained from prosecuting the action, however, on an order obtained by Frank and his sister, the Duchess de Talleyrand, and his income impounded on the ground that he was indebted to the Gould estate for many times the amount impounded. They contended the estate had lost more than $20,000,000 through his derelictions in management.

Whether or not Gould has profited extensively from his handling of the estate remains for the courts to determine, but it is well known that his own private fortune has shown evidence of rapid expansion in the last few years, and this recalls an anecdote that originated within his family circle. Once, it is said, when his daughter, Gloria, then a little babbling child, was seated on the knee of a family friend, she was asked: "Suppose your father loses all his railroads, what then?" Her come-back was this: "Papa says they might take all his railroads away from him, but they'll never get his money."

Other Romances and Marital Tragedies

But speaking of romance again, that of George J. and Mrs. Sinclair is by no means the latest in the records of the family. Gould romances, as well as Gould domestic complications, come with great rapidity. Within the last two weeks word has come from Paris of the third marriage of Frank J. Gould, the bride being Miss Florence Lacase, former wife of Henry C. Heynneman, a noted San Francisco architect, from whom she was divorced in 1916.

At the same time are heard rumors of pending divorce action against George J. Gould Jr. by the former Laura Carter, dancing instructor, with whom he eloped in 1917 and who is reported to have left him at Monte Carlo because of his alleged attentions to an attractive Italian Countess.

There is also the report that Gloria, the youngest and only unmarried daughter of George J., has tired of the lonely life she has led since the death of her mother and, although just 16 years old, has planned to marry Henry C. Bishop Jr. a tall, handsome youth, whose grandfather is Henry C. Bishop, formerly president of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad.

In fact, all of George Gould's children seem to have inherited their father's romantic tendencies Edith, the elder sister of Gloria, eloped with young Carroll Wainwright, scion of a wealthy New York family, while she was still a widely paragraphed debutante. Marjorie, the second daughter, did not elope, but her marriage to Anthony J. Drexel Jr. of the famous Philadelphia Drexels, was considered the prize "society match" of her season. Likewise, the wedding of Vivien to Lord Decies was tinged with glamor. It is one of the few international matches that has turned out well.

As for the boys, Kingdon was the first to startle his family. His bride was Annunziata Lucci, a beautiful but socially unkonwn art student. Then came the elopement of George Jr., then the marriage of Jay, the youngest boy, to Miss Annie Douglas Graham. Miss Graham's mother before her marriage was Princess Kaikilani, with the blood of Hawaiian Kings in her veins.

Gloria Gould's Loneliness

Now the stage seems to be set for a youthful and romantic marriage for Gloria. Surely if any girl had precedents for such a venture, Gloria Gould has.

Beautiful, talented and rich almost beyond dreams, she lives alone in the great Gould mansion of stone and marble—alone except for her chaperon, her governesses and her 26 servants. Nightly she dines in splendor or produces her own movie in her own theater, and when she travels a private car whirls her where she wishes to go. In spite of these things, however, Gloria may never make her formal bow to the gilded circle in which she was born. One reason is that all of her millionaire kinsfolk are too busy with their own affairs to come forward and direct her debut and another reason is indicated by that report that she may be whisked away into matrimony while she is still a sub-deb.

There is much in the youthful attainments of Gloria to give promise of a distinguished career in some of the arts as well as in romance. At 10 she wrote stories and short verses. At 11 she was a solo dancer of Chaliff's pupils at their Carnegie Hall recital. At 12 she produced her own play and at 13 her own movie. She was author, director and star of each. Recently she was said to be considering a stage career and devoted much of her time to the study of classic dancing. In fact, she appeared in a dancing role not long ago in a benefit performance and her exhibition won decidedly favorable comment. Then, society began to inquire anxiously about her debut—when it was to be and who would direct it. The usual answer apparently was that it must wait until her father or one of her sisters got around to it. But now it looks as if both her dancing and her social ambitions had begun to wane, and gossip has it that she will not await the pleasure of relatives any longer.

Indeed, her father just now is having trouble elsewhere. The rift in the marital affairs of George Jr. is said to be causing him no end of worry. And this seems more striking in view of the fact that it was the match of George Jr. which he most bitterly opposed, even going so far as to disinherit his son and forbid him with a characteristic gesture "ever to darken his door again." The reconciliation, however, was effected when a son was born to George Jr. and his wife and was named Jay Gould III.

Troubles of George J. Gould Jr.

The domestic trouble of George Jr. and his wife appears to have begun late in the fall, after they had joined the elder Goulds in a palatial villa at Cap Martin, on the Riviera, near Monte Carlo. Night after night the young Goulds danced at fashionable Carlton Hotel and with them almost every night were Count Carpeignnia and the Countess Brunita, whose name was mentioned frequently some years ago in connection with that of Sir William Ingram. Invariably, it is said, Mrs. Gould was the partner of the Count on the dance floor, while young Gould was the knight of the Countess. Suddenly, Mrs. Gould packed up her baggage and moved to the Mirabeau Hotel at Monte Carlo, leaving her husband and the children at the villa, and the appearances were that the Countess had had a lot to do with the conflict. So far, it seems, no action further than the separation has been taken.

Aside from the row in the family of George Gould Jr., the latest other disturbance was in the affairs of his much-married uncle. Frank J.

The first wife of Frank J., it will be recalled, was Helen Kelly, a New York society belle and his childhood sweetheart. Their love affair began when he was 19 and she was 17, and they were married not long afterward. After two children were born, however, there came reports of marital discord and the young wife's mother appeared to figure prominently in the trouble. For awhile it looked as if the couple would patch it up, then there was a sudden filing of a divorce suit by the wife, who named a prominent dancer. At the hearing witnesses were introduced to testify as to incidents alleged to have taken place aboard the Gould yacht, and Mrs. Gould won the decree.

Almost immediately afterward she married R. H. Thomas, a multimillionarie sugar magnate, and left for France. Upon the death of her second husband, she married the dapper Prince Viora of Albania, "the Prince without a principality," and later divorced him, after he had been mentioned among a dozen others in the divorce suit of J. Stanley Joyce, millionaire Chicago lumberman, against Peggy Joyce.

After the divorce from his first wife, Frank Gould returned to the United States from France and married Edith Kelly, an actress. It was said at the time that the similarity of her name to that of his first wife had much to do with her attraction for him, but the match turned out no better than the first. After a few troubled years, he divorced her in Paris. That was in 1919.

Mentioned in the divorce proceedings was an incident that set even hardened Paris talking—and laughing. Mrs. Gould, it seems, was arrested in a midnight raid on a quiet Paris hotel, and with her was Don Mario Castel, a Spanish grandee of Mexico. They were arraigned in the courts and each was fined approximately—in American money—$10 and costs.

Left: Gloria Gould, the youngest and only unmarried daughter of George J. Gould who, at 16, is said to be engaged to wed. She is seen here in the costume of a Spanish dancer.
Below: Mrs. Frank J. Gould, formerly Miss Florence Lacase of San Francisco. She is Gould's third wife, whom he married recently in Paris.

But the phase of this affair that set Paris to giggling was the fact that the raiders visited another hotel on the same night. At that place they centered their attention upon three rooms and placed guards at the doors, then opened all simultaneously. In one was Frank J. Gould. In another was a certain Mlle. Lacaze, a dancer of the Follies Bergere.

"Who is she?" they asked Gould. "I don't know," he replied, and at the other end of the suite the young woman was similary questioned. "I don't know who he is," she said. "I never saw him before."

The detectives then opened the middle room where a dainty dining table was set for two. "To whom does this belong?" they inquired. Both Gould and the woman claimed it "for me alone."

Whatever the outcome of this event was, Gould's case against his wife seemed to carry more weight with the French court and a decree was awarded to him. Later, when Mrs. Gould ignored the Paris

Voice of Union Labor and the Radical Press

The Post-Dispatch prints herewith extracts from editorial or other articles in organs of the labor unions and the Communist and Socialist parties, showing the tendency of thought on public questions among those bodies of citizens and indicating causes of social unrest.

JUDICIAL BLESSINGS OF SLAVERY.

(From the N. Y. Call, Socialist.)

An injunction in Logan County, W. Va., forbids officers and members of the United Mine Workers from persuading miners in that county from breaking "individual contracts" in which miners agree not to join any union. The mine owners immediately posted this order of their Judge in all parts of the county.

Back of this order is a regime of armed and private mercenaries who by force prevent organization of the miners. With the region occupied by these thugs, the mine owners then present to any man applying for employment a "free contract" to sign of the type mentioned above. A Judge then, upon request, gives this damnable regime the status of law through a judicial decree.

This is naked class rule exercised through the thugs and blessed by this court order. All in the name of "individual contract." All in the name of the "inalienable right of men to work where, when and how they please." Where capitalism has an absolute free hand, as in West Virginia, it is revealed as a modern form of slavery. That it receives the judicial blessing makes the slavery all the more glaring, as it also shows that the political power resides with the class that owns the industrial resources of the region.

THE FOLLY OF FOOLS.

(From the Oklahoma Leader, Farmer-Labor.)

What would you think of people who carried straw to a burning straw stack to put out the fire? Or, what would you think of people who prayed for rain during a flood?

You would consider them mighty foolish, wouldn't you? But after all, they wouldn't be a bit more foolish than the great statesmen in Washington who propose to help the farmers out of debt by making it easier for them to get deeper in debt.

Now, farmers, like anybody else, do not borrow money for the fun of paying interest. They borrow money because they have to. And the reason they have to is because the average farm does not earn enough to pay the cost of running it.

Of course if we guess at the income of farmers by the prices we pay for farm products in the cities, then the farmers ought to get along first rate. But the fact is, there is a big difference between what city people pay for farm products and what farmers get for them, just as there is a tremendous big difference between the manufacturing cost and the selling price of goods.

The trouble is there is too much waste and graft in the distribution of products. Jobbers, wholesalers, retailers, drummers and advertising eat up the lion's share of the difference between what the producer gets and what the consumer pays. The result is that wages in cities can not catch up with the cost of living, while the income of the farmer can't keep up with the price of the things he has to buy from the cities. * * *

The remedy for the trouble of the farmers is, therefore, not easier money and more debts, but organizations, such as the wheat growers, cotton growers and other co-operative societies which do away with the swarm of middle men and wasters.

Of course the farmer can't lift himself over the fence by his boot straps, but he can hoist himself over by using his head for a jack screw.

A SIGNIFICANT CONTRAST.

(From the Seattle Union Record.)

Word comes from San Francisco that Harry Brolaski, millionaire "King of the bootleggers," has been paroled on recommendation of Attorney-General Daugherty. Reason assigned, "poor health."

It may be only a coincidence, but it is singular that "poor health" was likewise the reason urged for the pardoning of Millionaire Charles W. Morse, who was serving a term in the Atlanta penitentiary for fraud. Daugherty, then a private citizen, was counsel for Morse.

It is also true that Brolaski has some little renown as a Republican politician. That, of course, may not be a reason for the parole, but it is reasonable to assume that such political activities were not destructive of Bolaski's chances for presidential clemency.

Bootleggers, murderers, thieves, forgers and other gentry of like kind do not find it difficult to find sympathetic ears for their pleas for clemency. Scores of such have been released from Federal penitentiaries.

Contrast the leniency shown bootleggers and thieves of various sorts with that accorded the political prisoners. Men whose only crime was expressing opposition to the World War and an abhorrence of the system of exploitation which brought about the war are held in jail with scant chance that they will be freed until their sentences have been served.

Viewing these contrasts, is it any wonder that there is a constantly growing suspicion and distrust of those who are intrusted with the administration of justice?

NATIONALIZATION.

(From Industrial Solidarity, I. W. W. Organ.)

The politicians are already at work trying to frame a political program for 1924. Coal and railroad nationalization looms up as the main planks in platforms intended to win over presidential supporters.

Many labor men favor these planks. Despite the history of postal nationalization, with its slavery and espionage for the workers, they believe State capitalism preferable to private capitalism.

To the I. W. W. there is no difference. They are both essentially and practically alike. Both exploit and degrade labor—the one directly for employers; the other indirectly for bondholders.

True, in the coal and railroad nationalization plans now advanced there are some provisions made for technicians and other workers; in other words, labor will be given a part in the management. Its status will be improved and elevated accordingly. At least that's the theory underlying these plans, at present. Whether labor will not be overtopped and rendered nil in the practical operation of these plans, as in the railroad labor and other similar boards now in operation, remains to be seen. However, it's a long time between now and 1924. Another war may occur. Capitalism may have another cataclysm, and then——

In the meanwhile, the I. W. W. believes in and advocates the industries to the workers only. The latter are society.

DANDRUFFY HEADS BECOME HAIRLESS

If you want plenty of thick, beautiful, glossy, silky hair, do by all means get rid of dandruff, for it will starve your hair and ruin it if you don't.

It does no good to try to brush or wash it out. The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop, and your hair will look and feel a hundred times better. You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. Four ounces is all you will need, no matter how much dandruff you have. This simple remedy never fails.

HOW THE BANKER DOUBLE-CROSSED THE GREAT YEGG SYNDICATE

taken over by the Union Savings Bank and Trust Co., and has since been operated as the Woodburn Avenue branch of that bank. The recovered bonds, when they have been sold, and the expenses of their recovery has been paid, will add about $30 per share to the $70 liquidation value of the stock of the Hamilton County Bank.

Was It Robbery or Burglary?

An additional $7500 of bonds have been found in legitimate trade channels in Oregon, the present holders being innocent purchasers and a considerable number of smaller denominations of Liberty Bonds stolen from the bank have turned up in Washington after passing through various hands. These cannot be traced back to the robbers. A $10,000 Liberty Bond, which was stolen, has not yet appeared.

Although it was protected by insurance, only $50,000 insurance has been paid. There is dispute about the balance. The $50,000 was covered by "robbery insurance," while the balance was covered only by "burglary insurance," with the definition of burglary set out in the policy, a definition which was not conformed to by the robbers, in that they did not use tools to force an entrance to the vault.

The belief that the Walnut Hills job was done by a St. Louis gang is supported by various information that came to Matthews during the negotiations, added to the fact that St. Louis men constituted the gang which on Dec. 1, 1921, held up a messenger of the same bank. There was a battle that time and "Ego" Sullivan of St. Louis was killed. John Britt of St. Louis was indicted in connection with that job and is out on bond.

It has been learned also that $7500 in bonds now held by a bank at Eugene, Ore., reached there through a transaction with a former traveling salesman of St. Louis, who went about in a big automobile.

The name of the intermediary between "Mr. X" of South Dakota and the fiscal agent and other members of the clearing house syndicate has not been made known. Since the conclusion of the negotiations which revealed him as having double-crossed his supposed confederates, he has removed with his family from Minneapolis and is in hiding. If the bank robbers and their agents are brought to trial he will be a star witness against them.

ONE AUTO FOR EVERY 8.8 PERSONS IN STATE

Missouri, at the close of 1922, had one motor vehicle for each 8.8 inhabitants, according to a survey just completed by the statistical department of the Liberty Central Trust Co., St. Louis, showing automobile distribution in the State and its counties.

The figures allow for population changes since the 19 0 census, and are based on the 1922 registration returns recently made public by the Secretary of State.

Automobile "density" in Missouri is far from uniform, one of the main reasons being the great difference between the northern and southern portions in the matter of topograph. The northern half, as well as a considerable part of the southwest, has less than 10 persons per car; the remainder of the State has 10 or more, often 20 or more.

There are eight counties that have a population of six or less per motor vehicle. One of these, Atchison, the extreme northwestern county of the State, has slightly less than five. Of the eight leaders, five are in the far northwest, two in the extreme northeast, and one is in the west-central section.

The counties having the fewest cars in relation to population are in the Ozarks and the southeast lowlands. In much of this region the population per motor vehicle is over 20. Ozark County, in the extreme south, is at the bottom of the list with a ratio of 67.3.

COLOR MARKINGS TO AID WASHINGTON TOURISTS

Tourists motoring to Washington, D. C., will find no difficulty in following the main arteries of traffic in the national capital, as a result of color-band markings or the main routes, worked out by the American Automobile Association and adopted by the District of Columbia Commissioners. Funds for painting these color bands on the lamp posts along the routes through the city have been appropriated and the work of outlining the main arteries of travel has started.

These color bands are designed to aid the through traveler in avoiding the congested traffic of the downtown section, while at the same time leading the visitor close enough to the heart of the city to make the finding of any desired location comparatively easy.

UNIFORM TRAFFIC LAWS ESSENTIAL FOR DRIVERS

Inequality of Traffic Regulations Throughout Country Places Motorists in Perplexing Predicament.

Each year more and more car owners are discovering the pleasure and recreation to be derived from cross-country touring. Increasing numbers of motor cars now travel from one section of the country to the other, and an observer on any prominent trunk line highway can see almost any day a procession of cars bearing license tags from states clear across the continent.

This comparatively new, yet immensely popular, use for the motor car has brought to light a need for uniform traffic laws to govern the motorist wherever he may be. Embarrassing and sometimes dangerous situations arise under existing conditions where every community has and enforces with more or less severity all kinds of peculiar traffic regulations, states R. C. Frampton, president of the Hudson-Frampton Motor Car Co., Hudson and Essex distributers.

The courts do not recognize the excuse of ignorance of the law and there is no question but that the motorist is frequently fined for innocent violations because of the impossibility of learnnig all of the regulations in every section.

The inconvenience caused by this lack of uniform traffic laws must be borne until car owners and operators join in securing the needed revision. There are, in round numbers 11,000,000 car owners, and several times that many people who ride as passengers in these cars who would be benefited by uniform traffic laws, not to mention the general public, who would also reap the benefit of such regulations, and accidents to cars and to pedestrians no doubt would be greatly reduced.

With uniform traffic laws, the police and traffic authorities can concentrate their attention upon intentional or careless offenders, traffic can be controlled more easily, and less confusion will result for all concerned.

Not So Good.

"Is that so? What's the matter with it?"

"He has to throw it in low gear before he can plow through the pedestrians."—New York Sun.

A Special Showing of the New Nash Six Coupe

This is the new model Coupe. A shipment has just arrived. It goes on exhibition at once.

Here is just the ideal type of car for the professional man and the smaller family.

And it marks the latest achievements in the industry in the way of advanced engineering.

It carries four passengers with great comfort when the auxiliary seat that disappears neatly beneath the instrument board is used.

Though an enclosed car built for year 'round use it operates with almost the gas and tire economy of an open model.

Both the motor and carburetor embody the new Nash improvements that give it a wonderfully responsive power-flow, a new quietness, and an intensified smoothness.

The structural change in the frame construction with tubular-type cross-members makes the frame absolutely rigid.

It won't "work" or "weave," so even after long use body squeaks and rattles do not develop.

And the beautifully built body is especially worthy of your inspection. Don't delay your visit.

Features and Appointments of New Six Coupe

Mohair upholstery made of imported fleece. New-type heater. Wide auxiliary seat. New brake system. New-type brake equalizers. New steering device. Special spark and gas control on steering wheel. New non-glare dash light illuminating entire dash and with device regulating volume of light. New carburetor heating device. Greater power-responsiveness and smoothness. Increased mileage per gallon of gas and oil. New radiator mounting. Door locks. Quick headlight adjustment. Cowl ventilator. New tubular-type cross-member frame construction. Greatest braking surface per pound of weight of any American-built six. Newly refined clutch. Exhaust pipe carried farther to rear to preserve quietness.

JOHNSON AUTO CO. NEW BUILDING COMPLETED

The Johnson Auto Co., St. Louis' oldest Ford dealers, now occupy the entire part of their newly reconstructed building at 3667-69 Olive street.

Several months ago the company's old building, which is the original home of the Ford, having been used for Ford sales and service since 1905, was torn down and the new fireproof building erected.

During the construction the Johnson Automobile Co. continued their business by using the service quarters in the rear and the large lot adjoining the building on the east.

The new building, which is two stories high, with a large cellar, has a saw-tooth roof, with windows giving ample daylight to all parts of the second floor. The shop is also well supplied with windows.

The new building gives the Johnson Auto Co. over 50 per cent additional floor space. The old building had 16,000 square feet of floor space, while the new one has over 24,000 square feet. In addition to the building the company's service lot contains over 20,000 square feet of ground space.

The salesrooms extend across the entire width of the building, with a depth of 30 feet. A passageway extending from the service department to the salesroom divides the offices and parts departments.

The woodwork in the salesrooms and office is of dark finished oak with window draperies to match. The floor is of two-tone gray and white tile. The walls are elaborately stenciled in Pompeiian design and coloring.

The company owns both the new building and ground, in addition to the improved property directly in the rear of their business, which has a frontage of 90 feet on Washington boulevard with a depth of 234 feet.

SOUTH SIDE AUTO CLUB CHANGES NAME

The Missouri Automobile Club, which has been dorman for the past two years, has been reorganized and its name, as provided by its charter, has been changed to "St. Louis Automobile Club." The club was reorganized at a meeting held at the Western Rowing Club Tuesday night and starts off with a membership of 642 owners of motor cars.

Officers elected at the meeting for the ensuing year were Albert von Hoffmann, president; F. J. Siefling, vice president; Henry Menne, treasurer, and Samuel Stein, secretary. The directors are H. P. Riefling, Rudolph Schneider and Robert E. Lee. Howard Sidener, Circuit Attorney of St. Louis, was appointed legal advisor for the club.

Statement was made to the meeting by President von Hoffmann that a service system was to be established by the appointment of about 40 official garages for the club. These garages are to be placed under contract to deliver service on the road to members of the club bearing membership cards at an established scale of prices for each kind of service rendered, this service to be paid for by the member. This plan, as presented to the meeting, was approved by unanimous vote.

THE DISTILLATOR FOR FORD CARS

The Distillator is not an ordinary combination intake and exhaust manifold which merely preheats the mixture of gasoline and air on its way to the cylinders. It does all that—and more.

If you could see into your cylinders, particularly when starting, you would discover that only part of the gasoline is vaporized by the carburetor. Much of that which remains in liquid form is forced past the piston rings, carrying with it the oil which is supposed to seal the space between pistons and cylinder walls. Reaching the crankcase it "cuts" the oil and destroys its lubricating quality.

The natural result of all this is—worn cylinders—worn piston rings—worn bearings—chattering brake bands.

The Distillator traps this unvaporized portion of the gasoline before it can do any damage—holds it back until the heat from the exhaust converts it into vapor that will explode in the cylinders instead of causing trouble.

Naturally, with all your gasoline thoroughly vaporized, you get far more miles per gallon. University tests show as high as 22% more mileage.

Your oil lasts longer.

Your car lasts longer with fewer repairs.

Starting is much easier. The engine gets to running smooth in less time. Throttle control is more uniform.

Remember, the Distillator is not an experiment. It was invented three years ago to make The Dorris a better motor car. It was patented, and is part of The Dorris equipment today. Because of its tremendous value on this high grade car, the Distillator has been adapted for Fords. Only $15.00 installed, with money back if not satisfactory within fifteen days.

Ford owners in St. Louis and vicinity—drive by the Dorris plant and have a Distillator installed at once.

Those living at a distance may order by mail. Use the coupon—and be sure to specify kind of carburetor now on your car. The Distillator can be easily installed, without special tools, in 30 minutes.

DODGE BROTHERS
BUSINESS SEDAN

Dodge Brothers, with equal aptness, could have named it the Family Sedan.

In the first place, it is big and roomy—a five-passenger car that will really seat five adults in comfort. There is no space wasted on superfluous adornments. Every inch of body and chassis is put to actual use.

There are no delicate cloth furnishings to be soiled by the children. The seats are upholstered in durable and attractive blue Spanish leather.

There is no sensitive varnish to be easily scratched or finger-spotted. The body is steel-built—a new principle in Sedan design—making it possible to finish the exterior in Dodge Brothers oven-baked enamel, the most durable finish known.

The rear seat furnishings come out—instantly converting the rear section into a spacious carrying compartment—handy for carrying trunks, boxes and household luggage of all sorts.

Children can romp and play to their hearts' content in this car, and when cleaning time comes, you can turn the hose on it—inside and out.

DE PALMA AND BOYER TO DRIVE PACKARD CARS

Two of the best known automobile race drivers in America, Ralph de Palma and Joe Boyer, have been selected to drive two of the three cars the Packard Motor Car Co. has entered in this year's Indianapolis 500-mile race.

Col. J. G. Vincent, vice president of engineering of the Packard company, in announcing the selection of De Palma and Boyer, said the selection of the third member of the team now is being considered and that his name will be announced in a short time. The third driver, he said, also will be one of the premier racers of America.

Packard is getting back into the racing game for the first time with factory-owned and campaigned cars since 1904, when the Packard Gray Wolf won several of American automobile races.

De Palma has been giving Col. Vincent the benefit of his years of racing in the designing and building of the Packard machines, and his intimate knowledge of the design, workmanship and materials which have gone into the car he will drive will, it is believed, aid him materially in the race.

Col. Vincent, himself a driver of racing automobiles, motor boats and airplanes, will derect the operation of the team during the race personally. The motor he has designed for the race will be a six-cylinder power plant. De Palma has been racing motor cars in this country and abroad for a number of years. He has won the Indianapolis race once. Boyer, known as the "millionaire automobile race driver," while he has never annexed victory at Indianapolis, several times has forced such a hot pace and stepped out so far ahead that he would have been the winner if hard luck had not been riding by his side.

CADILLAC COOLING SYSTEM PATENTED

In the Cadillac cooling system the liquid is circulated by two pumps instead of one. Each pump serves a different cylinder block and is independent of the other except in the drive, which is a common cross-shaft driven by the crankshaft through spiral gears.

NEW REO BROUGHAM HAS MANY FEATURES

The first of the new Reo four-door broughams, recently announced by the Reo Motor Car Co., is expected to arrive in St. Louis this week, according to H. F. Fahrenkrog of the Kardell Motor Car Co., Reo distributers.

This new brougham Reo seats five passengers. The front seat is wide enough to accommodate an extra person. The interior is upholstered in broadcloth-finished wool material. The door and seating arrangement is such that there is no crowding or sacrificing of either seat or leg room in gaining all the advantages of close-coupled body.

The frame work is of ash and maple, with all exterior panels of sheet steel. The top is of sound-deadening slatted construction covered with waterproof fabric. Instrument board and window moulding are of solid American fabric.

Wide doors, each hung on three heavy hinges, both rear doors and left fore door are locked from the inside, while the right fore door is locked with a key from the outside. Each door is fitted with crank-type window regulator, convenient pocket, pull-to handle and stop strap. A tonneau heater with aluminum floor plate is controlled in the passenger compartment.

A trunk bound in nickeled brass is fitted with large suitcase and waterproof cover. The trunk is fastened from the inside to a carrying platform at the rear of the body. This platform is rubber-covered and fitted with aluminum bars and moulding. Aluminum guard bars are also provided between rear of body and trunk.

The standard T-6 chassis is used for this model. A few of the features incorporated in this chassis are the Reo six motor, the subframe mounting of engine, clutch and transmission, provides even distribution of weight and freedom from road twist. The transmision is Reo designed and manufactured. The axle is of Reo make, semifloating type.

NEW MILBURN ELECTRIC TRUCK NOW ON DISPLAY

The first model of the new one-half-ton Milburn Electric truck recently announced by the Milburn Wagon Co. of Toledo, O., was received Wednesday by the Mac-Carthy-Archer Automobile Co., distributers.

The power plants in Milburn electric trucks, including motor, controller, resistance and motor brake, are assembled in one unit. This construction has a special convenience as it is easily accessible and when required may be quickly dismounted by the removal of a few bolts.

The controllers are of Milburn's own special design, completely encased and dirt-proof. The shaft is self-oiling. Particular attention has been paid to accessibility both for inspection and replacement of fingers and contacts. New contacts can be installed in 10 minutes' time without removing any wiring. The greatest number of replacements possible is limited to seven fingers and two contacts. A positive interlock makes it impossible to operate reverse when in forward position.

All Milburn eletctric trucks are equipped with both hand operated and foot operated brakes, each independent of the other. To protect drivers against unintentionally leaving truck with power on, foot brakes can be lock ratcheted only when control lever is set in neutral position. The new model lists at $1585 factory.

PAIGE-JEWETT OUTPUT SHOWS LARGE INCREASE

With an increase of 100 per cent over December production and more than 375 per cent increase over January of 1922, the output of Paige and Jewett motor cars reached a new peak in January, according to reports received from the Paige factory by James E. Newell of the Newell Motor Car Co., Paige and Jewett distributer.

"To appreciate fully what an achievement this means," says J. E. Newell, "it must be remembered that this stepping-up of production was made in midwinter at a time when ordinarily automobile sales are at their lowest point. Furthermore, the factory reports show more than 1000 unfilled January orders on hand which must be held over for later shipments.

OAKLAND ESTABLISHING NEW SALES RECORDS

The Oakland Motor Car Co.'s reports of production and sales since Jan. 1 indicate that 1923 will break the high peak record of 1922.

The figures for January show car sales 170 per cent greater than the same month last year.

More orders were received Feb. 5 than on any previous day in the last two years.

Since Jan. 1 production of cars has been at the maximum capacity of the factory—175 per day.

The Oakland is distributed in St. Louis by the Mississippi Valley Motor Co.

HAYNES FACTORY INCREASES PRODUCTION

Haynes factories have increased their production 33 1-3 per cent, according to an announcement made by Alton G. Seiberling, vice president and general manager of the Haynes Automobile Co., Kokomo, Ind. The increase was ordered to take care of the demand for the new Haynes 57 and 77 models. The Wilson Motor Co. distributes the Haynes in St. Louis and adjacent territory.

USE OF STEEL WHEELS RAPIDLY INCREASING

In sharp contrast to the gradual evolution of the automobile into its present form is the lightning change in trend that has taken place with respect to wheels.

From an absolute newcomer only a brief space back to a position of commanding importance today is the remarkable history of steel wheels.

For 1923, men prominent in the wheel industry predict that fully 20 per cent of all cars manufactured, excepting Ford, will have steel wheels as standard equipment.

Of the first 50 automobile manufacturers, whose output comprises the bulk of the industry's production, 16 list steel wheels as standard equipment on one or more models, 24 more schedule them as optional equipment, while only 10 omit it entirely.

STUTZ SALES SHOW STEADY INCREASE

Officials of the Stutz Motor Car Co. of America, Inc., according to L. F. Jalageas of the Supreme Motor Co., report a steady increase in sales over any similar period in the history of the company.

Not only has the introduction of the new Stutz six-cylinder car, priced several hundred dollars under any previous Stutz model, served to attract a great many more distributers and dealers to the Stutz proposition, says Jalageas, but sales of the Stutz four-cylinder cars have also been considerably increased.

MYSTERY CHILDREN IN GEORGE GOULD'S LATEST ROMANCE

decree and instituted a suit against Gould in the United States, her action was dismissed on the ground that the French decree was binding. One incident in the hearing was a demand for $100,000 alimony by the former actress, who carefully listed all her expenses.

She has since returned to the stage and was recently said to be appearing in a London revue.

Other Gould Domestic Entanglements.

The marital affairs of Howard Gould and Anna Gould also were marked by court actions.

Howard married Katherine Clemmons, an actress. A few years later, however, she won a suit for a legal separation and is said to be living alone now in Virginia, where she has become an ardent worker for women's rights. Gould, it is understood, pays her many thousands of dollars in alimony every year. At the time of the court action he contested her suit, alleging that she drank too much and had been too friendly with Dustin Farnum, an actor, but her complaint appeared to be the most convincing to the court.

Anna Gould's marriage to Count Boni de Castellane was the sensation of a generation ago and it was a costly one for her. It is said that she came out of that adventure just $6,000,000 worse for it financially. She later married the Marquis de Talleyrand Perigord, the Count's cousin.

The other Gould women apparently have been happy in their marriages. Thus it would seem that the men of the family have been those most often visited by marital misfortunes. Once Frank Gould was asked to what he attributed his domestic tribulations. The millionaire is said to have put his head between his hands, pondered for moment, then answered:

"Money—the Midas touch."

Radio Week Brings Many Novelties to Entertain and Instruct Amateurs

Public Broadcasting Each Evening, Moving Picture of K S D in Action, With Animated Diagrams Explaining Wireless, and Display of Radio Sets of All Kinds.

Two modern wonders of the world are linked together in a fascinatingly entertaining and instructive way for the observance of radio week, which began at the Missouri Theater with last night's performance and will continue up to and including next Friday night.

The observance is in recognition of the great and constantly growing interest in radio which has developed in the last two years and which month after month has continued to grow. In the great cities there are thousands of radio enthusiasts who look to radio for amusement and instruction. In the rural districts there is even greater interest in proportion to the population, and radio is now a part of the equipment of many a farm home, where it not only serves to bring music and enlightening talks in the evening, but to keep the farmer posted on market and weather conditions in the daytime.

The motion picture, which captures and preserves light waves, and that still more recently developed marvel, radio, which gathers sound waves and sends them pulsating through space to illimitable distances, are here brought into conjunction in a way that visualizes, as nothing else could, the actual workings of the mysterious forces which now nightly give pleasure to so many thousands of listeners-in on the radio.

This is accomplished by the showing of a film, "The Mystery Box," a W. W. Hodkinson production, which has an added feature of interest because of the introduction of moving pictures of the Post-Dispatch broadcasting station K S D in action.

The Hodkinson company did a wonderful piece of work in the preparation and photographing of the animated diagrams which are so striking a feature of this film. Here the motion picture camera has been used most successfully to portray the fundamentals of radio broad casting and transmission.

One who sees these moving diagrams need no longer be mystified as to why and how he is enabled to pick up the broadcasting on his receiving set at home.

These are not at all like the cruder diagrams which have from time to time been used to illustrate various scientific processes on the screen. In fact, they are called diagrams only for want of a better word to describe them. They are so cleverly combined with actual photographs of apparatus in action that in effect the spectator sees not merely a graphic illustration of the radio waves, but it requires only the slightest stretch of the imagination to make him feel that he is actually seeing the waves from the time of their regeneration and transmission until they have completed their journey through space and entered the receiving instrument. The puzzling mystery of the oscillating wave and its transformation into a direct wave by the receiver is fully and clearly explained in pictures which are a delight to the eye.

It will readily be seen that the effect of such excellent screen illustrations is greatly heightened by the showing of the actual operation of Post-Dispatch Station K S D which has been heard in every state in the Union, in Alaska, Canada, Mexico and South America, far out on the Pacific and Atlantic oceans and in the Aleuthian Islands, between Alaska and the Asiatic coast.

Of course many thousands in the far away places and even a great majority of the radio enthusiasts in St. Louis have never seen the inner workings of Station K S D. They have listened nightly to music and announcements which came from a source the location of which they knew, but the physical aspects of which were beyond their ken.

Now, at the Missouri Theater this week, the St. Louisan and the visitor to the city has an opportunity to see Station K S D in action. This alone should be a fascinating feature of radio week, though there will be other features hardly less attractive, including the actual broadcasting of a musical number from the stage of the theater and a dealers' exposition of radio goods in the theater's spacious lobby.

It is reasonable to believe that many will derive greater enjoyment from the K S D concerts after seeing this film and thus being enabled to visualize the equipment, furnishings and personnel of the station from which the music is coming to them through the air. And this effect will be heightened by the increased knowledge of the workings of radio which they will acquire from the expository sections of this remarkable picture.

The showing of Station K S D starts with the immense aerial towers on the roof of the Post-Dispatch building. Then is shown the interior of the transmission station which is housed in a brick building erected for that purpose on the roof. Operators are seen transmitting messages in that service, which constitutes one of the most important functions of Station K S D. Many get in touch with the station only when listening to the nightly concerts. They are apt to forget that the station is in operation all day long, sending out various market and crop reports which are of vital interest to farmers, merchants, millers, livestock men and shippers over that large section of the country tributary to St. Louis.

Next is shown the final preliminary step to the broadcasting of an evening concert. The operator makes the many necessary adjustments on the complicated generating and transmitting apparatus, and when quite sure that all is in readiness for broadcasting he telephones that fact to the studio on the second floor of the building, where the musicians, singers and speakers are waiting to start the evening program.

The scene here shifts to the studio. The film shows how the lighting of a red lamp on the wall warns those in the studio that the radio wave is on the air and that any sound in the room will be heard by listeners-in. An attendant is seen placing the microphone in position on a pedestal. This little instrument, scarcely larger than a telephone transmitter, is a wonderfully delicate bit of mechanism which magnifies the singer's voice or the sound of an instrument many thousand times. It is electrically connected with the transmission station on the roof.

All of the thousands who have listened to the K S D concerts have heard the chimes which signal the opening of each evening program. They also have heard and are familiar with the voice of the announcer. In this picture we see the announcer sounding the chimes and then walking over to the microphone to speak those now so widely known words: "Station K S D, the St. Louis Post-Dispatch." A violinist, a singer and a pianist are then seen performing before the microphone, and another interesting view shows a speaker delivering an address while seated in a comfortable armchair and with the unobtrusive microphone on a table several feet away. Without exertion a speaker may sit in this chair and make his voice literally span the continent.

Every phase of the interesting work in the studio is clearly shown, including the signing off for the evening, culminating with the announcer's cherry "Good night."

The Missouri program for radio week has still another treat for those interested in radio. This is a visualization which supplements the excellent screen presentation. The stage is set to represent a broadcasting station and studio. In full view of the audience is a panel containing the amplifying instruments of the kind shown and explained in the film. There also is a full studio equipment, including a microphone and the amplifying panel. In this setting Yerkes' Flotilla Band, the special music feature on the theater's program, will play one of its numbers, which will be broadcast from the stage and go out on the air as an interpellation in the regular nightly program of Station K S D. This number will be broadcast each evening about 9 o'clock. A different selection will be played each night.

The motion picture, "The Mystery Box," and "The Wonders of Radio, Showing Post-Dispatch Broadcasting Station K S D in Action," will be shown at every afternoon and evening performance during the week.

The display of radio goods in the lobby and on the mezzanine floor of the Missouri is most interesting and comprehensive. It is in fact an exposition of practically everything a radio owner might need, whether he be a beginner with a small crystal outfit or the operator of the more efficient type of tube set. The exhibits represent all phases of the trade and attendants are on hand to explain the merits and workings of the sets and parts on display.

SUCCESSFUL AIR NAVIGATION LARGELY DEPENDENT UPON RADIO

The successful completion of aerial missions by airplanes in flight is depending more and more upon radio communication between these air messengers and their ground stations, according to a recent statement by Major-General Mason T. Patrick, Chief of Army Air Service. Even with radio apparatus designed and built during the war, over 2000 flights, requiring radio communication, were successfully executed during a space of 12 months, he reports.

Radiophone communication is rapidly superseding radio telegraph in military operation, especially in the Air Service, where with more modern and longer range airplane sets, Gen. Patrick anticipates greater progress.

Airplane sets are now in course of development, providing both radio phone and telegraph operation. At 10 permanent air ports new long-range apparatus for dual radio communication is being installed.

BENWOOD

A PIONEER IN THE RADIO GAME AND AN EXCLUSIVE RADIO HOUSE

The public has been flim-flammed, hoodwinked and oversold on Radio Apparatus and parts until they do not know which way to turn.

Many so-called Radio salesmen make the most exaggerated claims for Radio Apparatus of which they know nothing.

This is a day of specialists. Radio is a complex subject. If you would receive 1000 miles or more, it is essential that high-grade apparatus be used, that you thoroughly understand the use of the apparatus and that the basic ideas incorporated in the various equipment are correct, the technical details be perfect. Radio equipment must be carried out to a high degree of efficiency. This requires study. It requires a knowledge of the subject and technically trained men to sell apparatus of this sort. Anyone can sell a [illegible] with it. To sell a receiving set and keep it sold is another matter entirely.

A perfect Radio Receiver is one that, first of all, is highly sensitive and selective. It must be capable of exceptionally fine tuning, it must have a minimum of complicated controls and adjustments. It must not "squeal" or "howl" at the slightest touch. The constants must be scientifically and electrically correct to the smallest detail. It must be assembled and so constructed as to be capable of being perfectly operated by the novice, and, last of all, it must present a fine appearance.

THE TRUTH ABOUT RADIO

Is apparently very hard to obtain. BENWOOD advice is accurate. BENWOOD APPARATUS IS GUARANTEED.

We Recommend as Among the Best

The Supreme Insulation

Wooden Panels Made Attractive.

Wooden panels of a radio box can be rubberized by breaking several old phonograph records into small pieces, putting them in a tin can, and adding one-half pint of denatured alcohol. This will dissolve in a day or two; then apply on the boards with a brush. A very glossy finish can be obtained if the rubber surface is shellacked. One-quarter inch wood is of correct thickness for most small receiving panels. It would be well to dry the material in a warm oven before applying the insulating mixture.

Radiograms.

Germany has a public radiophone service with subscribers in 176 cities and towns.

There are more than 100 different types of radio receiving sets now made by 30 manufacturers.

Restrictions in Japan have kept radio a mystery to the general public. Only colleges, newspapers and Government institutions have been licensed to operate receiving sets.

A radio receiving set has been installed at the leper colony at San Juan, Porto Rico, where, after years of dreary days and silent nights, the sufferers can now listen to the voices of the world.

WHITE BILL MAY BE SHELVED THIS SESSION

Opposition by Few Senators Likely to Prevent Its Passage Before Adjournment.

Although some Government officials are still hopeful, the proponents of the White Radio bill in the Senate fear that this legislation cannot be passed this session, due chiefly to the opposition of Senator Underwood, it is said. Although they admit it is unfortunate to let the present chaos in the air continue an leave Secretary Hoover with little actual authority, for another year, it seems to be the opinion of some Senators that nothing can be done before March 4.

An informal survey of the Senate by members of the Interstate Commerce Committee revealed the fact that there are some Senators opposed to the measure, who would prevent its consideration on the floor in view of other legislation being pressed for enactment before the session closes. Senators Kellogg and Cummins have tried hard to have the matter considered, but believe the radio bill will in all probability "die" in the Committee Room. New bills will have to be introduced in the next session, and although Congressman White will probably champion the cause again in the House, Senator Kellogg leaves the Senate, and no acknowledged friend of radio there has come forward to take his place.

Some Government officials still believe that the Senate will find time to consider the Radio bill. They insist that opposition on the part of a few Senators will be overcome when they are advised fully as to the urgent needs for legislation. Present chaos in the ether, they say, must be remedied, pointing out that little opposition would be shown were all Senators informed of the vital necessity for some sort of emergency legislation this session.

AMERICAN RADIO EXPORTS GROWING

The exports of wireless and telegraph apparatus from the United States during 1922 showed a very large increase as against the figures for 1921. In 1922 the value was $3,214,098 compared with $1,010,891 for 1921.

Radio apparatus exported in 1922 totaled $2,897,799, and in the month of December, $163,236 worth of equipment was shipped abroad.

The increase of radio and telegraph apparatus in 1922 was due to the tremendous interest shown in radio throughout the world, appearing even in the most unlikely places. The fascination and appeal of radio appears to be universal, and its development would go forward still more rapidly were better broadcasting facilities provided, the Department of Commerce States.

It is a violation of a city ordinance to run an aerial across the street.

RADIO CORPORATION GRANTED INJUNCTION

Three Manufacturers and Dealers Withheld From Making and Selling Vacuum Tubes.

Judge Augustus N. Hand, in the United States District Court, for the Southern District of New York, handed down yesterday decisions in three patent suits brought by the Radio Corporation of America for infringement of the DeForest audion patents by the manufacture and sale of vacuum tubes for radio purposes. In all three cases Judge Hand granted preliminary injunctions asked for.

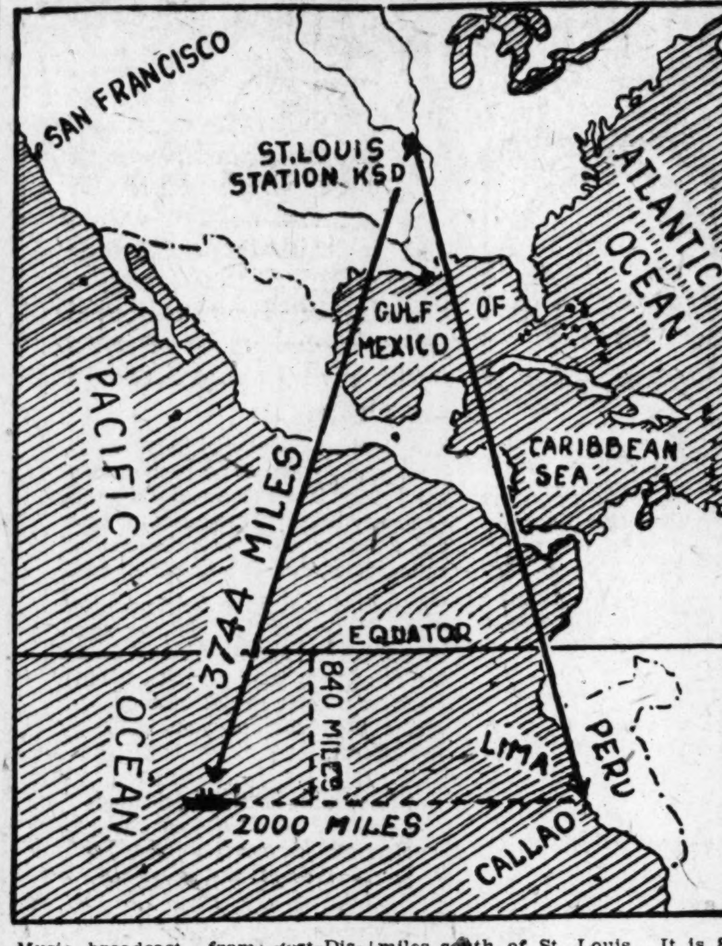
The first of these suits was that of the Radio Corporation of America against La France Import & Sales Co., Inc., and others, who are manufacturing and selling a vacuum tube known as the "La France" detector and amplifier.

The second suit was against Harry Rosenthal and others who are manufacturing and selling a vacuum tube detector and amplifier known as the "Perfection" tube.

The third suit was against the Radio Guild, Inc., a dealer in the "Perfection" tubes.

One of the principal defenses urged upon the Court for a denial of the preliminary injunction motions was that Radio Corporation of America had no rights to maintain the suit because the DeForest Radio Telephone & Telegraph Co. was the owner of the DeForest audion patents. This defense, as well as other defenses, were overruled by Judge Hand in granting the preliminary injunctions.

Broadcasting From Station K S D Heard 840 Miles Below Equator and 2000 Miles Off the Coast of Peru



Music broadcast from Post-Dispatch radio station K S D has crossed the equator, thus establishing a new farthest South record for this station.

Information as to this achievement comes in a letter to the Post-Dispatch from the steamship Easterner's radio operator, R. E. Roesch. The letter is as follows:

SS. Easterner,
En Route Australia to Boston.

St. Louis Post-Dispatch Radiophone Station, St. Louis, Mo.:

Dear Sirs—Heard selections played by the Bell Telephone Co. Orchestra from your station on the evening of Jan. 25 while 3300 nautical miles distant. Position at the time was latitude 13 S. longitude 108 W. Music was loud and clear, with good modulation. Heard with one step of audio frequency amplification.

Kindly acknowledge to 356 William street, East Orange, N. J. I am, very truly yours,
R. E. ROESCH, Radio Operator.

The point at which the concert heard on the Easterner is in the Pacific Ocean, 2008.25 miles west of the coast of Peru and 3744 statute miles south of St. Louis. It is 840 miles south of the equator.

The feat of reaching a point so far South is greater from the fact that static interference increases with the warmth of the climate, and at this season it is considered easier to reach distant points in the cold regions north and northwest of St. Louis than to make distance records in the tropical countries to the south.

Operator Roesch forwarded his letter when he reached the Panama Canal, on the way to Boston.

Walter H. Mueller of 6414 Colorado avenue, who has returned to St. Louis after service in the navy, brings additional information as to the hearing of Station K S D in Peru. He called at the Post-Dispatch office and said that about Dec. 1, while his ship was in the harbor of Callao, Peru, he visited a Government radio station high in the Andes mountains near Lima and was permitted to listen in. He heard the words "Post-Dispatch," followed by music.

"I asked the operator if that could be the Post-Dispatch of St. Louis," said Mueller, and he replied: 'Yes, we sometimes get that station.'" Lima is approximately 3700 miles south of St. Louis 82,588 Messages Handled by Amateurs.

F. H. Schnell, traffic manager of the American Radio Relay League, announces that a record total of 82,588 messages were handled by A. R. R. L. members in January. This is the largest number of messages handled in any one month thus far. The best previous record was in December, a total of 66,885. The central division made the best showing with a grand total of 18,799.

Wiring a Radio Set.

Solder all connections.

Run wires at right angles, when they run near each other.

Use stiff wire, so that when once put in place it will stay there.

Use spaghetti tubing to eliminate any leakage. Leakage causes tube noises.

For the Notebook.

The average vacuum tube of good make has a normal operating life of 1000 hours.

Loose connections in the grid circuit give a continuous hum, while those in the plate circuit sound like static.

Amateurs who operate crystal sets and pick up messages from Canada, Cuba or other distant stations may be merely taking the signals radiated from a powerful bulb set near by.

Concerning the Aerial.

One pound of No. 14 copper wire generally provides the correct span of the receiving antenna which picks up the broadcasting stations operating on a 260 and 400 metre wave length.

Radio Questions Answered

All questions must be accompanied by the name and address of the sender.

Q. In last Sunday's Post I read that a variable condenser connected in series or parallel sometimes increased the strength of signals. Does that apply to a crystal set? (2) A 'phone condenser placed across the 'phone terminals makes no difference in the sound. Why? H. B.

A. (1) Yes. (2) Perhaps the condenser is not of the correct capacity.

Q. My crystal seems to have gone dead. The sensitive points it once had seem to be gone. What can I do for this? E. M.

A. Try washing it in alcohol; if this does not improve it, file or break it up into smaller pieces and try them.

Q. What is the name of the best radio set for long distance work, and who makes it? Please answer in your Sunday radio column. H. M.

A. We do not recommend any set or piece of apparatus as being the "best."

Q. Where is the most efficient place for a variable condenser in a crystal set, in the aerial or the ground circuit? M. E. R.

A. The same results will bo obtained with the condenser in series with the aerial or the ground. When so connected, it reduces the natural period of the antenna, making it possible to hear signals transmitted on short wave-lengths. If the condenser is connected in parallel (across the tuning inductance) it increases the wave-length range of the set, making it possible to pick up stations on longer waves. It is suggested to try both ways, but it is more than likely that best result will be obtained with the condense in series. Either 23 or 43 plate size will serve satisfactorily.

Q. (1) Can a transformer be used to light the filament of a vacuum tube? (2) When, where and how can an amateur license be obtained? J. J. W.

A. (1) It has been done, but the average amateur is not equipped with the apparatus and the ability to filter out the hum caused by the alternating current. (2) Upon application to the Radio Inspector, 629 Federal Building, Chicago, Ill., application blanks may be obtained, which, when properly filled out and submitted, will be acted upon by the inspector. The owner of an amateur station may operate his station in accordance with the laws if his application for a license has been properly filed, but has not been acted upon. An application for an operator's license must also have been filed and every effort made to obtain the license before the station is operated.

Q. Can a rheostat that is used for a six-volt vacuum tube be used for a "peanut" tube? H. G.

A. Yes.

Q. Whate does "DX" mean with reference to radio? A. W.

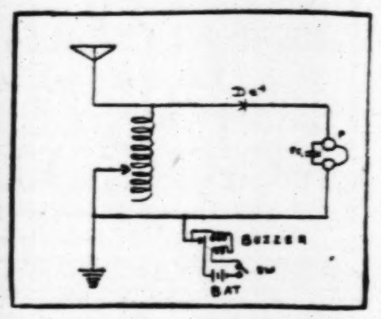
Ans. "DX" is the radio man's abbreviation for "distance" or "distant."

Q. Where can I obtain a book of the Government radio regulations? F. N.

A. "Radio Communication Laws of the United States" may be procured by sending 15 cents to the Superintendent of Documents, Government Printing Office, Washington, D. C.

Q. Does a buzzer increase the sound on a crystal set? If so, how could I connect one? E. J.

A. A buzzer-test is a very worthwhile addition to any crystal set, but it does not increase the signal strength. It only helps in quickly finding a sensitive spot on the mineral. The buzzer is turned on and the "cat-whisker" of the detector adjusted until the loudest sound is heard, then the buzzer is turned off. Here is a diagram showing the connections:



Q. Are "peanut" tubes "hard" or "soft"? G. D.

A. They are "hard", but "detect" satisfactorily with a plate voltage of 22½ volts.

Q. In code messages, how is the "dot" recognized from the "dash"? W. B.

A. The dash is equal in length to three dots.

Q. (1) What is the best plate voltage for a "peanut" tube? (2) When does the St. Louis Chamber of Commerce broadcast? C. C. M.

A. (1) Twenty-two and a half when used as a detector and 45 for an amplifier. (2) The St. Louis Chamber of Commerce has never installed equipment for radio broadcasting. License was granted but not utilized.

Q. In a vario-coupler, when is the inductance between the primary and secondary greatest? R. S.

A. When the windings lie in parallel planes.

Q. What distance can be heard with a set consisting of a crystal detector, two variometers and a vario-coupler connected to a 200-foot outdoor antenna? H. M.

A. Shorten the antenna 75 feet and omit the variometers. Some crystal sets connected to an efficient aerial and ground pick up signals from broadcasting stations on the East coast. This is rare, however.

Q. What size wire is best for winding spider-web coils? J. C. S.

A. No. 26 or 28 enameled, is recommended, although even smaller may be used.

WAVELENGTH BRIEFLY DEFINED BY ENGINEER

Analogous to a Swing Suspended From Branch of a Tree, Being Pushed by Two People.

BY B. R. CUMMINGS,
Radio Engineer of General Electric Company.

In the adjustment of radio receivers, we know what we can "tune-in" different stations which are transmitting on different wavelengths by an adjustment of the control or controls provided in the receiver for this purpose. We know that, even though a number of stations are transmitting simultaneously, if their wavelengths are sufficiently diferent we can tune one station out and another in.

For an analogy of what takes place in a radio receiver when it is tuned to a particular wavelength, let us picture a swing suspended from a branch of a tree, say, and that two people, one at each end of the swing's travel, are alternately pushing the swing and keeping it in motion. Their pushes are timed to the natural period of the swing, so that each push is delivered at a time when it will add to the motion of the swing. In this case, the energy given to the swing by the two people alternately pushing it is analogous to the energy put into the radio receiver, by an incoming signal, and the motion of the swing is analogous to the current flowing in the receiver, flowing first in one direction and then in the other. If, however, the people pushing the swing do not time their push so that it matches up with the natural period of the swing, the amplitude of the swing will decrease more and more as the pushes become more more out of step.

We know that, the shorter the length of the swing, the quicker it will swing back and forth, and that as it is made longer, the time required for it to travel back and forth is increased. In the case of a radio signal we have no control at the receiving station over the frequency of the pushes or pulses of energy, the frequency being established at the transmitting station, but we must tune our receiver so that the flow of current in the receiver will be a maximum. When we tune the receiver, it is analogous to shortening or lengthening the swing so that it will have a natural period which will match up with the frequency of the pulses transferred to it, under which conditions the travel of the swing and likewise the current in the radio receiver will be a maximum. Since all radio signals, regardless of their wavelength, travel through space at the same speed, the shorter the wavelength the greater will be the number of pulses received per second.

The fact that a great number of transmitting stations can transmit simultaneously on different wavelengths and that any one of these stations can be received without interference from the others, providing the wavelengths are sufficiently separated, is one of the most interesting phenomena encountered in radio. The signals from all of these stations exist in space simultaneously, but none of them is affected by the others, each communication retaining its individual characteristics. Although very incomplete, a simple analogy to this condition can be made by dropping two stones simultaneously in a still body of water, at a separation of several feet. Waves in concentric circles will emanate from both points at which the stones enter the water. These waves will increase in diameter and the waves set up by one stone will cross those set up by the other, but after they have crossed they will emerge intact and neither one will be distorted or changed in form by having come in contact with the other.

In the foregoing it has been carefully stated that stations can be received withiut interference from other stations "providing there is a sufficient difference in wave length between the station received and other stations." This condition exists usually in commercial work, and did exist until recently in radio broadcasting work. With the increasing number of broadcasting stations, however, and the comparatively narrow band of wavelengths which have been allotted by the Government for broadcasting work, it is not possible for all stations to work on a wave length sufficiently different from those of other stations to permit its reception without at the same time hearing one or more of the other stations. A study of this condition has recently been made, and in one town, which is typical of a great number of the small towns in the eastern part part of the United States, a total of 39 broadcasting stations were picked up, in one evening, all operating on wavelengths between 360 and 400 meters. In many cases two stations wer found to be working on exactly the same wavelength, so that, even with the most refined receiving equipment, it was not possible to differentiate between them.

Until this condition is improved, those who listen to radio broadcasting are subjected to considerable disappointment, for we frequently find instead of selecting the particular program which we wish to hear, we are obliged to accept one which we can get without interference from other stations, this one usually being the station located closest to the receiving station.

Lightning Switch Positions.

Throw the blade of the lightning switch to the lower clip when the receiving set is not being used, thereby "grounding" it, and to the upper clip when the set is to be used. While the blade is in the lower clip, it makes a "lightning rod" of the antenna.

Of first importance to clear, uninterrupted reception, is a noise-free "B" battery—the kind you get in the Willard Radio "B" Rechargeable Storage Battery.

It Cuts Out the Noise

When the concert is spoiled by a lot of fireworks in your headphones or amplifier, there's no longer any reason for sitting helplessly by and blaming it on "static."

For, contrary to what you may have been led to think, a great part of those disturbing sounds are due not to static at all, but to internal action or electrical leakage, or both, in your "B" batteries.

REAR VIEW CABINET REMOVED

The amount of enjoyment received in listening to a radio concert is greatly dependent upon the quality and type of receiver used. The Kellogg Switchboard and Supply Co., who manufacture and guarantee all parts entering into Jones Radio Sets, in creating the "Symphony" have not changed the theory of wireless receiving—but rather the way of applying it. Give the theory of wireless an opportunity to operate through perfect parts, and the result will be perfection. Selective tuning is found in the efficient, simplified control of the "Symphony." By turning a single knob it is possible to tune in stations, one by one, to the total exclusion of all others. In St. Louis, the "Symphony" has picked up twenty-seven broadcasting stations in one night, including stations in Canada, Cuba and Hawaii.

D. R. F. REALTY CO. ACQUIRES LEATHER TRADES BUILDING

Frisco Building Co. Has Turned Over 16th and Locust Streets Property on Basis of $800,000.

SELLER TAKES OVER LOT IN THE TRADE

Van Raalte Closed Contract for Southeast Corner of Grand and Morgan Before Theater Deal Was Closed.

By Berry Moore.

The D. R. F. Realty & Investment Co., former Ambassador Francis, president, yesterday acquired the Leather Trades Building, an eight-story and basement fireproof structure, at the southwest corner of Sixteenth and Locust streets, from the Frisco Building Co., on a basis of $800,000. In this connection the Frisco Building Co. acquired a lot 80x150 feet on the north side of Locust street, running through to St. Charles street, at a valuation of $2500 a front foot, or $200,000. Commissions were paid on $1,000,000, the aggregate of the two transactions.

The operation was conducted by Isaac T. Cook, president of Isaac T. Cook & Co., on behalf of the Frisco Building Co., in conjunction with the Francis, Perry, Ruth Realty Co., acting for the D. R. F. Co. The Frisco Building Co. acquired the building in 1915 from the late George Warren Brown, who erected it in 1912 before the mounting cost of production halted building operations on a large scale in the business district. In view of this fact, doubtless it has reaped an unprecendented profit on its investment.

The building, which occupies a site 100x155 feet, is tenanted by wholesale leather concerns. It will remain under the management of Isaac T. Cook & Co. Cook declined to disclose the plans of the Frisco Company in connection with the acquisition of the lot, which it is believed will be improved with a large structure of the commercial type.

Recently Bought Lot.

The D. R. F. Co. recently bought a lot on the south side of Washington avenue, just west of Twelfth street, having plans for a large building for the wholesale trade, according to the Francis-Perry-Ruth Real Estate Co., who handled the transaction.

The Jefferson Hotel Co. quite a while ago bought the northeast corner of Thirteenth and Locust streets, having 102 feet on Thirteenth and 225 feet on Locust to provide for a $1,000,000 extension to the Jefferson Hotel. The transaction was brought about by the Mercantile Trust Co., representing the Composite Realty Co. The adjoining plot, having a frontage of 102 feet on Thirteenth and 225 on St. Charles, with only an alley intervening between the two plots is owned by the Mutual Realty Co., also composed of clients of the Mercantile Trust Co., which is exploiting it as a site for a pretentious structure.

Both sites overlook Library Park with a commanding view of Locust street, and will be even more attractively situated in connection with the Memorial Plaza which will virtually include the Public Library and Library Park.

With plans for the consolidation of the McKinley System with the Studebaker interests, about to be put into execution, the plans of the McKinley System for the eerction of a tall office building and station at Twelfth and Lucas avenue, bid fair to be carried through in the near future. This will have a wide and beneficial effect on both sides of Twelfth street.

The week in realty closed with a profusion of notable transactions which is regarded as reflecting the wholesome effects of the triumph of the $87,000,000 bond issue.

The most notable include the purchase by William Goldman, formerly manager of the Missouri Theater, of the southeast corner of Grand boulevard and Morgan street, for a theater to cost $325,000 for construction alone. The purchase includes 146 feet on Grand by 134 feet on Morgan, owned by Simon Van Raalte and an adjoining 50 feet on Morgan street, owned by Alma White, bishop of the Pillar of Fire, Bound Brook, New Jersey, who was represented by the O. H. Brooks Realty Co. The prices paid for these plots were not announced, but it is estimated that they will approximate a total of $300,000, with record profits for the sellers who acquired them before prices on Grand avenue began to climb.

Bought Other Corner.

Coincidentally, Van Raalte closed contracts for the purchase of the southeast corner of Grand and Morgan, the value of which he was prompt to realize would be enhanced in no small degree by the erection of the proposed theater on the opposite corner. In other words, Van Raalte closed contracts for the corner before the directors of the Missouri Botanical Garden Association, the seller, in this instance, got wind of Goldman's elaborate theater plans.

The corner bought by Van Raalte has 163 feet on Grand and 157 feet on Morgan, and is occupied by one story buildings. The Missouri Botanical Association acquired the property several years ago from the late Felix Scalzo in a famous triangular operation engineered by the Wm. T. Mathews Realty Co., which also was instrumental in effecting the present sale. The association will realize a snug profit on its investment by the sale to Van Raalte.

Incidentally, Goldman also purchased the King's Theater on King's highway boulevard north of Delmar boulevard, which he will reopen as a high-class picture house.

PLANS UNDER WAY FOR NEW GOLF CLUB ON THE MERAMEC

Option for 50-Year Lease Granted to Directors of Castlewood Country Club.

Plans for a new golf club, to be known as the Castlewood Country Club, on the Meramec River, between Castlewood and Mountain Ridge Station, became known yesterday when announcement was made through W. M. and M. M. Boaz that the Rankin estate trustees and the Meramec Trust Co., had granted an option for a 50-year lease to the new club's board of directors.

M. M. Boaz said the tract covered by the option contained about 110 acres and that the officers of the new club would not be ready to make a detailed announcement of plans for a week.

SITE FOR HOTEL SOLD BY YECKEL-FEYDT-EARICKSON

The lot at the northwest corner of Maryland and Euclid, fronting 147 feet on Maryland by a depth of 215 feet on Euclid, was sold by the Yeckel-Feydt-Earickson Realty C for the Ernest E. Koken Realty Co. estate, represented by the Ben Altheimer & Bro. Realty Co., to a syndicate who will erect a 100-room hotel on this site, to be known as the Fairmont Hotel.

The hotel will set back from Maryland avenue 60 feet, and the main entrance will be on Maryland with a lobby 100 feet wide, and dining room on the east end and lounging rooms on the west side. Each suite will be equipped with in-a-dor beds and bath.

The building will be financed by the Fidelity Bond and Mortgage Co. The hotel will be operated under the American plan.

INDEPENDENT PAPER STOCK CO. MOVES INTO NEW BUILDING

The National Vinegar Co., of which Marquard Braun is president, has moved into its new building at Second and Poplar streets, where facilities are greatly improved, to make way for the Independent Paper Stock Co., which is moving into larger quarters, equipping the building with modern hydraulic-electric machinery to handle their output. The latter concern has installed a "dry valve" sprinkler system throughout the entire plant." The company operates its own fleet of motor trucks which picks up the waste paper throughout the city and adjoining towns.

Will K. Roth represented the Lessor-Goldman Cotton Co., the National Vinegar Co. and the Independent Paper Stock Co.

PREMIER SERVICE COMPANY LEASES LARGER QUARTERS

The Premier Service Co. has closed a long term lease on the first floor storeroom at 119 North Eighth street. This company has been located for the past two years at 501 North Ninth street, but owing to the large increase in business was compelled to lease additional space. It will vacate its present quarters as soon as the alterations in its new location are completed. The company deals in general electrical appliances and has branches in a great many other cities.

Martin & Breitt represented the company in this transaction.

BUTTS COMPANY SELLS CORNER LOT IN UNIVERSITY CITY

Ames place was laid out a few years ago and is one of the most highly improved subdivisions in University City. It has been built up with high-class homes. The purchase price has not been announced, but it is reported in the neighborhood of $200,000.

The Mississippi Valley Trust Co. also reports having sold for Alicia Chichester to a client 157 acres of the old Chambers homestead located on the New and Old Florissant roads in Ferguson. It is understood that this property is to be divided into one-acre tracts for the building of homes.

The company also reports the sale of 105 acres on the west side of Link road, south of Lackland road, for the account of the Lackland heirs to Lillie V. Shields, who intends subdividing it into small tracts for the erection of homes. This property is a short distance from the Midland Valley Golf Club.

Also sold for the account of Julie von Schrader Hodgson to John Gates Williams, 31 acres immediately south of the Log Cabin Club. Williams is having plans prepared for an attractive home to be erected on this ground.

W. J. DUGGAN OPENS OFFICES FOR BUSINESS IN SECURITIES

W. J. Duggan, formerly secretary of the Mercantile Trust Co., has established offices at the Federal Reserve Bank Building, and will deal in investment securities, specializing on bankers acceptances.

The founders of the Federal Reserve System recognize the importance of bank acceptances and encourage and support efforts to make an active and broad maket for this form of credit instrument.

The rulings of the Federal Reserve Board, Dec. 20, 1922, whereby bankers acceptances drawn by growers of staple products or by co-operative market associations are eligible for purchase by the Federal Reserve Bank. Duggan believes. will result in a greatly increased supply of domestic bills and St. Louis is advantageously situated to become an active market for bank acceptances of this class.

Duggan, with 20 years' practical experience in banking credits, is well qualified to direct a business of this character.

ALTERATIONS COMPLETED ON STORES AT 11TH AND PINE

The Spencer Estate has about completed alterations on the building at the northwest corner of Eleventh and Pine streets. ROTH'S GROVE PROPERTY SOLD BY DAVIS CO.

Bush-Burns Realty Co. Buys Tract Which Will Be Opened Formally Soon.

Announcement has just been made by the E. Davis Realty and Mortgage Co. that it has purchased from the Bush-Burns Realty Co. Roth's Grove, which property will be formally opened within the next few days, according to the advertisements now running. Roth's Grove, so the company states, commands the main entrance into the city on Olive street road. University City has built almost solidly on all sides of Roth's Grove; in fact, the apartment houses of the city, the most congested districts, extend right up to this property.

Mrs. Roth only recently decided to sell, which accounts for the property remaining in the center of this great building activity and not being subdivided.

Roth's Grove subdivision is located on the Olive street road, just one block west of Delmar Garden. It extends from Ferguson avenue, opposite Pershing School, to Pennsylvania avenue, while the main entrance is only one block west of Ferguson on Olive Street road.

Because of zone ordinances and early restrictions, for a distance of nearly two miles south, University City, with only a few exceptions, is restricted against flats and apartments. This means that Roth's grove will be the center of the greatest congestion of apartments and flats, within the coming few months, ever known in the West End.

BUILDINGS NEAR SOUTHWEST AND KING'S HIGHWAY PLANNED

The rapid increase of poulation and new buildings in the neighborhood of King's highway and Southwest avenue, and the prospect of the Taylor car line extension to connect with the Southampton line, have created a demand for stores and offices. Through the efforts of the Southwest Bank, building operations have begun for the erection of stores and offices on the west side of King's highway between Southwest avenue and Botanical avenue.

The Southwest Bank has begun alterations to improve the upper floor of the bank building with offices for doctors or dentists.

Plans have also been completed for the erection of five stores on the south side of Southwest avenue, just west of King's highway.

CORNER OF LOUGHBOROUGH AND MORGANFORD IS SOLD

The Boody-Goller Realty Co. announces the purchase of 12 acres of ground at the southeast corner of Morganford and Loughborough avenues, from the Luecking estate. Both parties in the transaction were represented by E. P. Luecking. This old homestead was formerly known as the old Loughborough estate. It is planned by the purchasers to plat this ground immediately into building lots and to improve with all surface improvements immediately. A notable feature of this tract is that Carondelet Park lies directly across from it, which makes it desirable for residential purposes. Loughborough avenue, which bounds the tract on the north side, is one of the main arteries leading from Gravois avenue into Broadway. Morganford road, which is on the west side of this property, is one of the leading thoroughfares into the county, making it desirable for business purposes.

FEDERER-ARENDES' WORK IN GRAND-DOVER PARK

In the development of Grand-Dover Park subdivision the Federer-Arendes Realty Co., will install asphalt streets on the main streets instead of their original specifications of Telford.

The grading is well under way and is to be completed May 1, 1923, when all sewers also are to be installed.

During the past week there has been a resale of three choice lots at a very renumerative figure, and, from all indications, all the lots in this subdivision will be sold before April 1.

The firm also reports having under contract sales for improved property, involving an aggregate of more than $240,000, which have been made in the past week.

ALTHEIMER LEASES STOREROOM AT TENTH AND PINE STREETS

Realty sales reported by Eugene J. Altheimer include four double flats, three bungalows, a residence and a piece of business property.

BIG BUILDING "BROKE" BY LONG-TERM LEASES

Railway Exchange Structure in Bankruptcy Because of Low Rentals.

The long-term leases that in 1910 were considered necessary to justify the erection of the 21-story Railway Exchange Building, now are the cause of the building company's bankruptcy. The largest office building in the city, frequently asserted to be larger than any other similar structure in the world, is "broke."

Claude L. Ricketts, manager of the building, yesterday was appointed receiver for it after three small creditors had filed an involuntary petition because they were no longer getting the interest on their claims which had existed since construction days.

Result of Long-Term Leases.

Three-fourths of the space in the building is under 50-year lease at an annual rental of $1 and $1.25 per square foot. Present rentals in other downtown office buildings are from $2.75 to $3. It was thought necessary in promoting the building to insure tenantcy of a large proportion of its floor space for a long period. The war came on. Operation costs ascended. Other buildings increased rents. It was possible to increase the rents on only one-fourth of the Railway Exchange and these increases could not be made to equal increased operating costs.

No interest ever has been paid on the $2,500,000 of bonds outstanding and the accrued interest now amounts to more than $1,900,000. No dividends have been paid on the $2,500,000 of common stock. In addition the company has other liabilities, chiefly the inheritance of unexpected construction costs, totaling $400,000.

May Result in Relief.

Ricketts would not say whether the receivership was a friendly one to rid the building of its long-term leases, and, under court order, to make new leases more closely approaching the rentals of other similar buildings.

"Some such eventuality has threatened for several years," he said. "There now are 150 persons and firms on the waiting list for space in the building. The long-term leases would not produce needed revenue to meet advancing costs and the holders of the leases would not voluntarily accept a rental increase. Taxes have constituted one of the expenses underestimated when the building was built. The taxes on the property occupying the site totaled $46,000. An allowance for $80,000 for taxes was made in the building estimate. The actual amount paid last year was $183,000. In the last five years taxes have totaled $800,000.

Cost Was Underestimated.

"The cost of construction was greater than estimated. It is recalled that quicksand was encountered and the caissons that were necessary ran up the foundation costs. There were extras all along the line. The leases called for interior finishing that was 'first-class.' There was a divergence of opinion on what was first-class. The building company may have considered cast iron first-class, but the tenant would hold out for bronze and in the arbitrations of the dispute the tenants usually won."

Ricketts said that, in his opinion, if rentals measured up to those in neighboring buildings, the Railway Exchange could be operated profitably.

It Costs Money to Move!

Changing Tenants is costly for both tenant and owner

A good Building Manager will always try to arrange a satisfactory lease between the two—that is, one that provides for a reasonable rent to the tenant and a fair return to the owner.

Some of our clients who are owners of commercial buildings are also tenants in our office buildings and appreciate our way of managing property.

We have enlarged our organization and desire to list additional property.

To Be Formally Opened in a Few Days

ROTH GROVE SUBDIVISION

The four-family apartment house subdivision. Starting one block west of Delmar Garden, on Olive Street road, with the solid building line of St. Louis reaching to the river.

Without question, the most valuable four-family apartment house and flat property in the city today; property the entire West End has been waiting for.

It will be offered at the lowest prices—prices that will actually double in value immediately.

ROTH GROVE SUBDIVISION COMMANDS THE MAIN ENTRANCE TO ST. LOUIS

Across the street will be the starting point for many of St. Louis' busiest street car lines.

You know how valuable property in the Sixty-third Street and Cottage Grove Avenue district of Chicago has become within a remarkably short period; it is because this district is the main entrance to Chicago for all that vast section south and east of the city.

You have seen values go to unheard-of heights in Wellston in the past few years, because it is the St. Charles entrance to St. Louis.

ROTH GROVE IS THE MAIN ENTRANCE TO ST. LOUIS

J. P. Morgan once said, "You can be a bull on the U. S." We say to you, "BET EVERY DOLLAR YOU CAN SPARE ON ST. LOUIS; WHETHER YOU HAVE $300 CASH AND CAN SAVE ONLY A LITTLE EACH MONTH, OR WHETHER YOU HAVE $5000 OR $25,000 CASH. BUY EVERY LOT YOU CAN CARRY."

Be sure you get LOCATION—property with a future. Then pay for that location, because it will become valuable where cheaper property might not.

Fortunes will be made out of good real estate—especially flat and apartment property—in St. Louis within the next few months. It is simply a question of buying LOCATION.

In Roth Grove you are in the very center of the greatest building activity, with St. Louis' solid building line already to the east border and reaching west of us for more than a mile across our north border. Roth Grove is positively a monopoly flat and apartment property, because, with very few exceptions, University City, clear to Clayton road on the south—approximately two miles—is restricted to one family to a lot.

AN UNBREAKABLE LOG CHAIN BLOCKS THE APARTMENT PATH

The congestion of the future MUST BE in Roth Grove Subdivision and north of it, because of restrictions and zone ordinances which act as insurmountable barriers.

Come out Sunday. Study location. Study this main entrance to St. Louis. Then you will agree with us that values here will double immediately. Salesmen will show you the plats, so that when the property is formally opened you can make your purchases.

Drive out Delmar avenue to Delmar Garden, then north to the Olive Street road, then one block west to Ferguson avenue—the eastern border (opposite Pershing School) of Roth Grove Subdivision. Or drive one block west of Ferguson avenue on Olive Street road to the main entrance of Roth Grove. It will pay—PAY BIG.

Remember that the passage of the bond issue advanced St. Louis TEN YEARS IN A SINGLE DAY. Every well-located lot in St. Louis increased in value the day we voted that St. Louis MUST ADVANCE. Prices are following rapidly.

Roth Grove will be the fastest-selling subdivision ever opened in St. Louis!

START A STORE OF YOUR OWN

Handle the kind of goods that sell big
Every day in the year,
To rich and poor alike,
Everyday necessities,
At popular prices—
Big variety and big values
For little money.
Start a store that is THE store
For people who spend
In nickels, dimes and quarters.
The kind of a store that yields a larger profit on investment than any other kind of store;
The kind that makes a profit
While other stores are standing still.

WE WILL SHOW YOU HOW

Let us show you how you can start such a store.

$2500 to $6000 will be sufficient capital.

You don't have to be an expert, or a trained merchant.

We will gladly show you
How to get a choice location,
Where to get your fixtures and how to use them,
How to select your stock and how to arrange it,
How to mark your goods and how to make a profit,
How to make simple window trims that will sell goods,
How to get the people inside your store,
In short, we give you the benefit of 45 years' experience in showing men and women how to become successful merchants.

You incur no obligation whatever in requesting details of our plan.

All we ask is that you come in and see us or write us a letter in strictest confidence, telling fully and frankly about yourself, how much capital you have to invest and where you would prefer to locate.

HOW TO RAISE BABY CHICKS

Feed the Only Complete and Perfectly Balanced Ration

CHAMBERLAIN'S PERFECT

BRAND

FOR BABY CHICKS

No difficult feeding plan to follow. (Everything in one sack.) Ask any other manufacturer for a true statement of what is in his feed, and why it is there.

NO CORN—NO BOWEL TROUBLE

THE PURPOSE AND IMPORTANCE OF EACH INGREDIENT:

OATMEAL

Recognized principally as a balanced ration for the reason that the proteins and fats found in it meet the requirements of a developing chick's body more perfectly than most other grains, and, owing to its softness of texture, is digested much faster than the other harder grains and with less strain on the digestive system.

GRANULATED MEAT

Recognized principally as the animal protein base. It contains an acid called Lysin that works in harmony with the other acids found in the different grains and seeds. Lysin is just as important in an egg ration as it is in a chick-growing ration and answers for the same purpose. Meat produces meat.

GRANULATED MILO MAIZE AND KAFIR

Recognized principally as a Carbo-hydrate base and is used in CHAMBERLAIN'S PERFECT CHICK FEED principally as the body or base of the feed mixture. The Carbo-hydrates act as a carrier or distributor of the important food elements, such as protein, fat, ash, etc.

GRANULATED WHEAT

Recognized principally as a vegetable protein base, and has for its object the production of lean Meats, Muscles, etc. The development of any animal depends largely upon the lean Meats and Muscles for its growth and strength. CHAMBERLAIN'S PERFECT CHICK FEED is a Wheat base food which is rich in vitamines. There are three different vitamines: Fat soluble vitamine A, Water soluble vitamine B, Water soluble vitamine C. Some feeds contain one of these growth-building substances, and other feeds contain another, but unless you have a well-balanced variety of ingredients in the chick's ration, you do not get all of them. And without all of them, healthy, rapid growth is impossible; therefore, PERFECT CHICK FEED is a Wheat base, rich in growth vitamines.

MILLET SEED

Recognized principally as a Starch base, Millet Seed is important when used in correct proportions. When thrown in the litter the small, round, glassy seeds go to the bottom and considerable exercise is needed to scratch it out, and this exercise means health and vigor.

CLOVER SEED

Recognized principally as a fat or oil base of vegetable origin. These oils and fats contain certain acids not found in most grains or seeds, and, when mixed properly, give wonderful results. Clover Seed is in itself Nature's Baby Chick Feed.

GRANULATED CHARCOAL

Recognized principally as an intestinal purifier. The office of charcoal is to sweeten the food while it is being digested; it also absorbs any gases which might arise from the food while in a predigested state.

DRIED GRANULAR BUTTERMILK

Recognized principally as an animal protein. The lactic acid in buttermilk is very beneficial in the maintenance of health of the digestive organs of the baby chick's body. Perfect health of the digestive system means the growing chick will develop more rapidly, and it also means the many disease germs that attack the baby chick are cast off. Prevention is better than cure—Buttermilk has a tonic effect, and greatly improves the palatability of all feeds.

GRANULATED BONE

Recognized principally as the lime base. Bone is very essential in a growing chick's feed ration for the reason that as the chick's body develops the bones of the body develop first of all, and since the bone or frame-work of the growing chick constitutes a considerable portion of the body, you can see the importance of same. Bones must be developed first.

CARBONATE LIMESTONE GRIT—99% PURE

A PETRIFIED OR CRYSTALLIZED SHELL FORMATION

Hard, sharp and cubical, yet soluble, therefore by far more efficient than oyster shells and ordinary grit. Recognized principally as the teeth of the chick or chicken, and has for its duty the grinding or crushing of the different grains and seeds that the chick might eat. Grit does its first grinding work in the crop; the second or final grinding takes place in the gizzard. The real object of grit is to break open the particles of food so that the different acids of the crop, gizzard and the intestines may perform their duty. Limestone Grit furnishes considerable food in the growth of the chick's feathers, at the same time it supplies considerable carbonate of lime in the bone building.

PROTEIN VEGETABLE

Is the nitrogen containing albumen-like substance of plants, similar in composition and character to the white of an egg. It is the most costly form of food, and, generally speaking, has for its function the formation of flesh and muscle.

PROTEIN ANIMAL

Differs from vegetable protein in that it contains acids of a different character. A balanced ratibn must supply both vegetable protein and animal protein.

ASH

Generally speaking, a combination of mineral substances that enter largely into the formation of bones and feathers.

FAT VEGETABLE

Fat is the fat or oil of the material, and its office is in the production of fat and heat of the animal body.

WHY CHAMBERLAIN'S PERFECT CHICK FEED HAS ALWAYS BEEN GRANULAR

The activity of the growing chick's body is as important as its feed and care. The exercise and activity derived while scratching for CHAMBERLAIN'S PERFECT CHICK FEED in cut straw or clover means life, perfect health and development of every baby chick.

All baby chick food should be granular so as to give exercise to the chick's milling machinery, of which there are two series; first, in the crop; second, in the gizzard, to prepare the food for the digestive organs. Inactivity of the chick's milling machinery creates sourness of crop, which kills thousands of baby chicks yearly that are fed on Mash and other almost predigested foods. A sticky substance clings to the walls of the crop, becoming sour, causing the chick's whole system to become infected.

READER.—Feb. 27 is the anniversary of Longfellow's birth. The American poet was born in Portland, Me., in 1807. The centenary was celebrated in 1907. Samuel Longfellow, the Unitarian clergyman and hymn writer, was the brother of Henry Wadsworth Longfellow.

READER OF P.-D.—The Aquarium Society of St. Louis will gladly give any information regarding aquatic subjects, the raising and keeping of gold and tropical fish, etc., free of charge to anyone interested in these subjects. Meetings are held at Eagles Hall, Lafayette and Jefferson avenues, or you can communicate with the secretary of the organization.

BIRDIE.—The old verse for the bride, "something old, something new, something borrowed and something blue," does not signify one article possessing all these qualities. The "old" is usually a bit of lace or a sprig of orange blossoms from some long ago wedding in the family. The "new" is the gown, of course, and accessories. The "borrowed" may be a lace handkerchief or a pin, etc. The "blue" is usually some part of the lingerie. The verse quoted is only observed when the bride is being married in conventional bridal attire. Some showers that can be given for the bride are book showers, apron showers, canned fruits, linen, lace, aluminum, etc.

COUNTY.—The formula for silvering glass is as follows: (a) Reducing solution: In 12 ounces of water dissolve 12 grains of Rochelle salts and boil. While boiling add 16 grains of nitrate of silver, dissolved in 1 ounce of water and continue the boiling for 10 minutes more; then add water to make 12 ounces. (b) Silvering solution: Dissolve 1 ounce of nitrate of silver in 10 ounces of water; then add liquid ammonia until the brown precipitate is nearly, but not quite all, dissolved; then add 1 ounce of alcohol and sufficient water to make 12 ounces. To silver: Take equal parts of (a) and (b), mix thoroughly in flat dish, then lay the glass, face down, on the top of the mixture while wet, after it has been carefully cleaned with soda and well rinsed with clean water. Distilled water should be used for making the solutions. About 2 drams of each will silver a plate of 2 inches square. The dish in which the silvering is done should be only a little larger than the glass. The solution should stand and settle for 2 or 3 days before being used. It will keep good a long time.

LEGAL INFORMATION.

(By a Member of the St. Louis Bar Association.)

U. S. A.—Write the Bonus Commission, Jefferson City, Mo.

I.—The facts given are too indefinite to answer. Write again stating all the facts in the case.

MRS. M. H.—If he builds a new fence you cannot be compelled to pay for it.

F. O. B.—Making the article even for your own use is an infringment of the patent.

I HOPE NOT.—No, the second husband cannot be compelled to support the children unless he has agreed to do so.

ANNA S.—If your mother is mentioned by name in her father's will, she cannot break it, even though she was found later.

D. E. F.—The husband is not responsible for this note, unless the woman was acting as his agent when she signed it or unless it was given for necessaries.

MRS. J. M.—You can obtain the information desired from the Clerk in the Domestic Relations Court where the case is pending or the case should be set for trial in about two months after return term.

STEADY READER.—You cannot sue the State for this and probably you cannot sue the Reformatory officials or employes. However, you might consult a lawyer and lay all the details before him.

M. C.—The husband's stepchild will not receive any of his property when he dies, unless the stepchild has been adopted. If the husband leaves no children, half of his property will go to his second wife, and half of it to his relatives.

A. C. C.—You can write to the Secretary of State of the State in which the companies are incorporated, and find out whether they are still alive and making reports. You can also inquire of a banker or broker.

F. J. S.—You can get your clothing and papers from her. Report the facts to the police, and if that fails ask the Free Legal Aid Bureau in the Municipal Courts Building to help you. Your wife cannot collect your soldiers' bonus money.

INTEREST NOTES.—A receipt from the agent is not sufficient, but if he returns the notes, even though they are not stamped "paid," you are protected. However, it would be better to have them stamped "paid." Consult a lawyer regarding your husband and the foreclosure.

R. L. D.—We believe that as they offered to credit you with the amount charged for the rug, the best course to take, is to let them do that and to make payment of the balance as you originally agreed. It would probably not pay you to insist on having the rug replaced.

ST. M. T.—Your wife's nagging may have been bad enough to enable you to get a divorce on the ground of intolerable indignities. Whether you can get a divorce or not depends on the circumstances and our advice would be to consult a lawyer in whom you have confidence, tell him all the facts and then follow his advice.

MEDICAL QUESTIONS

Health and sanitation questions of public interest only will be considered. Diagnoses or treatment of individual cases will not be given.

WORRIED.—There is no doubt an obstruction present. You should be examined by a physician and have the obstruction removed.

W. W.—There are many kinds of growths in the nose. If unable to pay go to nose and throat clinic, 1605 South Fourteenth street.

ALE.—The fingers being used in movements to which the muscles are not accustomed will naturally stiffen for a time. The only remedy is to persist in the exercise until the muscles develop. Gentle massage may help.

CONGESTED THOUGHTS.—Your symptoms suggest a trouble in the gall bladder or appendix, although it may be in the stomach or small bowel. We think you may get benefit from Cholelith pills, 4 to be taken night and morning until at least 100 are taken. The night sweats and perspiration are no doubt due to your other trouble and will clear up with that.

C. A. D.—The previous statement was that the exact nature of the disease of the kidneys must be known not that one form did not need a diet. An examination is the first essential. This will be done free of charge at room 9, Municipal Courts Building. Ask for a chemical and bacteriological examination and send in the report on this examination. The symptoms you give might be caused by some other trouble than a disease of the kidneys.

A POOR, GRATEFUL GIRL.—We think you should see a good physician because the treatment which would be most beneficial to you is administered hypodermically. There is likely a derangement of the internal secretions. Also there seems to be a disturbance of the gall bladder, for this we suggest Cholelith Pills, 4 taken night and morning for at least the period of a month. The nose should also be treated. Taking so-called catarrh cures is at best a doubtful procedure.

In loving memory of my dear husband and father, Theodore Basse, who departed this life one year ago, Feb. 27, 1922.
Silently the shades of evening
Gather round our lonely door,
Silently they bring before us
The dear face we see no more
So often we go to his grave
Lingering there and trying to be brave,
But, oh! 'Tis hard to bear
To go away and leave him there.

Earth the barren casket keeps
Lonely hearts will ever linger
Where our dear son and brother sleeps.

Surrounded by friends we are lonesome,
In the midst of our pleasure we are blue,
Smile on our face still our heart aches,
Aching and longing for you.
There are griefs that cannot find comfort,
And wounds that cannot be healed;
Sorrows so deep in the human heart
That cannot be half revealed.

May is not dead she is just away.

In loving memory of our dear husband, father and grandfather, Adam Felck, who departed this life one year ago, Feb. 20, 1922.
You bade no one a last farewell,
Said goodby to no one.
Your loving heart had ceased to beat
Before we knew that you were gone.
We never thought that on that day
Our dear father would be called away.
For all of us you did your best
Until the angels took you home to rest.
In silence you suffered with patience
You bore till God called you home
To suffer no more.

In loving memory of my dear husband and our dear son and son-in-law and brother, Rudolph H. Ulrich, who departed this life very suddenly two years ago, March 2, 1921:
Our greatest sorrow came to us two years ago today.
Why hast thou done this, Lord, yes, why?
We do not understand today since two years have passed away.
But this we know in this we rest,
'Twas God who called and He knows best,
And while we mourn your death
A life so full of deeds of kindness and of love
Has found reward with God above.
Sadly missed by
WIFE, PARENTS, SISTERS AND BROTHERS, BERTHA S. ULRICH, WIFE (NEE KRAMER).

In sad but loving memory of Anna M. Stumpf (nee Willmers), 10 years ago, Feb. 24, our dearly beloved mother was called away; called at a time when we were old enough to show our appreciation of her motherly love, long toil, advice and care. Do what we may, we can never repay our mother. A mother, who stands for more over land, mountains, valleys or shores. Only those that have lost can tell the parting of one we loved so well.
With love we also think of our dear father, John G. Stumpf, who was called away 19 years ago, Jan. 28. Both are as dear today as when they passed away.
Tears in silence often flow
Tho' they left us long ago.

How hard it was to part with you.
Sadly missed by her
FATHER, MOTHER AND BROTHERS.

These disks greatly improve [illegible] and renew old ones. Price, four for $1. WETS AND DRYS DO A VAUDEVILLE TURN IN HOUSE

Friends and Foes of Prohibition Meet in Oratorical Encounter That Keeps Chamber in Uproar for an Hour.

REFERS TO SENATOR "DRUNK AT ROLLCALL"

Gallivan of Massachusetts Calls on "Drys Who Like a Drink and Vote as the League Tells Them to Vote."

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 24.—Foes and friends of prohibition in the House met today in an oratorical encounter which kept the membership in an uproar for the better part of an hour and apparently furnished a great deal of delight to crowded galleries.

Aroused by assaults on the Volstead act by Representative Gallivan, Democrat, and Tinkham, Republican, both of Massachusetts, Representatives Cramton, Republican, Michigan; Upshaw, Democrat, Georgia, and other "dry" leaders hit back without mincing words as their followers shouted or applauded their approval. Addresses of the Massachusetts members, and more particularly that of Gallivan, were characterized as "vaudeville stunts," and notice was given that prohibition would be enforced.

As the storm broke around them, the three "wet" leaders, Representatives Tinkham, Gallivan and Hill, Republican, Maryland, gathered together on a front row, conferring and laughing and occasionally seeking to interrupt the speakers.

"Why all this nonsense?" demanded Representative Blanton, Democrat, Texas, in closing the debate. "But for the two gentlemen from Massachusetts and the rider of the White charger from Baltimore (Hill), this House would be unanimously dry. They are three of a kind, but they could draw until eternity and never fill their hand."

Congressional Repartee.

"We'll draw a 'full house' in the next Congress," shouted Representative Hill.

"Your grandchildren will be 80 years old before you could do it," retorted Blanton.

Opening the discussion with a prepared address, Gallivan told the House that he had observed from a Washingto newspaper that the Anti-Saloon League now proposed to make Members of Congress "drink as they vote." He then announced that he would pause while "dry" members who "religiously vote as the league tells them to vote" and who "take a drink and like a drink" raise their hands.

"Why, Mr. Chairman," he said, after the pause, "all I can see around this chamber is haloes. Well, I guess we are all sober this morning (Laughter) even though a Senator got drunk the other night—a 'dry' Senator—and they had to stop him from answering a rollcall, and it took two of his colleagues to hold him."

Representative Blanton objected to such a reference to a Senator.

"I am not violating the rules of this House when I refer to 'dry' Senators getting drunk," returned Gallivan amid a roar of laughter and applause.

Language Is Withdrawn.

Blanton stood his ground, insisting on his point as a member should.

"I will say, Mr. Speaker," continued Gallivan, "that if the language with reference to the 'dry' Senator who is a friend of my friend from Texas, hurts his feelings—

"He is noot a friend of mine," shouted Blanton.

"I withdraw the language," continued Gallivan.

The Texas representative declared members of the House had no right to reflect on Senators.

"Why the gentleman from Georgia (Upshaw) a few months ago referred to half of the membership of this house as drinking rum," declared Gallivan.

This was denied later by Upshaw, who declared that the statement was not "borne out by the facts and that a thing not a fact is absolutely false."

At the suggestion of Representative Madden, Republican, Illinois, Gallivan withdraw the language to which Blanton objected and went on with his address in which he inveighed against the increasing cost of prohibition enforcement, and predicted that if the present tendency of crowding the courts with liquor cases continued as a result of the "snooping" of Federal agents, the Department of Justice would become "the pooh bah of America."

Addresses Wayne Wheeler.

As he concluded, the Massachusetts member caused a craning of necks by announcing that he would address the last paragraph of his speech "to the gentleman who sits behind the clock in the gallery, the Hon. Wayne B. Wheeler, of the Anti-Saloon League, the man who says it is lawless to agitate for the repeal of the Volstead law; I say to him that he belongs to the tribe of the Pharaoh whose tomb has just been opened at Luxor after 3000 years."

Replies by the "drys" were deferred until after Representative Tinkham had read into the Congressional Record a letter from William Dudley Foulke of the National Civil Service League, to E. Nicholson, secretary of the Anti-Saloon League, in which the charge was made th prohibition enforcement service
"corrupted from top to bottom set of depraved political offic appointed "under the spoils sy which you promoted." Foulke protesting against a Senate bill posing to place the present proh tion enforcement force under civil service, a measure which charged had the support of the ti-Saloon League.

Making the first reply for
"drys," Representative Dickin
Republican, of Iowa, declared it costing the Government "practic nothing" to enforce prohibition, cause of the fines and penalties lected from violators of the Vols act.

Representative Cramton follo with a denial that the Washin newspaper article to which Galli had refered contained any ence to the Anti-Saloon League recting an investigation aga members of Congress.

"A Vaudeville Stunt."

"It is all a part of an attempt besmirch and besmudge," he clared. "It is a case where tr does not matter; facts do not ha
cap. It is only to put on here a g vaudeville stunt. It is all right h where we know this sort of perfo ance."

"If it is necessary to get enfo ment in this country to spend m than $14,000,000 we are going to it," declared Cramton amid applau

Cramton had been recognized only two minutes and asked unan ous consent to "extend and revi his remarks in the record, but Ga van objected and he was granted more minutes.

"Thank God, I can say in minutes something—."

"No you can't," interrupted Ga van.

"That will answer the stateme of men who have spent 50 minut concluded Cramton, "in besmirch law and order and who dare not me put my facts into the record.

"Will the gentleman tell us ab
Anderson, in New York?" shou
Hill.

Remarks Applauded.

Representative Upshaw decla that if he were "as smart as Ga van is supposed to be, and could tertain people as he can, I would prostitute my eloquence, learn and time by defending the liq traffic or the saloon that is the tr
ing place of anarchy and the ga way to Hell."

Declaring that he would rat be a "wet" Congressman, vot
"dry," than a "dry" Congressm
"voting liquor on other people," R resentative Blanton said he did believe there could be found a m
"sober set of men than the memb of the Senate and House."

Joining in the debate, Repres tative Quinn, Democrat, of Mis sippi, said Gallivan need not be easy about a waste of money; t what he "ought to be uneasy abou that he is vilifying those who spect the law and causing some p ple to have contempt for the Con tution itself."

"Good boy," shouted Repres
tive Upshaw, above the din of th applause that greeted this st ment.

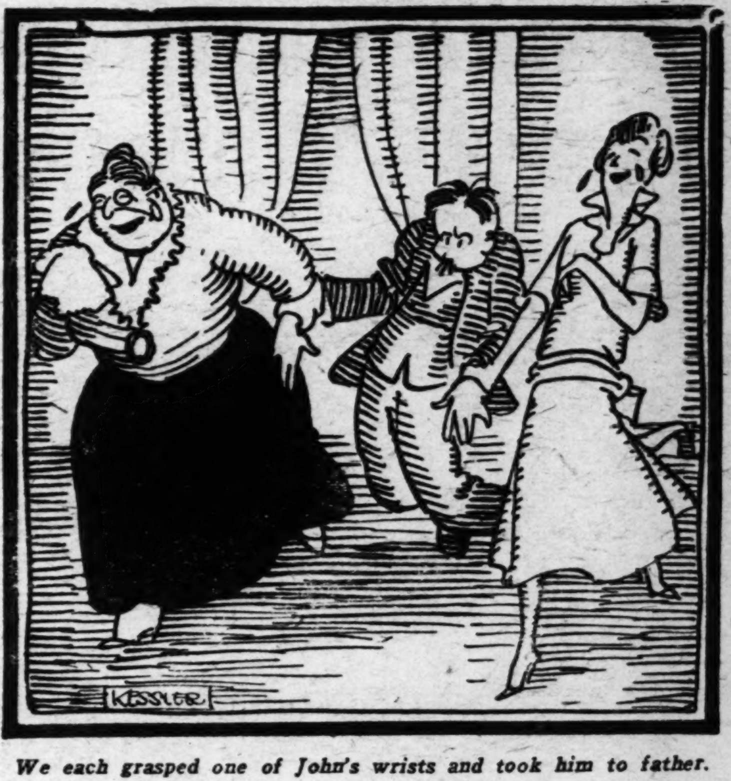
How I Nearly Lost My Husband

By Stephen Leacock



We each grasped one of John's wrists and took him to father.

IT WAS after we had been married about two years that I began to feel that I needed more air. Every time I looked at John across the breakfast table, I felt as if I must have more air, more space. I seemed to feel as if I had no room to expand. I had begun to ask myself whether I had been wise in marrying John, whether John was really sufficient for my development. I felt cramped and shut in. In spite of myself the question would arise in my mind whether John really understood my nature. He had a way of reading the newspaper, propped up against the sugar bowl, at breakfast, that somehow made me feel as if things had gone all wrong. It was bitter to realize that the time had come when John could prefer the newspaper to his wife's society.

* * * * * *

But perhaps I had better go back and tell the whole miserable story from the beginning.

I shall never forget—I suppose no woman ever does—the evening when John first spoke out his love for me. I had felt for some time past that it was there. Again and again, he seemed about to speak. But somehow his words seemed to fail him. Twice I took him into the very heart of the little wood beside mother's house, but it was only a small wood, and somehow he slipped out on the other side.

"Oh, John," I had said, "how lonely and still it seems in the wood, with no one here but ourselves. Do you think," I said, "that the birds have souls?" "I don't know," John answered, "let's get out of this." I was sure that his emotion was too strong for him. "I never feel a bit lonesome where you are, John," I said, as we made our way among the underbrush. "I think we can get out down that little gully," he answered.

Then one evening in June, after tea, I led John down a path beside the house, to a little corner behind the garden, where there was a stone wall on one side and a high fence right in front of us, and thorn bushes on the other side. There was a little bench in the angle of the wall and the fence, and we sat down on it.

"Minnie," John said, "there's something I meant to say"——

"Oh, John," I cried, and flung my arms round his neck. It all came with such a flood of surprise.

"All I mean, Minn"—— John went on, but I checked him.

"Oh, don't, John, don't say anything more," I said. "It's just too perfect." Then I rose and seized him by the wrist. "Come," I said, "come to mother," and I rushed him along the path.

As soon as mother saw us come in hand in hand in this way, she guessed everything. She threw both her arms round John's neck and fearly pinned him against the wall. John tried to speak, but mother wouldn't let him. "I saw it all along, John," she said. "Don't speak. Don't say a word. I guessed your love for Minn from the very start. I don't know what I shall do without her, John, but she's yours now; take her." Then mother began to cry and I couldn't help crying, too. "Take him to father," mother said, and we each took one of John's wrists and took him to father on the back veranda.

As soon as John saw father he tried to speak again. "I think I ought to say," he began, but mother stopped him. "Father," she said, "he wants to take our little girl away. He loves her very dearly, Alfred," she said, "and I think it our duty to let her go, no matter how hard it is, and oh! please heaven, Alfred, he'll treat her well and not misuse her or beat her," and she began to sob again.

Father got up and took John by the hand and shook it warmly. "Take her, boy," he said. "She's all yours now, take her."

* * * * * * *

So John and I were engaged and in due time our wedding day came and we were married. I remember that for days and days before the wedding day, John seemed very nervous and depressed; I think he was worrying, poor boy, as to whether he could really make me happy and whether he could fill my life as it should be filled. But I told him that he was not to worry because I meant to be happy, and was determined just to make the best of everything.

Father stayed with John a good deal before the wedding day, and on the wedding morning he went and fetched him to the church in a closed carriage and had him there all ready when we came. It was a beautiful day in September and the church looked just lovely. I had a beautiful gown of white organdy with tulle at the throat, and I carried a great bunch of white roses, and father led John up the aisle after me.

I remember that mother cried a good deal at the wedding and told John that he had stolen her darling and that he must never misuse me or beat me. And I remember that the clergyman spoke very severely to John and told him he hoped he realized the responsibility he was taking and that it was his duty to make me happy. A lot of our old friends were there and they all spoke quite sharply to John and all the women kissed me and said they hoped I would never regret what I had done, and I just kept up my spirits by sheer determination and told them that I had made up my mind to be happy and that I was going to be so.

So presently it was all over and we were driven to the station and got the afternoon train for New York, and when we sat down in the compartment among all our handboxes and flowers, John said: "Well, thank God, that's over." And I said: "Oh, John, an oath! On our wedding day, an oath!" John said: "I'm sorry, Minn, I didn't mean"—— But I said: "Don't, John, don't make it worse. Swear at me if you must, but dont make it harder to bear."

* * * * * * * *

We spent our honeymoon in New York. At first I had thought of going somewhere to the great lonely woods, where I could have walked under the trees, and felt the silence of nature, and where John should have been my Viking and captured me with his spear, and where I should be his and his alone and no other man should share me; and John had said all right.

Or else I had planned to go away somewhere to the seashore where I could have watched the great waves dashing themselves against the rocks. I had told John that he should be my cave man, and should seize me in his arms and carry me whither he would. But I looked over all the hotel and steamship folders I could find and it seemed impossible to get good accommodations, so we came to New York.

I had a great deal of shopping to do for our new house, so I could not be much with John, but I felt it was not right to neglect him, so I drove him somewhere in a taxi each morning and called for him again in the evening. One day I took him to the Metropolitan Museum, and another day I left him at the zoo, and another day at the aquarium. John seemed very happy and quiet among the fishes.

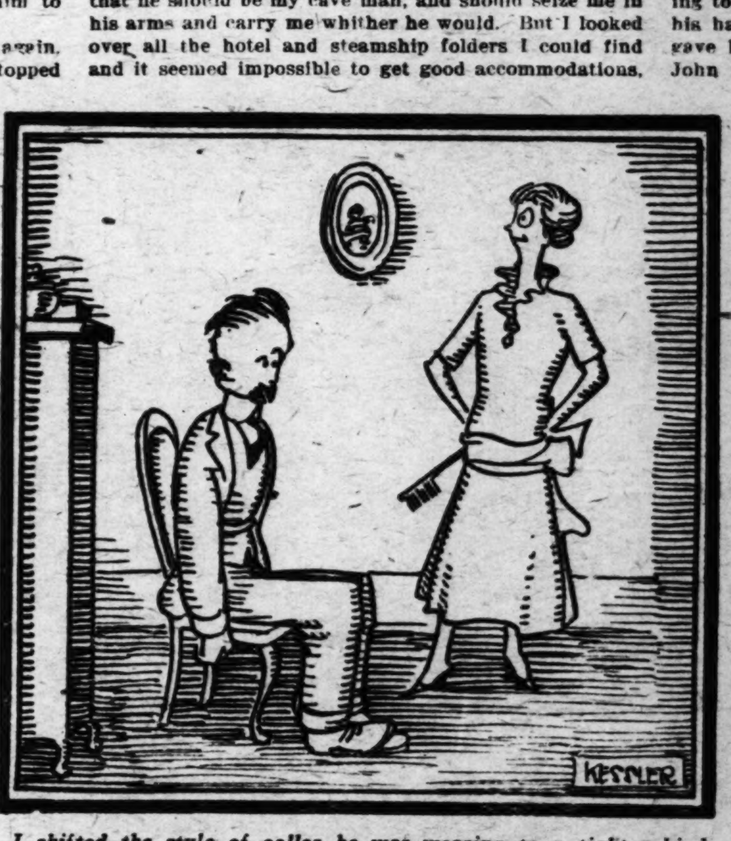
So presently we came back home and I spent many busy days in fixing and arranging our new house. I had the drawing room done in blue and the dining room all in dark paneled wood, and a boudoir upstairs done in pink and white enamel to match my bedroom and dressing room. There was a very nice little room in the basement next to the coal cellar that I turned into a "den" for John, so that when he wanted to smoke he could go down there and do it. John seemed to appreciate his den at once, and often would stay down there so long that I had to call to him to come up.

When I look back on those days they seem very bright and happy. But it was not very long before a change came. I began to realize that John was neglecting me. I noticed it at first in small things. I don't know just how long it was after our marriage that John began to read the newspaper at breakfast. At first he would only pick it up and read it in little bits and only on the front page. I tried not to be hurt at it, and would go on talking just as brightly as I could without seeming to notice anything. But presently he went on to reading the inside part of the paper, and then one day he opened up the financial page and folded the paper right back and leant it against the sugar bowl. I could not but wonder whether John's love for me was what it had been. Was it cooling? I asked myself. And what was cooling it? It hardly seemed possible when I looked back to the wild passion with which he had proposed to me on the garden bench that John's love was waning. But I kept noticing different little things. One day in the spring time I saw John getting out a lot of fishing tackle from a box and fitting it together. I asked him what he was going to do, and he said that he was going to fish. I went to my room and had a good cry. It seemed dreadful that he could neglect his wife for a few worthless fish.

So I decided to put John to the test. It had been my habit every morning after he put his coat on to go to the office to let John have one kiss, just one wee kiss, to keep him happy all day. So this day when he was getting ready I bent my head over a big bowl of flowers and pretended not to notice. I think John must have been hurt, as I heard him steal out on tiptoe.

Well I realized that things had come to a dreadful state, and so I sent over to mother and mother came and we had a good cry together. I made up my mind to force myself to face things and just to be as bright as ever I could. Mother and I both thought that things would be better if I tried all I could to make something out of John. I have always felt that every woman should make all that she can out of her husband.

So I did my best, first of all, to straighten up John's appearance. I shifted the style of collar he was wearing to a tighter kind that I liked better, and I brushed his hair straight backward instead of forward, which gave him a much more alert look. Mother said that John needed waking up, and so we did all we could to wake him up. Mother came over to stay with me a good deal, and in the evenings we generally had a little music or a game of cards.



I shifted the style of collar he was wearing to a tighter kind that I liked better and brushed his hair backward, which gave him a more alert look.

About this time another difficulty began to come into my married life, which I suppose I ought to have foreseen. I mean the attentions of other gentlemen. I have always called forth a great deal of admiration in gentlemen, but I have always done my best to act like a lady and to discourage it in every possible way. I had been innocent enough to suppose that this would end with married life, and it gave me a dreadful shock to realize that such was not the case.

The first one I noticed was a young man who came to the house, at an hour when John was out, for the purpose, so he said at least, of reading the gas meter. He looked at me in just the boldest way and asked me to show him the way to the cellar. I don't know whether it was a pretext or not, but I just summoned all the courage I had and showed him to the head of the cellar stairs. When he came up he professed to have read the meter and he left the house quite quietly. But I thought it wise to say nothing to John of what had happened.

There were others, too. There was a young man with large brown eyes who came and said he had been sent to tune the piano. He came on three separate days and he bent his ear over the keys in such a mournful way that I knew he must have fallen in love with me. Of course I told John nothing of all this.

Then there was Mr. McQueen, who came to the house several times to play cribbage with

ARE women more susceptible than men to the lure of the confidence man, the get-rich-quick swindler, the fake stock and bond salesman?

This question has been a favorite topic of discussion in many financial centers ever since the recent astounding revelations made concerning the artful wiles by which Alfred Lindsay, a tricky New York broker, obtained sums ging from $5000 to $375,000 from 10 women of high l standing on the pretense that he was to invest the y in a "blind pool" controlled by noted bankers.

Lindsay is now serving a five-to-ten-year sentence hard labor in Sing Sing Prison. If he were at lib-y to express an opinion he probably would say that n are easily swindled. But in this he would be at ance with many acknowledged authorities who have ied the psychology of fraud from every angle.

he National Vigilance Committee is making a na-wide campaign to protect legitimate advertisers eliminate the illegitimate. Edward A. Schwab, spe-l investigator for this committee, was for 15 years office inspector, known throughout the service ability in running down fraud and relentlessly cuting its perpetrators. Since taking charge of igations for the Vigilance Committee he has made y of thousands of fraud cases. This is the con-n he has reached:

"t is the offhand conclusion of the average person woman is more easily duped than man, because her narrower business experience. But is this so? tell the truth, I don't think it is. Men are swin-more often than women.

"he way I defend men is to call them better sports. to be some excuse for 'em, you know. They're daring; they often go into a scheme that they is dubious, but they think, 'Oh, well, all in a —maybe it'll leave me rich and maybe it'll leave , its 50-50, but I'm going to play the game, any-

But, the reason, I don't think they do. My ob-would lead me to believe that they are no fleeced than men. The difference lies not so in man versus woman as in the kind of swindle catches them in a weak spot."

he fake merchandise scheme is the prime trap for ," said Hugh Smith, secretary of the committee, this a bit. "This operates on the basis of sums, but they mount up to mighty large swindles sometimes. Often the rascals make a house-to-house canvass, and get a little at every stop. They may sell on the dollar-down-dollar-a-week plan, or they may take full cash outright for some piece of merchandise that is worthless when it arrives or maybe never arrives at all.

"Our organization reported an approximate sum of over $600,000,000 that promoters of spurious stocks mulcted the public for during the last year. Oil promotions were the most profitable for the swindlers, one scheme alone, that of reorganizing defunct concerns, costing the victims over $30,000,000. And this is merely stocks, you see; if one could make an estimate on all frauds, including the merchandise I spoke of, it would run up so far that I wouldn't dare guess."

These authorities state that women "fall for oil" very frequently, but far less for bogus mining stocks. Perhaps mines seem more mysterious and remote than other investments, and they leave them to men, who, they assume, understand them better.

Mrs. Lillian N. Duke, widow, who lost more than $300,000 through investments in "a secret blind pool."

The manager of a New York bank agrees with these others, that women are no more easily duped than men. But whereas these members of the National Vigilance Committee divide victims on a basis of the kind of investment, this bank manager divides them on the basis of temperament.

"It's a question of the nature of the creature, I should say. A lamb's a lamb, whether it wears trousers or petticoats. Some people are naturally gullible, and that's all there is about it, whether man or woman. They simply can't let a fool offer to get rich quick get past them. They have to fall for it. GREATEST EXPLOITS OF CELEBRATED DETECTI

IX—The Remade Man.

By WILLIAM NELSON TAFT.

"DID you ever hear of the Port of Missing Men?" Bill Quinn inquired one evening after dinner as we strolled in the direction of the room in which he invariably went for his postprandial pipe—the room in which every ornament and even every scrap of furniture was a relic of some famous criminal case.

"Yes," I answered, "that was the name of a novel somebody wrote a number of years ago, wasn't it?"

Quinn chuckled amusedly as he replied: "I believe it was, but that doesn't happen to be the one I have in mind. I mean another Port of Missing Men—a real one this time, one that has no connection with fiction save for the fact that a good many of the cases that have come out of there have been more startling than anything a novelist would dare to place before his public."

We were seated by this time and scenting a story, and feeling that Quinn was only awaiting the opportunity to lead up to the recital of events that lay behind one of the many relics with which the room was filled, I tried to stimulate the retired secret service man's story-telling faculty by saying:

"Where is this port that you speak of? Any connection with a seaport?"

"Only that this particular one happens to be located in one of the biggest seaports in the world," was Quinn's reply. "It's part of the police headquarters of New York City down in the lower part of the metropolis where you might naturally expect to run into seafaring men. But sailors haven't a thing to do with it, save for the fact that they have figured in a good many of the cases that are docketed there.

"The official title of the Port of Missing Men is the Bureau of Missing Persons, and through it flows a continuous stream of names of men, women and children who have disappeared while within the jurisdiction of the New York police. And the list of these isn't confined to New York by any means. Inquiries come from as far east as Petrograd and from as far west as Shanghai—or is Shanghai so far west that it is really east, after all?—and every one of them is phrased in practically the same words: 'Can you secure any information about So and So, who is supposed to have been in New York between such and such dates?'

"The amazing part of it is that, in the majority of cases, the New York police in general and the men attached to the Bureau of Missing Persons in Particular are usually able to dig up the requested information. Sometimes, as in the case of Dorothy Arnold and a few others of this type, they fail dismally and a hue and cry about the inefficiency of the police force invariably follows, for the public is always ready to forget 99 successes when one failure occurs.

"It was into the Bureau of Missing Persons that Pietro came one day in a rather peculiar way. That's Pietro up there," and Quinn broke off suddenly to point toward a shelf on which, amid a clutter of unrelated articles, there reposed the skull of a man with a clean-cut gash in the bone just behind the forehead. The place where the eyes ought to have been appeared to gain intensity of expression by reason of the vacancy in the whitened bone that surrounded them, while the jaw appeared to present an exaggerated air of determination, probably by reason of the fact that the nose was so conspicuously absent.

Interested, I crossed the room and picked up the skull, only to find to my surprise that it was a plaster cast and Quinn, noting my expression of astonishment, said: "Yes, that isn't really Pietro, but it is his exact duplicate. The original is still in the museum of the Bureau of Missing Persons, for it played a leading role in the trial of the man who—— But suppose we start at the beginning.

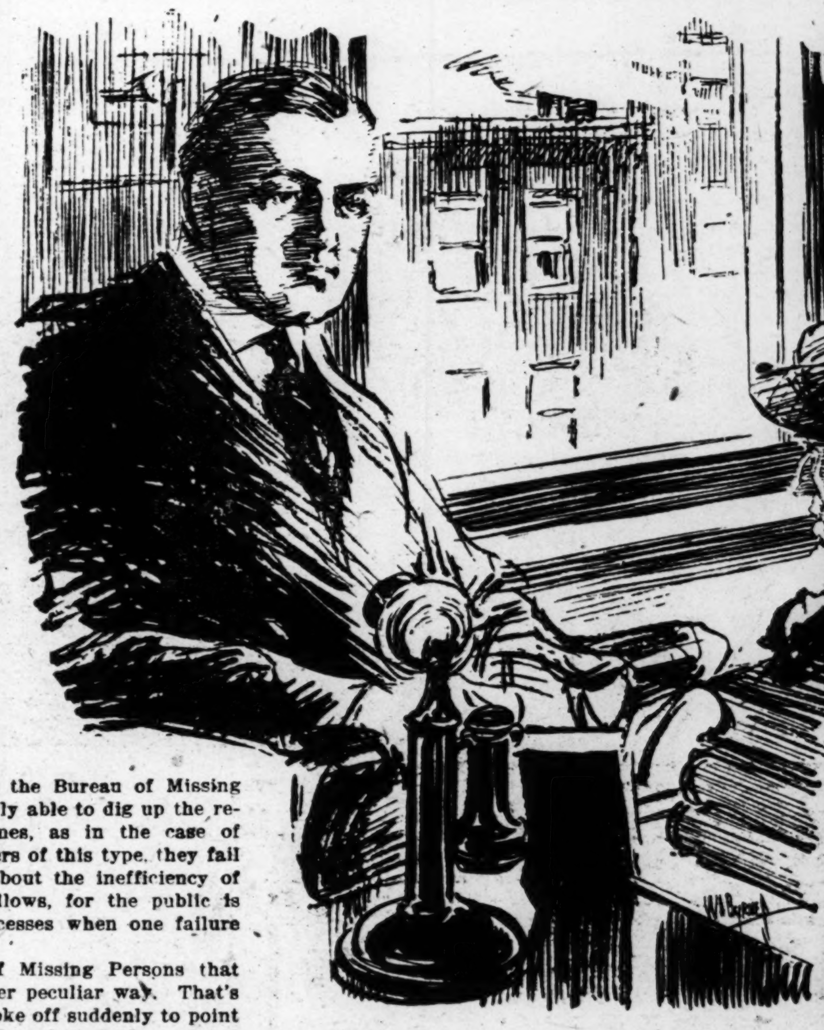
* * * * * * * *

It was about five years ago that some workmen were excavating a portion of what now forms a part of the foundations for the Coney Island elevated, when they came across the skeleton of a man which had evidently been buried there some months before. There was nothing whatever that would lead to the identification of the body, for the clothing which had been worn had rotted away, save for a few strands of the knitted silk necktie, and there was no jewelry to serve as a clew. The flesh had, of course, long since fallen away from the bone, but a gaping wound in the skull bore mute testimony to the fact that a murder had been committed and that the body of the victim had been buried, presumably to hide all traces of the crime.

The police were notified of the finding of the skeleton, but the men assigned to the case paid little attention to it because of the fact that there was obviously so little to follow. The skeleton was that of a man. Death had almost certainly been due to a wound delivered by a hatchet or some other sharp-edged instrument. This much was certain. But beyond this there was nothing left but conjecture and, as one of the policemen said: "Even Sherlock Holmes himself would have his hands full finding out who this guy was and who bumped him off."

But, without the aid of a single additional lead and without the assistance of anything save the skull itself, the mystery was finally solved—not by Sherlock Holmes or any other detective from the pages of fiction, but by Capt. Grant Williams, in charge of the Bureau of Missing Persons.

Capt. Williams gave orders that the skull be sent to police headquarters, where it was carefully examined, with the hope that the fillings in the teeth might give some clew as to the identity of the dead man. But, beyond the fact that these fillings were of a very cheap grade, there was nothing to be gained from this end. It was probable, of course, that the man belonged to one of the lower layers of life and, while this served to take the case out of the realms of the sensational as far as the identity of the victim was concerned, it told but little that could be considered valuable, for the records of the bureau contained the names of scores of men who had disappeared within the past few months. The skull might have been that of any one of them. But which? This question it appeared impossible to answer.



With the cap adjusted at the usual angle, the skull assumed an amazing appearance of life.

The more Capt. Williams examined the skull the more he felt that back of it there lay a mystery that could be solved provided one attacked it in the proper manner. Murder had been committed and justice demanded that the murderers be punished. But to do this it was essential that the identity of the skeleton be determined and Capt. Williams applied himself to this apparently impossible task with the grim determination which has always marked his movements.

Waiting until the office had officially closed for the day—although the bureau as a whole never ceases to watch over the lost and strayed of the big city—Capt. Williams launched an experiment which had been in his mind for some time past, the rebuilding of a human head upon the foundation of the fleshless skull. Taking some putty of the kind that is used by comedians to construct false noses and build up other portions of the face, Williams began to work upon the skull, trying to visualize the features of the dead man as they would have appeared in the flesh. Such a thing had never so far as he knew, been attempted before and experts in anatomy whom he consulted had told the Chief of the Bureau of Missing Persons that his idea was absurd and his chance for success absolutely negligible.

"How can you expect to find any traces of the features of the dead man in the cold, white bone of the skull?" one of them had asked him. "And, more than that, you must remember that it is not only the features of a man that determine his facial appearance, but his expression as well. It would be a simple matter to build up a face upon the skull you have—but it would be almost impossible to construct upon it the face that ought to be there. The most that the bones can tell you is whether the dead man was of negro or Caucasian type. Once you have determined this—and I understand from what you have told me that he belonged to the latter class—you have located about all you can look for. So if you don't want to waste your time you had better let the matter drop."

But Capt. Williams didn't cease his efforts to accomplish the impossible nor did he waste his time—as events finally showed.

Using the plastic puttylike substance in the same way that a sculptor would use clay in making the model of a statue, Capt. Williams began to work, first upon the nose of the skull, measuring the bones carefully, and, with the aid of a number of works on anatomy, completed a structure which seemed to indicate that the dead man had had either a Roman or a Jewish type of nose. Either was in the realm of possibility, but Capt. Williams inclined to the former because of the fact that there were very few Jews living in the neighborhood where the skeleton had been found, while there were a number of Italians and Greeks there.

What hair remained on the skull was of very little assistance in providing an adequate answer of the nationality of the dead man. What there was of it, however, was almost black, and hence could be used to support either the theory of Jewish or Italian extraction. But Williams felt that he would be a good deal nearer the solution of his problem if he covered the skull with a thick coat of black hair, especially since a man of the class indicated by the teeth of the skull seldom grows bald.

The museum of the Bureau of Missing Persons provided the necessary black wig, which Williams purposely ruffled up and placed upon the skull in such a way that it could be easily brushed in any manner. That, together with the partially constructed nose, began to give the bony structure at least the semblance of humanity and the bureau chief commenced to feel that his task was not so impossible after all. He might not be able to build up an exact replica of the dead man, but something seemed to tell him that he could construct a death mask that would be sufficiently close to the original to permit of identification—or at least of narrowing the field down to several persons whose names appeared upon the list of the missing.

The more he regarded the skull, especially in its original state, the more Williams was convinced of the fact that the live man had possessed an extremely high forehead and, as a corollary, that his hair had probably grown well back from his temples, which would account for the fringe which still adhered to the bone at the rear of the head, while the upper portion of the skull was bare. A deft arrangement of the wig and a few motions with a stiff brush gave a startlingly lifelike appearance to the hair, especially when this was brushed away from around the portion above each of the eyes.

"But it's the eyes that interest me," Williams muttered, as he finally settled the wig into place in just the position he desired. "They are, after all, a clew to the whole face. If I could only get them I would have something definite to work on."

Suddenly it occurred to him that right around the corner from police headquarters, on Center street, there was a shop run by a queer character who specialized in the making of artificial eyes. Capt. Williams knew that the man in question lived over his store, and it was the work of only a few moments to rout him out of bed with the request he be permitted to borrow several sets from the very lifelike collection that adorned the counter of the store. Bearing in mind the dark color of the hair, Williams selected several pairs of dark brown eyes of varying shapes and sizes. One ese fitted precisely into the empty eyepits of the ll and there Williams fixed them with a little more he same putty from which the nose had been con- ucted.

hen he stepped back to get the entire effect he s frankly startled. The upper portion of the face ed almost alive, save for the fact that the dead ness of the forehead provided a marked contrast he blue-black sheen of the hair. Possibly he was y building up a figure of his own imagination, but iams felt that back of his efforts there lay the real er to the identity of the fleshless skull and then, rn, the solution of the mystery as to how and at e hands the man had come to his death.

t there's no chance of making the thing lifelike out completing the lower portion of the face," Wil- s muttered.

lancing around, his eyes fell upon the fragment of necktie that had been all that remained of the hing which the corpse had worn. This was a plain k tie of knitted silk and inferior quality, a tie hich thousands of duplicates may be seen every day n laborers or working men of the lower strata and, dentally, a tie such as is worn by a large number policemen while lounging around headquarters. It s a simple matter, therefore, to get hold of one of e and with the aid of a detachable soft collar, Wil- s draped it around the base of the skull in such a er that the knot fell into its proper place and htened the rapidly growing humanness of the face.

e lips and cheeks of the dead man worried Wil- not a little, but, still working upon the theory the victim had been of Italian extraction, the f of the bureau finally succeeded in building up the nder of the face to a point that satisfied him and , as a finishing touch, he decided that the remade needed a hat or a cap of some sort in order to lete his appearance, for the skeleton had been in a rather lonely part of the country and it 't at all probable that the man had gone there eaded.

e museum at police headquarters was again pressed service and after trying several different types of ear on over the black wig, Williams decided that and distinctly worn gray cap would probably have best suited to the type of man he had in mind. this adjusted at the usual angle, the skull as- d an amazing appearance of life and Capt. Wil- smiled grimly as he glanced out the window and at the sun was rising. He had labored more than urs at his work and it was more than likely that ad wasted every minute of the time.

ayhow," he growled, as he slipped into his coat aratory to going home for an hour or so of sleep, made a mighty good support for a cap. Whether anything more remains to be seen."

he resolutely put the entire matter out of his until after he had sufficient time to recover from labors of the night.

at afternoon Capt. Williams gave orders that the be photographed both with and without the cap with several rearrangements of the hair. Each of photographs was astonishingly natural, for the skull purposely been placed in a rather dim light, which down the artificial whiteness of the bare bone threw some valuable shadows across the places the putty lines were apparent in the original. armed with sets of these photographs, Williams several of his assistants started for the farm on the skeleton had been found.

, as they expected from reports of the neighborhood made by a man who had previously investi- it, they located several Italian families who d upon truck gardens in the vicinity. But mem- of the colony to whom Williams showed the pic- failed to register any familiarity with the face and the Chief of the Bureau of Missing Persons was almost to the point of believing that he had wasted a full night's time when he chanced upon a young Italian who was crossing a field on his way home from work.

Going up to him, Capt. Williams displayed one of the pictures with his usual request for information as to whether the photograph resembled anyone he had ever seen before. To his amazement, the man started, went as white as though he had seen a ghost and then commenced volubly to disclaim any knowledge of the possessor of the face. But Williams, noting that his emotion had followed the display of the photograph in which the remade man was shown wearing a cap, felt that he was on the right track at least, and, with an apology for bothering the Italian, he started off across the field. Once out of sight, however, he called two of his men and gave explicit instructions that the Italian was to be closely shadowed and that a full report of his actions was to be made at headquarters upon the following morning.

The remainder of the day brought forth little of consequence and the record of the young Italian's actions contained nothing that was the least suspicious. Day after day passed until, by the end of the week, Williams found himself with nothing more than a set of half a dozen pictures which might or might not bear the slightest likeness to the man in whom he was interested, and the fact that an Italian who had looked at one of these photographs had seemed to be visibly startled by it.

"Of course," as Williams admitted to one of his men, "the picture may have borne some resemblance to a man whom the wop had known years ago. Or possibly it looked like a dead member of his family. But, as that's the only thing we have to go on, we've got to follow it up for all it's worth. Find out everything you can about the past history of the Italian—when he came to this country, whom he has worked for, who his friends are and, above all, what women he has been seen with. A crime of this kind usually has a woman in it somewhere, and the sooner we can find her the quicker we will know whether we are on the right track."

An investigation of this kind naturally took time, and it was more than a month before Capt. Williams found on his desk a complete report of the past life of the man who was known as Luigi Polo. The list of his associates included a score of men and half as many women, from only one of whom had the police been able to secure any information that seemed to be valuable.

The exception was a woman by the name of Maria Rossa, who had not only admitted her friendship for Luigi, but who, Williams noted with interest, had a brother who had disappeared about two years previously!

THE stories in this series deal with the exploits of 12 world-famous detectives, presented in narrative form, but with all the details of their solutions of baffling crimes precisely as they occurred. They are built around the experiences of such men as William J. Burns, Chief of the United States Secret Service; Supt. John Shore and Inspector Kendall of Scotland Yard; Capt. Grant Williams, Chief of the Bureau of Missing Persons of the New York police; George S. Dougherty, Deputy Commissioner of Police in New York; Inspector Byrnes and Dr. Balthazard, the famous European criminologist. Through the entire series runs the vein of serial interest supplied by the reminiscences of Bill Quinn, lately of the United States Secret Service, who tells these stories in his den.

Hardly daring to hope that his investigations were about to be crowned with success, the Chief of the Bureau of Missing Persons went immediately to the house of the Rossa woman and interviewed her at length. When he emerged from the house there was something akin to a gleam of triumph in his eyes, while around his mouth there played a smile of intense satisfaction.

On the following morning, at an hour which had been predetermined by Williams himself, a policeman entered the Chief's office with the information that the man he wanted was outside.

"Has the woman arrived yet?" Williams asked.

"She has been here for an hour," was the reply, "but we kept her in a separate room, where it was certain she would not be seen when this man came in."

"All right, show the woman in first," Williams ordered, "and then when I give you the signal open the door and shove the Italian in. Guess you better stand pretty close behind him, for it's more than likely that there may be trouble."

When the Rossa woman entered Capt. Williams' office she was barely able to repress an exclamation of astonishment, for there, mounted upon a stand in such a way that the head appeared to be at the usual height above the floor while the place where the body would have been was swathed in a neutral-colored cloth, she thought she saw the head of her missing brother.

"Don't be frightened," Williams told her. "This is only a dummy that we've made up to serve certain purposes of our own. I want you to stand over at the side of the office there and don't utter a sound, no matter what takes place. But I feel that you are entitled to be present during the next few moments, if you care to see the man who killed your brother brought to justice. Do you?"

The woman's look was a sufficient answer. Stark hate gleamed from her eyes and she nodded understandingly as she took up her position at the place Williams indicated. Without a word the Chief turned out all the lights except one which had been especially prepared for the occasion. This, a spotlight hung in the center of the ceiling, threw an almost blinding glare upon the refaced skull immediately below it, bringing out the features with startling distinctness and producing an appearance of life that was little short of amazing. A moment later the muffled sound of a buzzer was heard from the outer room and the door of the Chief's office opened to admit the young Italian, closely followed by one of the police officials. At the moment he gave the signal for the suspect to be brought in Capt. Williams had extinguished the spotlight, leaving the entire room in total darkness. The instant the door closed, however, he switched the spotlight on again and there was a cry of amazement from the man who had just come in.

"Pietro!" he shrieked. "My God, Pietro! I thought you were"——

But here he gripped himself as though he had sud-

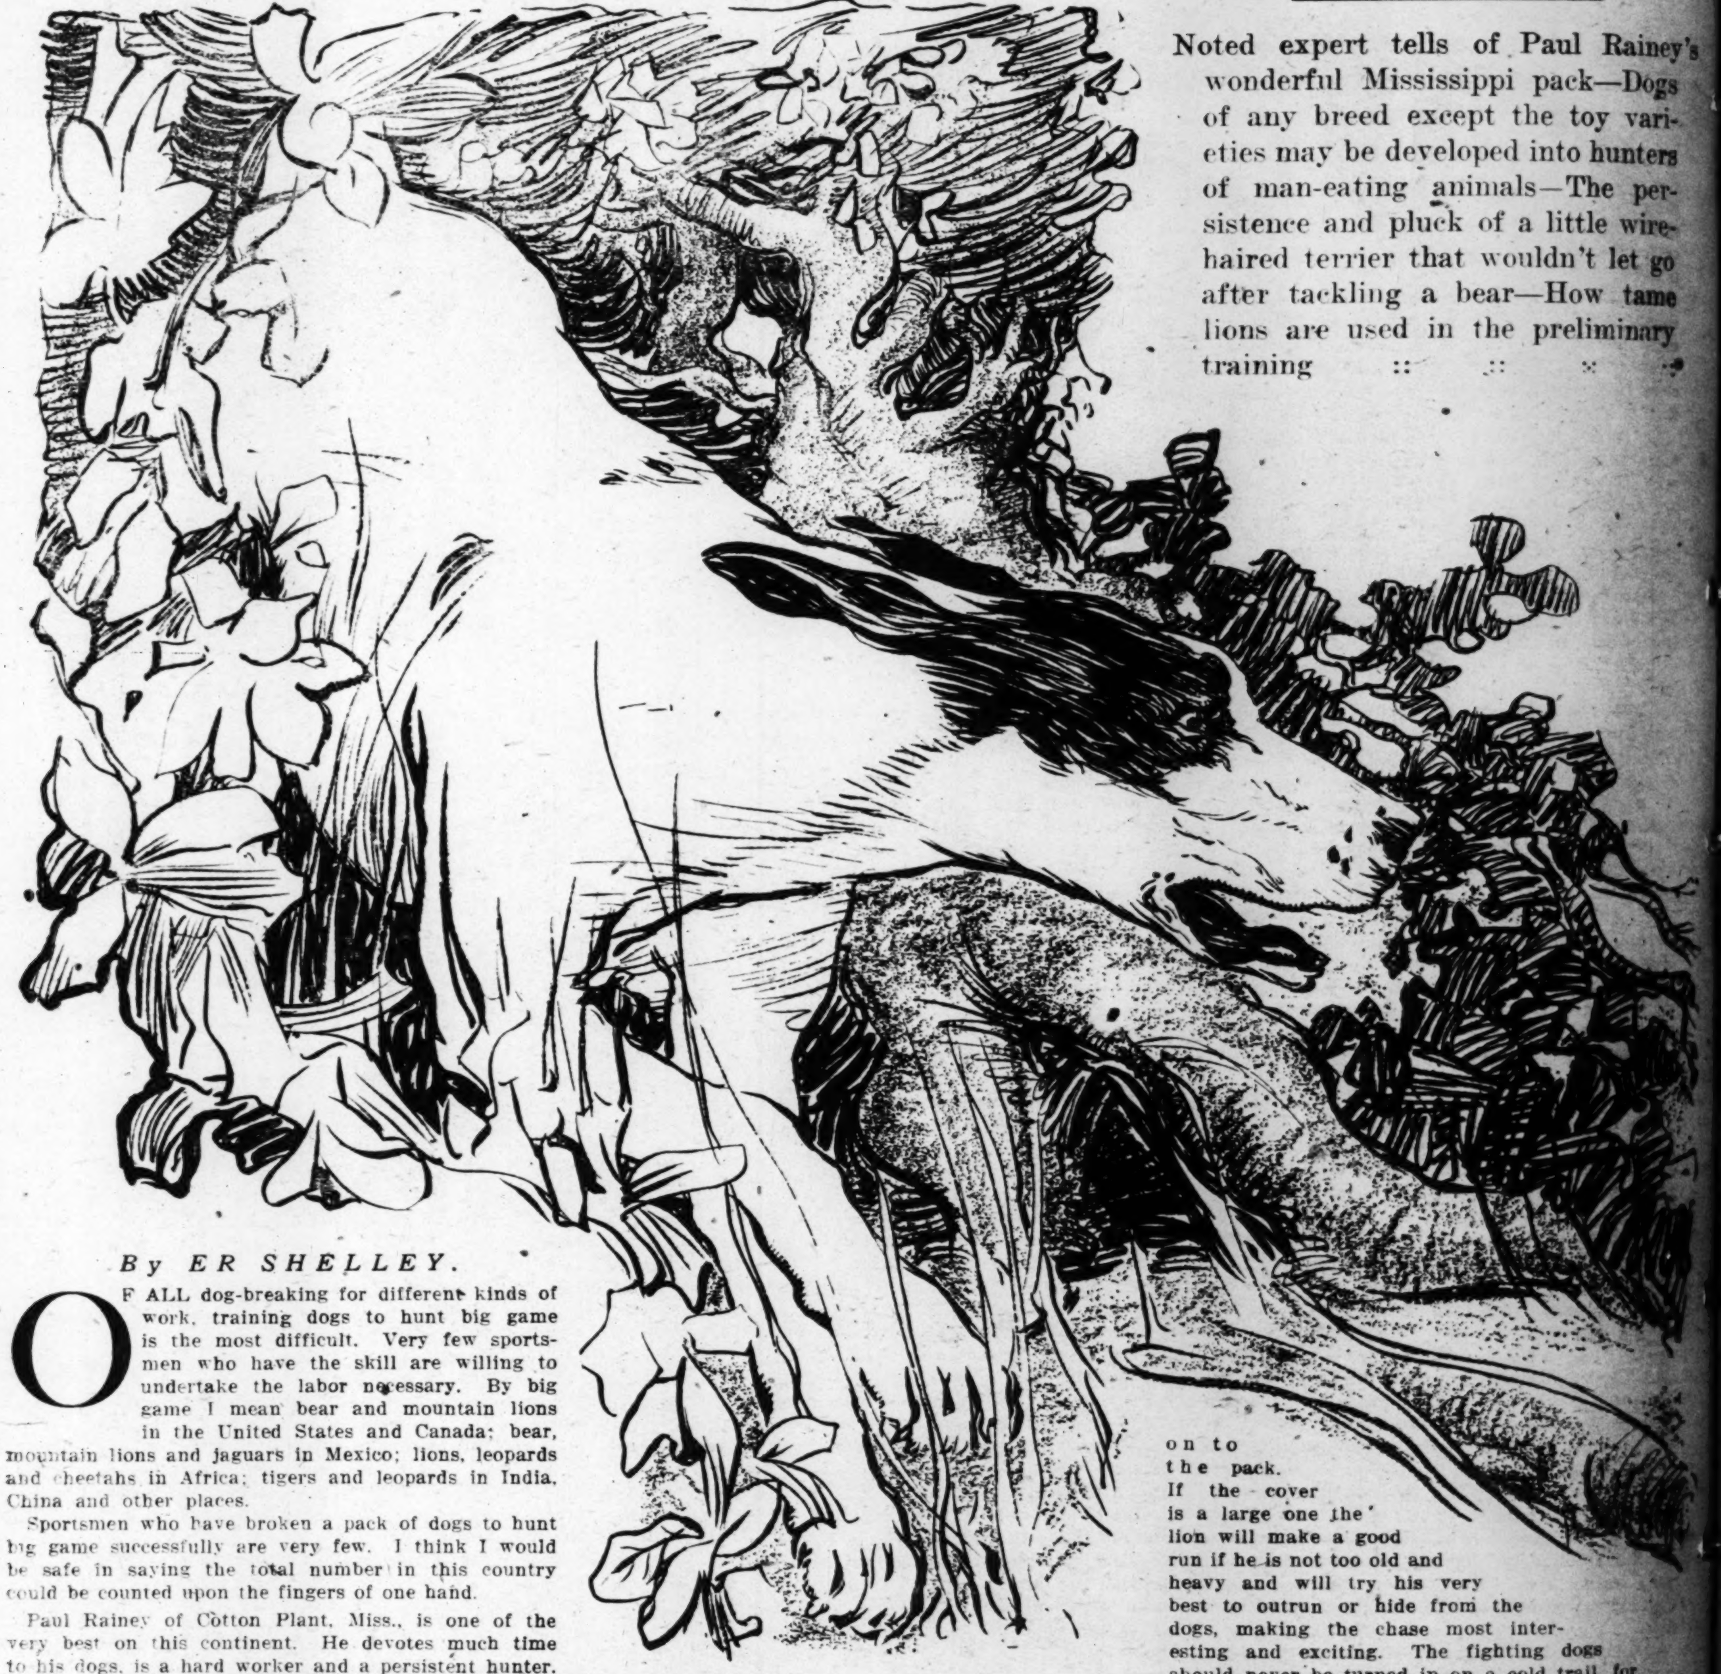
How American Dogs are Trained

Noted expert tells of Paul Rainey's wonderful Mississippi pack—Dogs of any breed except the toy varieties may be developed into hunters of man-eating animals—The persistence and pluck of a little wire-haired terrier that wouldn't let go after tackling a bear—How tame lions are used in the preliminary training :: :: :: ::



By ER SHELLEY.

OF ALL dog-breaking for different kinds of work, training dogs to hunt big game is the most difficult. Very few sportsmen who have the skill are willing to undertake the labor necessary. By big game I mean bear and mountain lions in the United States and Canada; bear, mountain lions and jaguars in Mexico; lions, leopards and cheetahs in Africa; tigers and leopards in India, China and other places.

Sportsmen who have broken a pack of dogs to hunt big game successfully are very few. I think I would be safe in saying the total number in this country could be counted upon the fingers of one hand.

Paul Rainey of Cotton Plant, Miss., is one of the very best on this continent. He devotes much time to his dogs, is a hard worker and a persistent hunter. His dogs are given every advantage possible and he always has a good pack. At the present time there is no doubt about his having the best pack of big-game dogs in America.

Mr. Rainey was the only sportsman to train dogs to hunt lions in Africa successfully, although it has been tried many times before and since his African hunt.

There are a few who have had dogs of the fighting type, such as airedales or South African boar hounds, which would go in and bark at a lion in his lair and either bay or drive him out to where a shot could be had, and which has also been used to a good advantage in driving out in dongas.

A donga may be a water course during the rainy season, but is mostly dry, with occasional pools of water, in the dry season. There are always trees and clumps of thick bushes along the dongas, offering a cover and hiding place for animals, and the ones to take advantage of these places are mostly carnivorous.

Fighting dogs of different breeds have been used with good results in working out places of this kind. When it comes to hound work—laying dogs on a lion's trail where he has passed perhaps several hours before—there is a different class of hunting and no dogs have ever done this work successfully except those that belonged to Mr. Rainey.

The hounds must, first of all, be trained to pick up the lion's track and trail it away, paying no attention to the hyenas and jackals which surround the remains of his meat when the start is usually made—and no attention to any other trail.

The lion lies up for the day from one to 10 miles from his kill. The hunters must be well mounted and keep in sight or hearing of the hounds.

The trail often leads through hundreds of head of game, such as gazelle, antelope and zebra. The hounds must be trained to pay no more attention to any of these than they would to as many cattle.

I have seen buck, startled by a horseman, make a wild rush for the plains or cover, run straight toward the pack of trailing hounds, and on account of high grass not see them until only a few feet away, and then jump clear over the trailing dogs without affecting them in the least.

In this class of hunting the fighting dogs can never be turned in with the trailing hounds. They should be in charge of strong native boys, who follow the trailing hounds with the fighting dogs in leash. I recounted in a previous article the heroism of one of these boys, who let two dogs lead him right up to a lion, refusing to release the leash because he had been instructed to hang on until told to free them.

Some of these boys are able to run so fast that they can keep in sight or hearing of the hounds and hunters for several miles. If the lions go a long distance before lying up for the day, one of the hunters usually rides a little behind to keep the boys coming in the right direction.

When the lion is jumped the signal is given and the boys turn in the fight dogs. Whoever has remained behind directing the boys, now starts in a gallop towards the hounds and the fighting dogs following behind.

As soon as the fighters can hear the hounds the horseman stops his horse and allows them to pass on to the pack. If the cover is a large one the lion will make a good run if he is not too old and heavy and will try his very best to outrun or hide from the dogs, making the chase most interesting and exciting. The fighting dogs should never be turned in on a cold trail, for the chances are that they will break up the hunt in a very short time. They cannot make out the cold scent and are continuously running out in front, carrying the hounds off the trail.

They run along continually on the watch to see what it is the hounds are after and will invariably break out after the first thing they see move, carrying the hounds with them. No dog can be used for this work except steady, cold trailing hounds.

All others must be kept on lead until the game has been jumped. They can then be turned in and do good useful work in barking and baying the game, helping out the hounds and relieving them of much hard work.

It is much easier to train dogs on lions in Africa than for bear hunting in the United States. The reason is that there are thousands of gazelle, buck and antelope of different kinds in Africa, making it far less difficult to break the dogs from running them, than would be the case if they were scarce as deer in this country. For this work the trainer will need at least two assistants that are good horsemen, and they should be well mounted.

The first thing is to break the dogs so they will pay no more attention to any kind of buck than they would to as many cattle.

The trainer rides along with a few dogs at heel, allowing two or three to cast out and hunt, the assistants riding wide, one on each side. The dogs are allowed to range out and hunt, and if any of them starts trailing a buck or goes after one in a sight race, the assistant on that side must ride him down and turn him back to the trainer.

The trainer should blow his horn to help the dog to locate him and the assistant should ride close behind, cracking his whip, until the dog has reached the trainer.

This must be kept up until all of the dogs will range out among game without chasing any of it.

Then the pet lions will come into use. The best way is to make a cage with iron bars for the front, draw the cage with the lions in it to the place you wish to start, unload the lions and draw the empty crate three or four miles, as the case may be to where the chase is to end.

The lions are led around where game is the thickest, a couple of boys with arms full of white flags follow along behind the lions, sticking the flags at intervals of every 30 or 40 yards. The lions are led around as close as possible to all of the bunches of game and finally wind up at the empty crate.

The hounds are laid on, the trainer riding behind the dogs on the trail and one assistant well out on either side. The white flags are plainly to be seen and if any dog runs out of line with the flags it is known at once that he is running something he should not and the assistant on that side drives him back in with the dogs that are running along the line of flags.

When the dogs find the lions in the cage they should be allowed to fight them through the bars and get in close touch with the game they are expected to hunt.

There are individuals of all breeds of hounds that make good lion or bear dogs. One of the best lion dogs I saw in Africa was a pure-bred Trigg foxhound, and probably the best bear dogs I ever saw in America were the same breed. But thoroughbred foxhounds are, as a rule, hard to handle and hard to break. Many of them require a tremendous amount of work to stop them from running buck in Africa or deer in America.

However, in the main, foxhounds are to be classed as one of the best breeds. The old redbone, bloodhound, or potlicker are all good breeds for big game, and the easiest to break. Of course, as in the case with all hunting dogs, certain individuals show marked superiority over others of the same breed.

A good 'coon or opossum hound will, as a rule, make a good bear or lion dog and a dog broken on 'coon and opossum will require less training than any other dog. A good one is usually immune from running anything else and has only to be transferred on to big game and he is a good big-game dog at once.

Good individual fighting dogs are found in nearly every breed. The only breeds not capable of producing a good fighting dog are those of the toy type. These are too small to stand rugged work and keep in the chase.

There are also a few breeds that are too large and clumsy. A big dog is always a mark for a bear or lion and will get caught at once, unless especially quick on his feet.

There is probably a larger percentage of good dogs to be found among airedales than any other one breed, yet it is surprising to note what a very small percentage of this, the best breed, is able to qualify as a first-class fighting dog.

The percentage of good airedales, or any other breed, for that matter, could be made much greater if they were used as hunting dogs. Unfortunately, only a very few ever have an opportunity to hunt. They are now bred largely for show purposes, pets and watch dogs and the best hunters are not always used to breed from.

Collies would make wonderful big-game dogs if bred for that purpose. The ordinary country shepherds make splendid fighting dogs. The percentage of good ones among this breed comes very near equaling the airedales. We tried seven or eight of these dogs in Africa that were picked up on different farms in Southern Illinois, and every one of them made good.

I picked up a small white shepherd in a mining town near Steamboat Springs, Colo., in July, 1919. He was first put in with the dogs and trained on a tame bear, and in September of the same year was entered into the Rainey pack and started in actual hunting. As soon as the first bear was killed we noticed this dog go to one side and lie down. We thought by his actions that he had been injured, but soon found that he was simply exhausted. Scott Teague saw the pack fighting the bear and said that Diamond (the white shepherd's name), in the minute or two that he saw them, fought the bear close in from different sides and once or twice jumped clear over the bear's back.

J. M. Avent had an extra good fighting dog that was caught in a steel trap. He grew up wild in the Forked Deer bottom. One of the best fighters I ever saw was a greyhound. On more than one occasion I have seen him just a few feet in front of a running lion, barking back at him over his shoulder.

Although a greyhound's nose is not supposed to be very good, I have seen this dog lead the pack by 50 to 200 yards, while we were training on pet lions at Nairobi.

He would run the trail at top speed, and I never saw him overrun it. Another good one was a black English imported retriever. No one ever saw a gamer or faster fighter. The best small dog I ever saw was an imported wire-haired fox terrier. To show the gameness of this little dog, I will mention an incident that happened at the Tom James annual bear hunt in the canebrakes of the Tallahatchie in 1917. Avent was hunting his pack and I was handling the pack that belonged to Mr Rainey. Avent jumped a bear. The Avent pack and the 30 dogs of the Rainey pack were turned in and the bear did not get far when he was shot by Thomas McHenry.

Clyde Morton, who was assisting me, happened to be much nearer to where the bear was killed than I was, so I shouted to him to hurry to the spot and see if all of our dogs were there.

When I arrived some few minutes later, he informed me they were all there but Fannie and Frisco. The latter was a wire-haired terrier.

As we stood looking at the bear, the dogs were still barking and tugging at him. One of the party said: "I wonder if the bullet went clear through him?" So we rolled the bear over and there was Frisco underneath, hanging to the side of the bear shaking and growling fiercely. He was so close alongside of the bear when it was shot that the bear fell on top of him and the game little dog grabbed hold and hung on to him. Evidently he seemed to think that he was holding the bear down for the other dogs to kill.

Many good fighting dogs may be found among cur dogs and other breeds not mentioned, but as a rule none of them can be depended upon to be turned loose and hunt, but must be kept at heel until the trail is very hot, or, better, until after the game has been jumped by the hounds. They may then be turned in and are of great assistance in bringing the game to bay or tree.

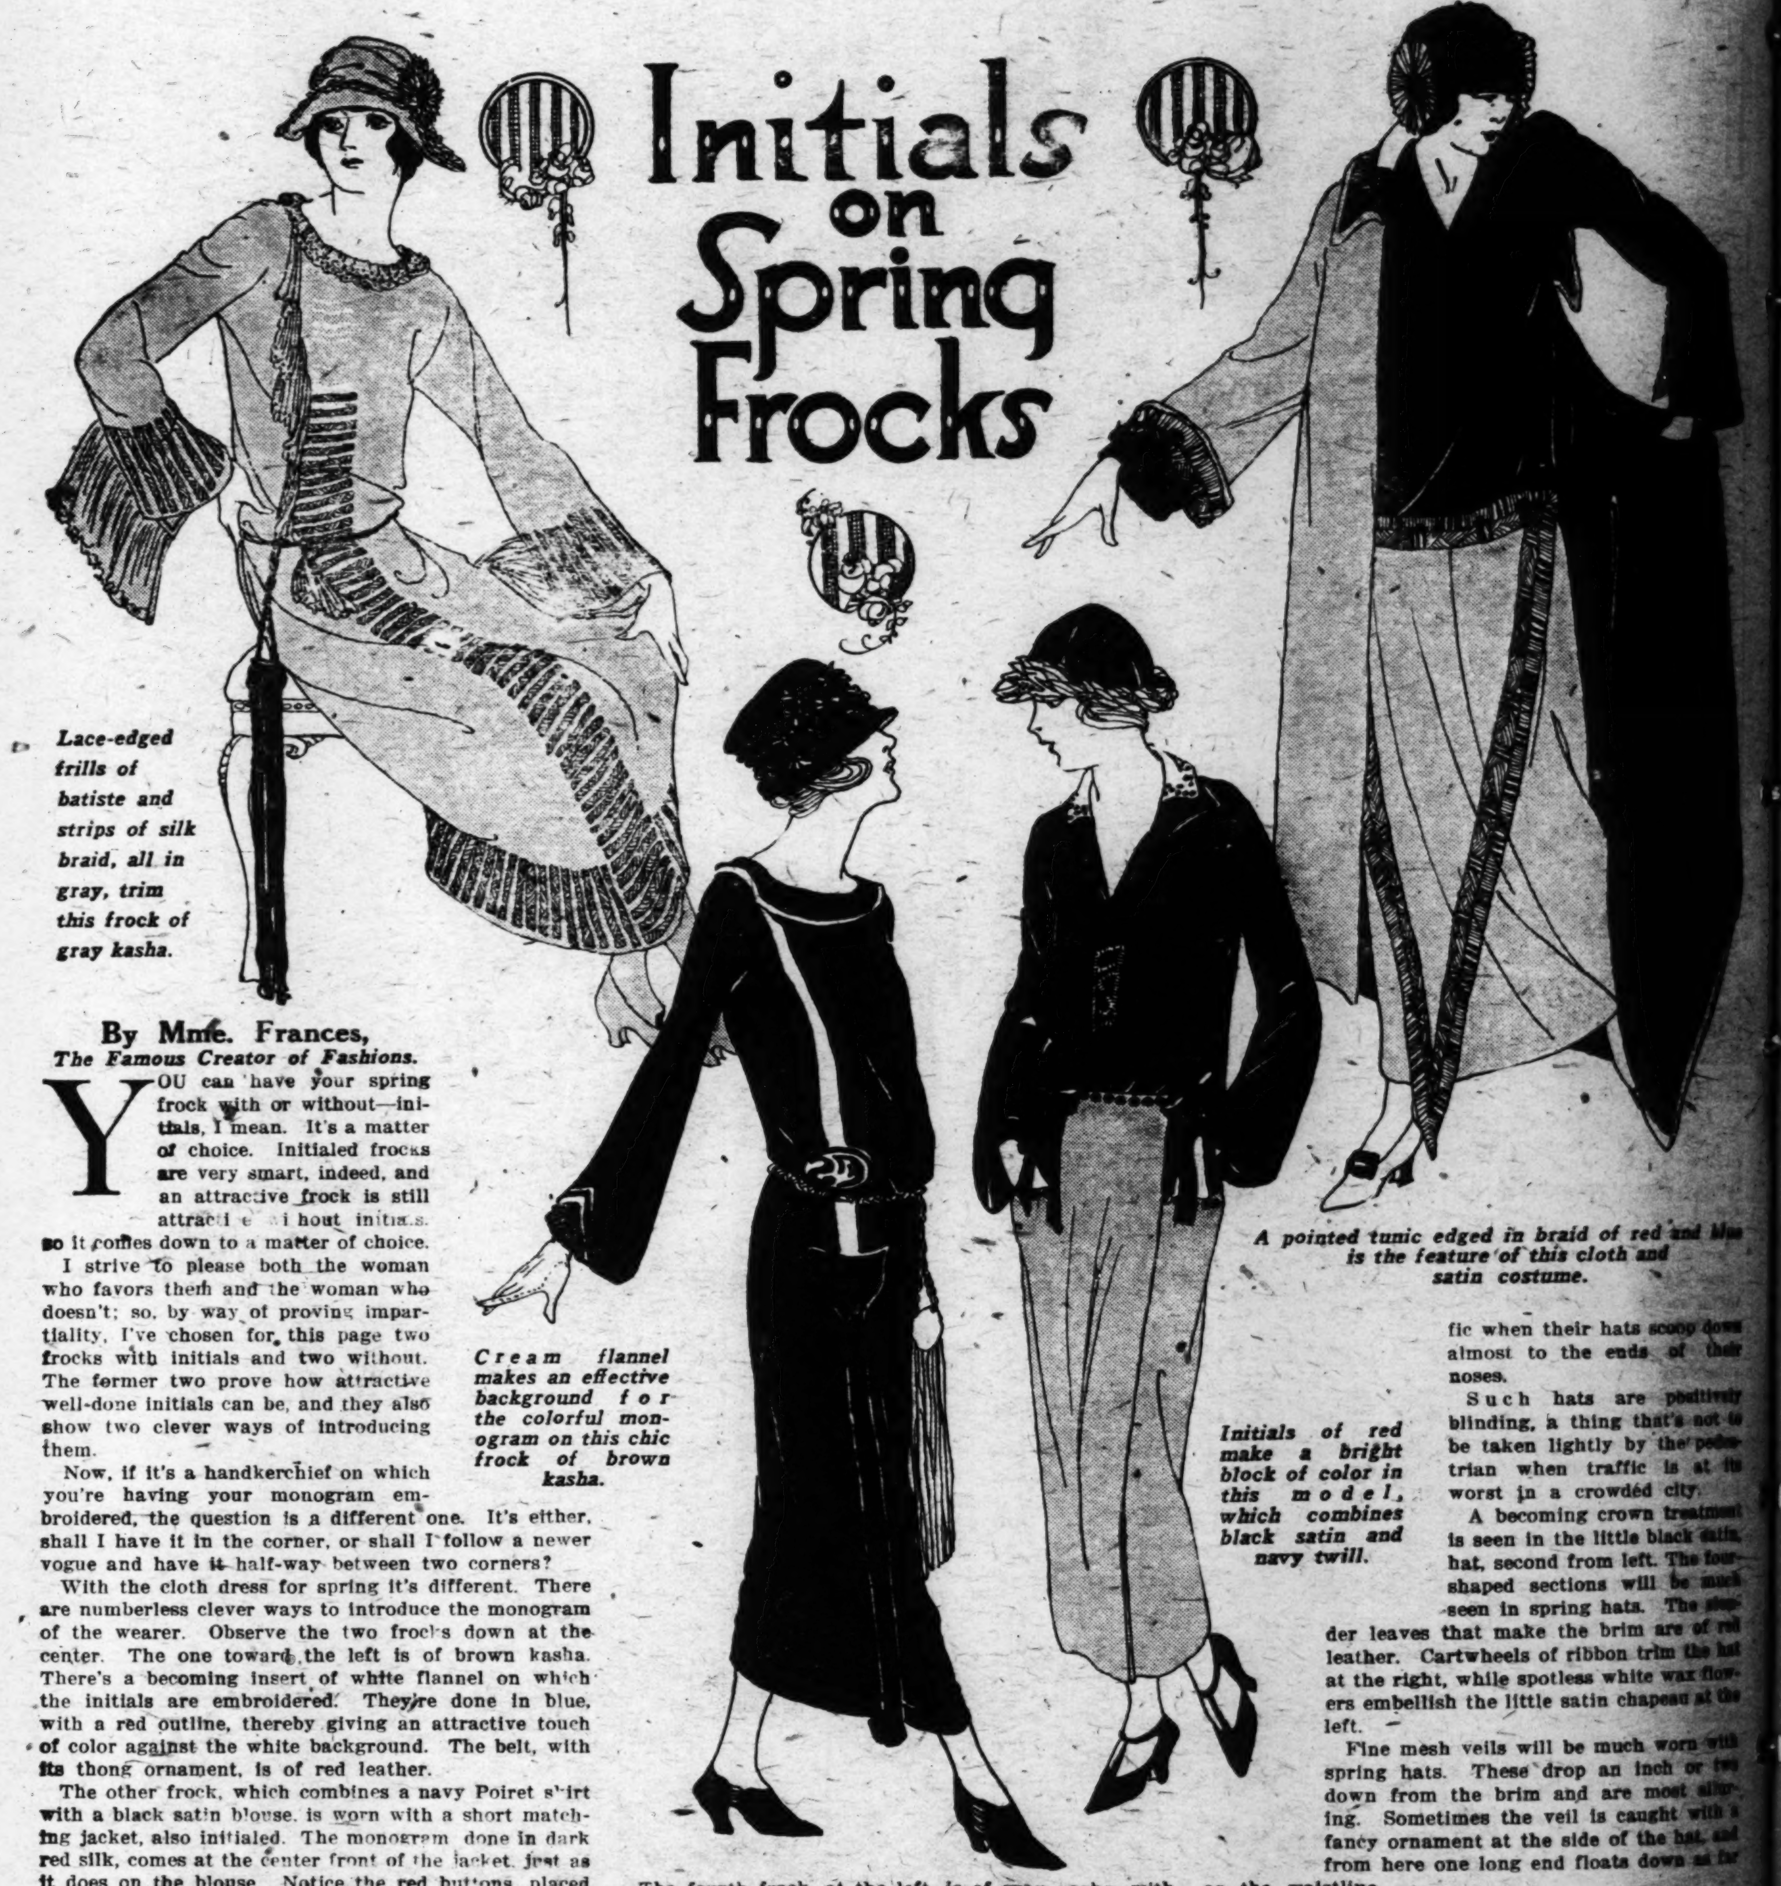
Initials on Spring Frocks



Lace-edged frills of batiste and strips of silk braid, all in gray, trim this frock of gray kasha.

Cream flannel makes an effective background for the colorful monogram on this chic frock of brown kasha.

Initials of red make a bright block of color in this model, which combines black satin and navy twill.

A pointed tunic edged in braid of red and blue is the feature of this cloth and satin costume.

By Mme. Frances,

The Famous Creator of Fashions.

YOU can have your spring frock with or without—initials, I mean. It's a matter of choice. Initialed frocks are very smart, indeed, and an attractive frock is still attractive without initials, so it comes down to a matter of choice.

I strive to please both the woman who favors them and the woman who doesn't; so, by way of proving impartiality, I've chosen for this page two frocks with initials and two without. The former two prove how attractive well-done initials can be, and they also show two clever ways of introducing them.

Now, if it's a handkerchief on which you're having your monogram embroidered, the question is a different one. It's either, shall I have it in the corner, or shall I follow a newer vogue and have it half-way between two corners?

With the cloth dress for spring it's different. There are numberless clever ways to introduce the monogram of the wearer. Observe the two frocks down at the center. The one toward the left is of brown kasha. There's a becoming insert of white flannel on which the initials are embroidered. They're done in blue, with a red outline, thereby giving an attractive touch of color against the white background. The belt, with its thong ornament, is of red leather.

The other frock, which combines a navy Poiret skirt with a black satin blouse, is worn with a short matching jacket, also initialed. The monogram done in dark red silk, comes at the center front of the jacket, just as it does on the blouse. Notice the red buttons, placed where the twill and satin join, and the cunning satin bows at either side.

This use of ribbon bows, either large or small ones, is much seen at the present time. Somehow jaunty bows of satin or ribbon bespeak a crispness that's essentially a part of the spring. They adorn the frock of the young girl and of the older woman, and they are adorable on the little serge or challis frock of the small girl.

This same blouse uses the sleeve that's becoming and easy to wear. It flares ever so slightly at the wrist and admits of the becoming long glove. There's something particularly feminine, I think, about the long glove that wrinkles about the wrist.

This neckline, too, which opens back softly from the throat, is liked by the woman who keeps a sharp lookout to the becomingness of things. I advocate the becoming neckline always, in preference to the one that happens to be smartest at the moment. The bateau neckline is a rather generally becoming one, but for others this suggestion of the "V" lends a length of line that may women need. Truly, the cut of the neck can change the whole aspect of a frock.

Now, the plain "V," unadorned by a collar of any kind, appears in the costume up at the right. The frock, with its unique pointed tunic is of fine navy-blue twill and black satin. The long coat is of the navy twill lined with black satin. Braid of blue worsted and red tinsel adds its interesting color note. If you look closely, you'll see that tiny blue buttons in groups of three adorn the outer edge of the braid. A short length of braid appears again at either sleeve.

The fourth frock, at the left, is of gray kasha, with a striking border trimming of strips of gray silk braid. The lace and batiste of the frills are dyed a matching gray and the leather belt carries out the same note.

Smart frocks seem to go to either of two extremes. They may stress one tone, as does this chic gray one, or introduce bright touches of color. There's a feeling for odd bits of color in spring models. Sometimes it's narrow strips of colored embroidery, down the back and front. Sometimes again these odd inserted strips appear at the sides where the seams of the frock would be.

In an ultra-smart dress of dark navy cloth, crystal beads make the only bit of color. They appear in several slender lines about the bateau neck and sparkle into a dashing design at the front.

Hats to go with the spring frocks are of especial interest. They show a reaction from the scoopy models of several seasons past. And many women, I think, especially those who have pretty hair, will welcome the chance to let it escape from beneath their hat brims.

The first spring shapes will undoubtedly be small, very small ones, which fit the heads closely and show an alluring curve at the brim. These are becoming to most women, for they give an adorable tilt to the profile that seldom fails to flatter.

Then there are other hats, still small, that show a slanting brim that's very narrow. Such brims are most often an inch and a half wide, so they can't hide the features as their broader forerunners have done. And, what is more important, they can't hide the outside world so effectively from the wearer. I've often wondered how women escape the perils of heavy traffic when their hats scoop down almost to the ends of their noses.

A becoming crown treatment is seen in the little black satin hat, second from left. The four-shaped sections will be much seen in spring hats. The slender leaves that make the brim are of red leather. Cartwheels of ribbon trim the hat at the right, while spotless white wax flowers embellish the little satin chapeau at the left.

Fine mesh veils will be much worn with spring hats. These drop an inch or two down from the brim and are most alluring. Sometimes the veil is caught with a fancy ornament at the side of the hat, and from here one long end floats down as far as the waistline.

Just a word about shoes for spring. There have been reports that the American woman will go back to plain conventional footwear, and look back upon the shoes of the last few seasons as merely a fad. I hardly believe this will come to pass, for the smart woman values too highly the possibilities of the fancy shoe.

It adds interest and heightens the effect of any costume. It makes for greater individuality, a thing which women are coming more and more to appreciate.

Besides, the stores are full of such fascinating footwear! There are slippers with rounded toes and slippers with toes that are very pointed. There are two-toned shoes and striped ones.

One young debutante declares she'll never buy dance slippers that haven't rounded toes, for she finds great economy in the fact that you can dodge your partner's dance step much more effectively, if he happens to be awkward, when you're wearing a slipper with a rounded toe.

"There's so much more to get out of the way when your shoe has that extra length," she explains. A point, you'll grant, which is not to be overlooked.

There's a smart new dance slipper which extends up into three points by way of a buckle, then cuts down to no support at all at the sides and builds up high behind the heel in the back. It laces across the front and ties in a bow.

This may sound ornate, but is really very charming on the slender foot.

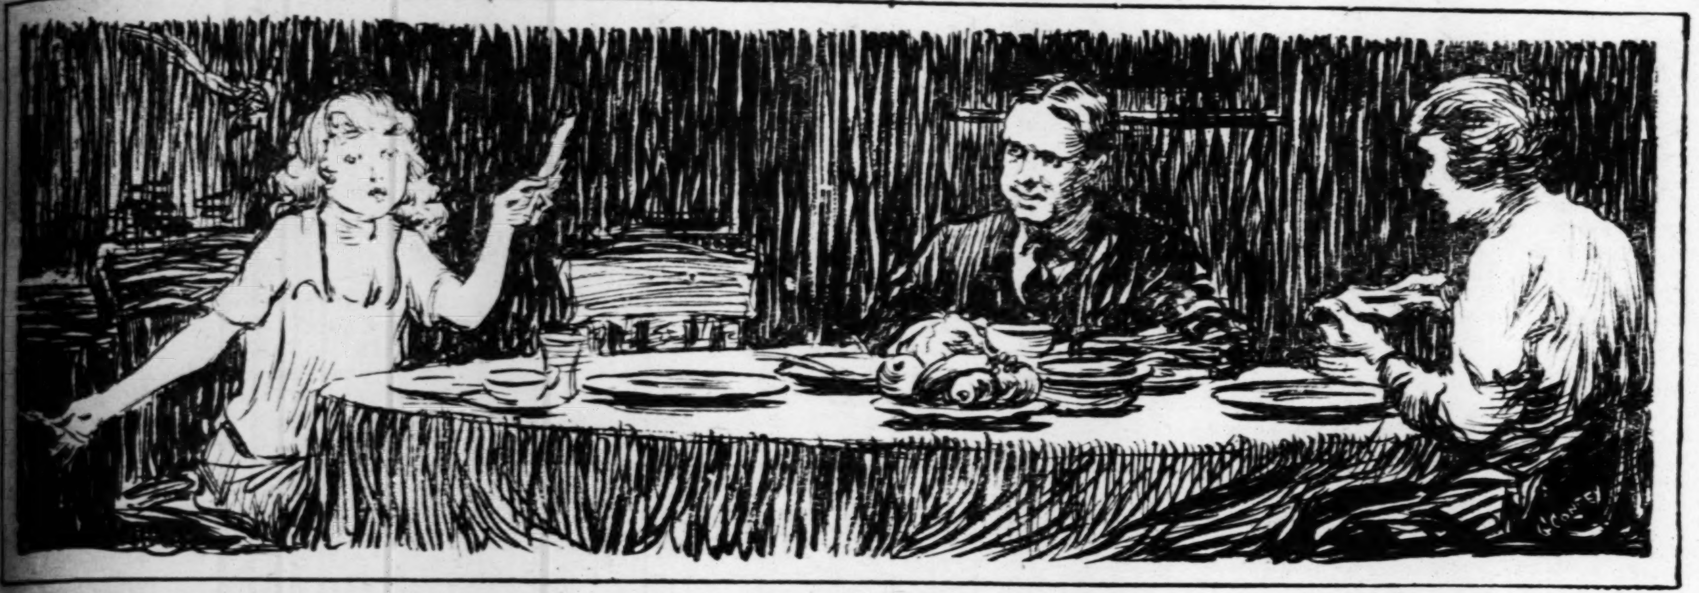
IF I SHOULD EVER TRAVEL

by EDNA FERBER



IF YOU'VE spent more than one day in Okoochee, Ok., you've had dinner at Pardee's.

The Pardee's "take" 18 diners—no more. This is because Mrs. Pardee has 18 of everything in silver. As for Maxine, you find her a rather severe-featured Hebe in a white silk blouse ordered through Vogue.

All this should have been told in the past tense, because Pardee's is no more. But Okoochee, Ok., is full of paradoxes like Pardee's. Before you understand Maxine Pardee and her mother in the kitchen (dishing up) you have to know Okoochee. And before you know Okoochee you have to know Sam Pardee, missing.

* * * * * * * *

It was inevitable that Sam Pardee should hear of Okoochee and, hearing of it, drift there. From boom town to boom town he went. The first stampede always found him there, deep in blueprints, engineering sheets, prospectuses.

A swashbuckler, Sam Pardee, in tan shoes and a brown derby. An 1890 Villon handicapped by a home-loving wife. Milly Pardee's idea of adventure was testing the recipes illustrated in the How To Use The Cheaper Cuts page in the back of the woman's magazines.

Perversely enough, they had been drawn together by the very attraction of dissimilarity. She had come of a good family; he of, seemingly, no family at all. When the two married, Milly's people went through that abolitionary process known as washing their hands of her. Thus ideally mismated they tried to make the best of it—and failed. At least, Sam Pardee failed.

Theirs was a feast-and-famine existence. Sometimes Sam Pardee made sudden thousands. Mrs. Pardee would buy silver, linen and other household furnishings. The furniture was usually whisked away within a few weeks or months, at the longest. But Milly Pardee clung stubbornly to a dozen and a half of everything in silver. For years she carried that silver about, wrapped in trunks full of precious linen. She clung to it desperately, as other women clung to jewels, knowing that when this is gone no more will follow.

When the child was born Milly Pardee wanted to name her Myrtle, but her husband had said, suddenly, "No, call her Maxine."

"After whom?" In Mrs. Pardee's code you named a child "after" someone.

He had seen Maxine Elliott in the heyday of her cold, clear, brainless beauty, with her great, slightly protuberant eyes set so far apart, her exquisitely chiseled white nose and her black, black hair. She had thrilled him.

"After my Uncle Max that lives in—uh—Australia."

"I've never heard you talk of any Uncle Max," said Mrs. Pardee, coldly.

But the name had won. How could they know that Maxine would grow up to be a rather bony young woman who preferred these high-collared white silk blouses and said "eyether"?

* * * * * * * *

Maxine had been about 12 when Okoochee beckoned Sam Pardee. They were living in Chicago at the time. They had a four-room flat. Maxine was attending a good school. Mrs. Pardee marketed and cooked, contentedly.

In the midst of creature comforts such as these Sam Pardee said, one evening, "Oil."

Mrs. Pardee passed it, but not without remonstrance. "It's the same identical French dressing you had last night, Sam. I mixed enough for twice. And you didn't add any oil last night."

Sam Pardee came out of his abstraction long enough to emit a roar of laughter and an unsatisfactory explanation. "I was thinking of oil in wells, not in cruets. Millions of barrels of oil, not a spoonful. Crude, not olive."

She saw her child, her peace, her linen closet threatened. "Sam Pardee, you don't mean"——

"Oklahoma. That's what I meant by oil. It's oozing with it."

"It sounds so far away and different. I like different places. I like any place that isn't here."

Real terror leaped into Milly Pardee's eyes. "Not Oklahoma. Sam, I couldn't stand"—— Suddenly she stiffened with resolve. Maxine's report card had boasted three stars that week. Oklahoma! "I won't bring my child up in Oklahoma. Indians, that's what! Scalped in our beds."

Her mother turned on her, almost fiercely. "You wouldn't."

The child had thrown out her arms in a wide gesture. "It sounds so far away and different. I like different places. I like any place that isn't here."

Milly Pardee had stared at her. It was her father talking in the child. Any place that isn't here. Different.

Out of years of bitter experience she tried to convince the child of her error.

"Places are just the same," she said, bitterly, "and so are people, when you get to 'em."

"They can't be," the child argued, stubbornly. "India and China and Spain and Africa."

Milly Pardee had turned accusing eyes on her amused husband. "I hope you're satisfied."

He shrugged. "Well the kid's right. That's living."

She disputed this, fiercely. "It is not. Living's staying in a place, and helping it grow, and growing up with it and belonging. Belong!" It was the cry of the rolling stone that is bruised and weary.

* * * * * * * *

Sam Pardee left for Oklahoma the following week. Milly Pardee refused to accompany him. It was the first time she had taken this stand. "If you go there, and like it, and want to settle down there, I'll come."

For three years, then, Sam Pardee's letters reeked of oil: wells, strikes, gushers, drills, shares, outfits. It was early Oklahoma in the rough. This one was getting five hundred a day out of his well. That one had sunk forty thousand in his and lost out.

"We might be anywhere—so long as it c away from here. Dull, stupid, stick-in-the-muds, all of them."

"Five hundred what?" Maxine asked. "Forty thousand what?"

"Dollars, I guess," Milly Pardee answered. "That's the way your father always talks. I'd rather have twenty-five a week, myself, and know it's coming without fail."

"I wouldn't. Where's the fun in that?"

"Fun! There's more fun in twenty-five a week in a pay envelope than in forty thousand down a dry well."

Maxine was 15 now. "I wish we could live with father in Oklahoma. I think it's wrong not to."

Milly Pardee was beginning to think so, too. Especially since her husband's letters had grown rarer as the checks they contained had grown larger. On his occasional trips back to Chicago he said nothing of their joining him out there. In sudden fright and resolve Milly Pardee sold the furnishings of the four-room flat, packed the peripatetic linen and silver, and joined a surprised and rather markedly unenthusiastic husband in Okoochee, Ok.

The first thing Maxine said as they rode (in a taxi) to the hotel, was: "But the streets are paved!" Then, "But it's all electric lighted with cluster lights!" And, in final and utter disgust: "Why, there's a movie sign that says 'The Perils of Pauline.' That was showing in Chicago the night before we left."

Milly Pardee smiled grimly. "Palestine's paved, too," she observed. "And they're probably running that same reel there next week.

* * * * * * * *

Milly Pardee and her husband had a plain talk. Next day Sam Pardee rented a two-story frame house, with the understanding that the rent was to be considered as payment made toward final purchase. Milly Pardee was happier than she had been in all her wedded life. In a burst of temporary prosperity Sam Pardee paid $5000 down on the house and lot. That left a bare thousand to pay. There were three good meals a day. Milly Pardee belonged to the Okoochee Woman's Thursday Club. All the women in Okoochee seemed to have come from St. Louis, Columbus, Omaha, Cleveland, Kansas City, and they spoke of these as back East. When they came calling they left cards, punctiliously. They played bridge, observing all the newest rulings.

Maxine graduated in white, with a sash. Mrs. Pardee began to talk of buying an automobile. The town was full of them. There were the flivvers and lower middle-class cars owned by small merchants, natives (anyone boasting 12 years' residence) and unsuccessful adventurers of the Sam Pardee type. Then there were the big, high-powered scouting cars driven by steely-eyed, wiry, cold-blooded young men from Pennsylvania and New York. These young men had no womenfolk with them. Held conferences in smoke-filled rooms at the Okmulgee Hotel. The main business street was called Broadway, and the curb on either side was hidden by lines of cars drawn up slantwise at an angle of 90. No farmer wagons. A small town with all the airs of a big one; with none of the charming informality of the old Southern small town; none of the engaging ruggedness of the established Middle-Western town; none of the faded gentility of the old New England town.

Milly Pardee loved it. She belonged. She was chairman of this committee and secretary of that. Milly Pardee was happy.

Sam Pardee was not. He began, suddenly to talk about Mexico. Frankly, he was bored. For the first time in his life he owned a house—or nearly. There was $1100 in the bank. Roast on Sunday. Bathroom shelf to be nailed Sunday morning. Y. M. C. A., Rotary Club, Knights of Columbus, Kiwanis, Boy Scouts.

"Gosh!" said Sam Pardee. "This town's no good."

Milly Pardee took a last stand. "Sam Pardee, I'm through traipsing up and down the world with you, like a gypsy. I want a home. I want to be settled. I want to stay here. And I'm going to."

"You're sure you want to stay?"

The Story of a Romantic Girl and Her Dream

"I've moved for the last time. I—I'm going to plant a Burbank clamberer at the side of the porch, and they don"t begin to flower till after the first 10 years. That's how sure I am."

There came a look into Sam Pardee's eyes. He rubbed his neat brown derby round and round with his coat sleeve. He was just going out.

"Well, that's all right. I just wanted to know. Where's Max?"

"She stayed late. They're rehearsing for the Pageant of Progress down at the library."

Sam Pardee looked thoughtful—a little regretful, one might almost have said. Then he clapped on the brown derby, paused on the top step of the porch to light his cigar, returned the greeting of young Arnold Hatch, who was sprinkling the lawn next door, walked down the street with the quick, nervous step that characterized him, boarded the outgoing train, and was never heard from again.

* * * * * * * *

"Well," said the worse-than-widowed (it was her own term), "we've got the home."

She set about keeping it. Pardee's dinners became an institution in Okoochee. Mrs. Pardee cooked. Maxine served. And not even the great new stucco palaces on Edgecombe road boasted finer silver, more exquisite napery. As for the food—old Clem Barstow himself, who had a chef and a butler and sent East for lobster and squabs, came to Pardee's when he wanted a real meal. From the first they charged $1.50 for their dinners. Okoochee, made mellow by the steaming soup, the savory meats, the bland sauces and rich dessert, paid it ungrudgingly. They served only 18—no more—though Okoochee could never understand why. On each dinner Mrs. Pardee made a minimum of 75 cents. Eighteen times 75—naught and carry the 4—naught—5—$13.50—seven times—well, $95 or thereabouts each week isn't so bad. Out of this Mrs. Pardee managed to bank a neat sum. She figured that at the end of 10 or 15 years——

* * * * * * * *

"I hate them," said Maxine, washing dishes in the kitchen. "Greedy pigs."

"They're nothing of the kind. They like good food, and I'm thankful they do. If they didn't I don't know where I'd be."

"We might be anywhere—so long as it could be away from here. Dull, stupid, stick-in-the-muds, all of them."

"Why, they're no such thing, Maxine Pardee! They're from all over the world, pretty nearly. Why, just last Thursday they were counting there were 16 different states represented in the 18 people that sat down to dinner."

"Pooh! States! That isn't the world."

"What is, then?"

Maxine threw out her arms, sprinkling dishwater from her dripping finger tips with the wide-flung gesture. "Cairo! Zanzibar! Brazil! Trinidad! Seville—uh—Samar—Samarkand."

"Where's Samarkand?"

"I don't know. And I'm going to see it all some day. And the different people. The people that travel, and know about what kind of wine with the roast and the fish. You know—the kind in the novels that say, 'You've chilled this sauterne too much, Bemish.' "

"And when you do see all these places," retorted Mrs. Pardee, with the bitterness born of long years of experience, "you'll find that in every one of them somebody's got a boarding house called Pardee's, or something like that, where the people flock same's they do here, for a good meal."

"Yes, but what kind of people?"

"Same kind that comes here."

"I don't believe it."

"Well, it's so. And I'm thankful we've got the comforts of home."

At this Maxine laughed a sharp little laugh that was almost a bark. Perhaps she was justified.

The 18 straggled in between 6 and 6:30, nightly. A mixture of townspeople and strangers. While Maxine poured the water in the dining room the neat little parlor became a mess. The men threw hats and overcoats on the backs of the chairs. Their rubbers slopped under them. They rarely troubled to take them off. While waiting avidly for dinner to be served they struck matches and lighted cigarettes and cigars.

The women trotted upstairs, chattering, and primped and fussed in Maxine's neat and austere little bedroom. They used Maxine's powder and dropped it about on the tidy dresser and the floor. They brushed away only what had settled on the front of their dresses. They forgot to switch off the electric light, leaving Maxine to do it, thriftily, between serving courses. Every penny counted. Every penny meant release.

After dinner Maxine and her mother sat down to eat off the edge of the kitchen table. It was often 9 o'clock before the last straggling diner, sprawling on the parlor davenport with his evening paper and cigar, departed, leaving Maxine to pick up the scattered newspapers, cigarette butts, ashes; straighten chairs, lock doors.

Then the dishes. The dishes!

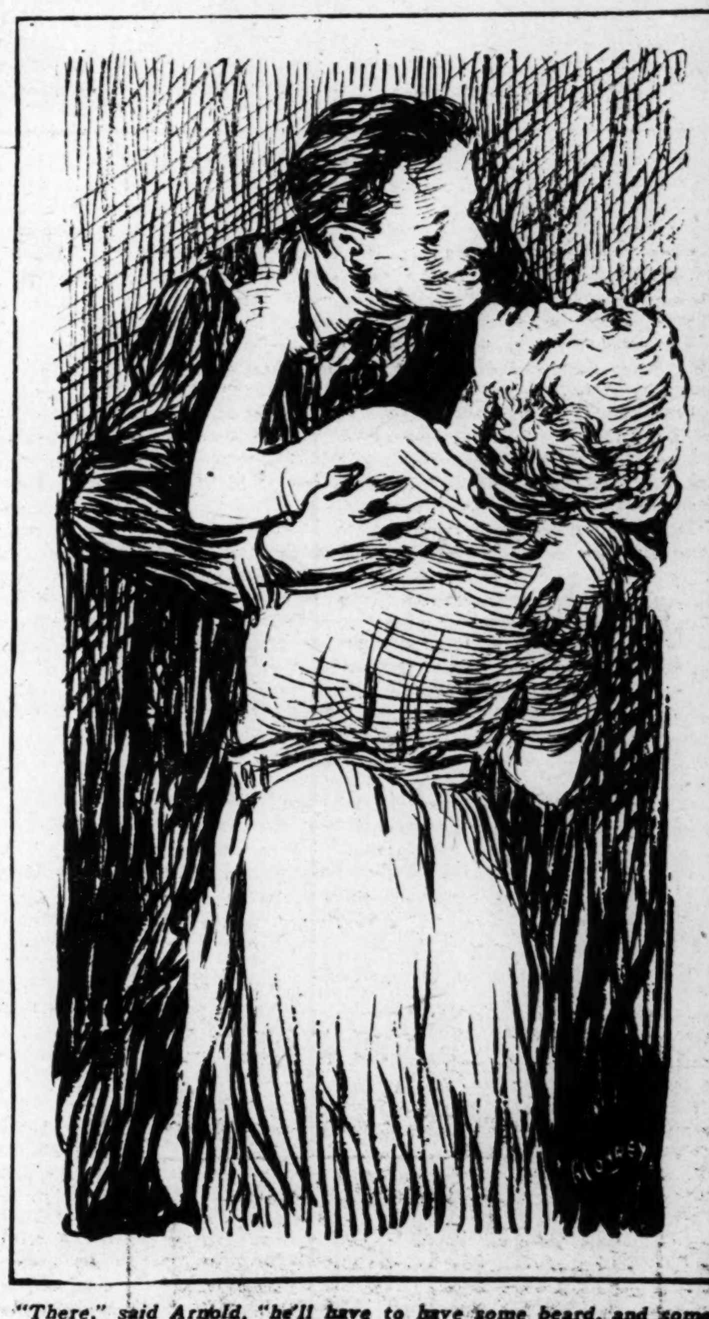
When Arnold Hatch asked her to go to a movie she shook her head, usually. "I'm too tired. I'm going to read, in bed."

"Read, read! That's all you do. What're you reading?"

"Oh, about Italy. La bel Napoli!" She collected travel folders and often talked in their terms. In her mind she always said "brooding Vesuvius;" "blue Mediterranean;" "azure coasts;" "Egypt's golden sands."

Arnold Hatch ate dinner nightly at Pardee's. He lived in the house next door, which he owned, renting it to an Okoochee family and retaining the upstairs front bedroom for himself. A tall, thin eyeglassed young man who worked in the offices of the Okoochee Oil and Refining Co., believed in Okoochee, and wanted to marry Maxine. He had twice kissed her. On both these occasions his eyeglasses had fallen off, taking the passion, so to speak, out of the process. When Maxine giggled, uncontrollably, he said: "Go on—laugh! But some day I'm going to kiss you and I'll take my glasses off first. Then look out!"

You have to have a good deal of humor to stand being laughed at by a girl you've kissed; especially a girl who emphasizes her aloofness by wearing those high-collared white silk blouses.



"There," said Arnold, "he'll have to have some beard, and some flame, and some thin, cruel mouth to make you forget that kiss."

"You haven't got a goiter, have you?" said Arnold Hatch one evening, brutally. Then, as she had flared in protest, "I know it. I love that little creamy satin hollow at the base of your throat."

"You've never s——" The scarlet flamed up. She was human.

"I know it. But I love it just the same." Pretty good for a tall, thin young man who worked in the offices of the Okoochee Oil and Refining Co.

Sometimes he said: "I'm darned certain you like me"—bravely—"love me. Why won't you marry me? Cut out all this slaving. I could support you. Not in much luxury, maybe, but"——

"And settle down in Okoochee! Never see anything! Stuck in this God-forsaken hole! This drab, dull, oil-soaked village! When there are wonderful people, wonderful places, color, romance, beauty! Damascus! Mandalay! Singapore! Hongkong! * * * Hongkong! It sounds like a temple bell. It thrills me."

"Over in Hongkong," said Arnold Hatch, "I expect some Chinese Maxine Pardee would say, 'Okoochee! It sounds like an Indian war drum. It thrills me.' "

Sometimes Maxine showed signs of melting. But she always congealed again under the influence of her resolve. One evening an out-of-town diner, on hearing her name, said: "Pardee! H-m. Probably a corruption of Pardieu. A French name originally, I suppose."

After that there was no approaching her for a week. Maxine Pardieu. "By God!" it meant. A chevalier, he must have been, this Pardieu. A musketeer! A swashbuckler, with lace falling over his slim white hand, and his hand always ready on his sword. Red heels. Plumed hat. Pardieu!

How she hated anew the great oil tanks that rose on the town's outskirts, guarding it like giant sentinels. The new houses. The new country club. Twenty-one miles of asphalt road. Population in 1900, only 467. In 1920 over 35,000. Slogan, Watch Us Grow. Seventeen hundred oil and gas wells. Fields of corn and cotton. Skyscrapers. The Watonga Building, 12 stories. Haynes Block, 14 stories. Come West, young man! Ugh!

Sometimes she made little rhymes in her mind.

There's Singapore and Zanzibar,
And Cairo and Calais.
There's Samarkand and Alcazar,
Rangoon and Mandalay.

"Yeh," said Arnold Hatch, one evening, when they were talking in the Pardee back yard. It was 9 o'clock. Dishes done. A moon. October. Maxine had just murmured her little quatrain. They were standing by the hedge of pampas grass that separated the Pardee yard from Hatch's, next door.

"Yeh," said Arnold Hatch. "Likewise:

"There's Seminole and Shawnee,
Apache, Agawam,
There's Agua and Pawnee, Walinga, Wauketom."

He knew his Oklahoma.

"Oh!" exclaimed Maxine, in a little burst of fury; and stamped her foot down hard. Squ-ush! said something underfoot. "Oh!" said Maxine again; in surprise this time. October was a dry month. She peered down. Her shoe was wet. A slimy something clung to it. A scummy something shone reflected in the moonlight. She had not lived 10 years in Oklahoma for nothing. Arnold Hatch bent down. Maxine bent down. The greasy wet patch lay just between the two back yards. They touched it, fearfully, with their forefingers. Then they straightened and looked at each other. Oil! Oil.

Things happened like that in Oklahoma.

You didn't try to swing a thing like that yourself. You leased your land for a number of years. A well cost between forty and sixty thousand dollars. You leased to a company represented by one or two of these cold-blooded, steely-eyed young men from Pennsylvania or New York. This was a residence district—one of the older in this new town. But they bought the Pardee place and the Hatch place. And Arnold Hatch, who had learned a thing or two in the offices of the Okoochee Oil and Refining Co., drove a hard bargain for both. The yard was overrun with drillers, lawyers, engineers, superintendents, foremen, machinery.

Arnold came with papers to sign. "Five hundred a day," he said, "and a percentage." He named the percentage. Maxine and her mother repeated this after him, humbly.

Mrs. Pardee had been the bookkeeper in the Pardee menage. She tried some mathematical gymnastics, now and bumped her arithmetical nose.

"Five hundred a day. Including Sundays, Arnold?"

"Including Sundays."

Her lips began to move: "Seven times five—thirty-five hundred—52 times 30"——

She stopped, overcome. But she began again, wildly, as a thought came to her. "Why, I could build a house. A house, up on Edgecombe. A house like the Barstows', with lawns and garden, and sleeping porches and linen closets! . . . Oh, Maxine! We'll live there"——

"Not I," said Maxine, crisply. Arnold, watching her, knew what she was going to say before she said it. "I'm going to see the world. I want to penetrate a civilization so old that its history wanders down the centuries and is lost in the dim mists of mythology." (See Baedeker.)

Sudden wealth had given Arnold a new masterfulness. "Marry me before you go."

"Not at all," replied Maxine. "On the boat going over"——

"Over where?"

"Honolulu, on my way to Japan, I'll meet a tall, bearded stranger, sunburned, with the flame of the Orient in his eyes, and on his thin, cruel, mouth"——

Arnold Hatch took off his glasses. Maxine stiffened. "Don't you d"—— But she was too late.

"There," said Arnold, "he'll have to have some beard, and some flame, and some thin, cruel mouth to make you forget that one."

* * * * * * * *

Maxine started alone, against her mother's remonstrances.

On the first two days out on the way to the Hawaiian Islands she spent all her time in her bed. But the swell subsided, and the wind went down, and Maxine appeared on deck and in another 12 hours had met every-ever, but this investment is all right! they declare.

"I suppose they are a highly imaginative type, seeing pots of gold at the foot of every rainbow. And their bump of reason is underdeveloped. Anyway, it's constitutional with them. They may be old enough to know better—but they don't."

Another man connected with an investment concern believes that every human, woman or man, has a weak spot somewhere, which the sharper can use if he can find it. "A man I used to know in a large Western city lived to be past 50 before he ever made a business mistake," he told me. "He was shrewd, cautious and he climbed straight on up the ladder, slowly but surely, until he reached the half-million mark. It was proverbial that 'D—— was never taken in.'

"And then, past 50, experienced and safe, what do you think he fell for? A fake consumption cure! Some queer charlatan who wanted to put a miserable bottled dose on the market bled D—— for every cent he had to do so! This D—— died practically a pauper, and the bottles lay broken in the junk pile. Now how do you explain a thing like that? Beats me."

One question seems to be fairly settled by the consensus of opinion of these and many other experts, namely, that women are not one whit more gullible than men.

Lindsay's success in fleecing New York society women out of their fortunes is regarded by fraud experts as exceptional. His scheme worked mainly because it had a skillful admixture of social and mystery appeal.

He mingled in the most expensive society, and, having selected a victim, he contrived to get himself introduced to her by someone of social prestige. In one case, the victim stated that she had met him at a bridge party at the Ritz-Carlton; another at a card party under the auspices of one who is a relative of the Vanderbilts and the Harrimans. A physician in high standing introduced him to still a third. In every case the poor lamb about to be slaughtered said to herself: "Oh, he's a perfect gentleman, an absolutely safe friend; why, I know all about him! He's an intimate friend of So-and-So." In every case he was indorsed by New York's most established society—why, then, should anyone doubt him?

Having followed up the introduction by calls, invitations, daffodils and roses, and other well-established methods of constructing an intimacy, he suggested that he might show his friendship in a more material form. Of course, this wasn't to be mentioned, but he was inside on a little investment proposition—well, if this is understood to be just between you and me, here's where we stand. There's a small group known as "The Domino Club," and it includes the brain of Wall street. Just a few intimates—Thomas Lamont, Percy Rockefeller, Stillman, George F. Baker—he named these and several more, glibly. Of course, these men never had anything to do with Lindsay. They were having some little private dealings—just as a group of old pals, you know, but they were pledged to Masonic secrecy, and it wouldn't do to let anything of it leak out, be sure of that!

But—just because we're good friends—he could put this charming lady wise to a way whereby she could increase the interest on her property—well, by jove, she would think he was kidding her if he told her how much! Nothing like being inside! There's many a quiet little deal goes on in the street!

Well—it worked. One of the women, for instance, reported that she gave him $500 and he shortly returned her $900. This looked easy. She made it a thousand next time.

For a good while he kept his victims interested in the scheme, and thorough believing. He would drop around with some item of encouraging news, or telephone: "Going great! I think we'll be able to double that investment before the next report!" He was businesslike; he kept them informed; he showed lively interest in each one's profits. He sent them small checks frequently, showing that things were coming their way, and he never forgot the daffodils and roses.

And then—when his intake had run up to some point lying between half a million and a million of dollars—he hung up the receiver. Not in.

Revelations brought forth the fact that his victims ranged from 75 years of age to youth—apparently he knew the way to any woman's confidence. Most of them were widows who had inherited their husband's property. Some were still well off, in spite of Lindsay's most heroic efforts but others were practically penniless. One widow whose $20,000 left by her husband in life insurance policies had been safely invested was cleaned out. Mrs. Atwood's $97,000 had been excellently placed and was yielding her a large return, but the temptation to get even more for it had moved her to turn it all over to Lindsay. Miss Charlotte Nilsson, an actress, had yielded up $20,000, she indignantly declared. And the loss of $375,000 of Mrs. Lillian Duke, widow of James B. Duke, was Lindsay's masterpiece of art.

The Remade Man -- --

denly realized where he was and that he was on the point of giving himself away.

"You thought," and the woman in the far corner of the room had difficulty in suppressing a gasp as she listened to the words which appeared to come from the lips of her long-dead brother. "You thought that because you had killed me in order that you might get closer to the girl I wouldn't let you touch that you would never hear of me again. But your hatchet didn't kill all of me, your"——

The man at the door could stand no more. With a cry of rage he snatched a long, keen-bladed knife from his pocket and started toward the figure in the center of the room. Before Capt. Williams could interfere the Italian had sent the entire framework to the floor and had revealed the speaking tube through which one of the policemen, stationed below, had uttered the words which seemed to come from the lips of the dead Pietro.

The struggle which followed was ended only by the interruption of two other men from the outer office, for the Italian, crazed by his superstitious fear, seemed to be endowed with the strength of a dozen men. However, he was finally overcome and lay panting upon the floor, while he listened to the story which his former sweetheart told Williams for the second time.

Polo, it appeared, had fallen desperately in love with her several years before, but her brother, Pietro, who knew that the other Italian had a wife and family in Sicily, had refused to permit any continuance of the friendship. There had been several quarrels between the men and finally one night, about two years before the finding of the skeleton, Pietro had received a note telling him to come to a certain spot, where he would receive further instructions about some work he had on hand.

"He never came back," the girl concluded, with a catch in her voice. "I never heard anything more from him until you showed me the photograph."

"And here again," Quinn finished the story, "was evidence of the fact that real detective work cannot be hampered even by what the majority of people would call the impossible. So far as I know, no one ever before or since has been able to build up the entire solution of a crime from a bit of fleshless bone. But Williams did it, and while you may lay his success to the sheer luck of coincidence, or the guiding hand of a higher avenging power, or what you will, the fact remains that he succeeded—and that's the principal point, after all."

"But surely a confession secured under such circumstances couldn't be sufficient to send a man to the chair," I objected. "Wasn't that a sort of third degree, and wouldn't the confession be invalidated by the fact that it was secured under such unusual circumstances?"

"Undoubtedly," Quinn agreed. "But the State didn't have to rely upon that confession. They built their case upon something much stronger—upon the positive evidence of the note which Pietro Rosa had received the day he went to his death and which his sister had, fortunately, preserved—a note which was written in Luigi Polo's handwriting. This, coupled with the fact that the motive had been well determined and that there was no doubt whatever that Pietro had come to his death by reason of a wound inflicted by a hatchet, was sufficient to send Polo up the river for life."

"Surely a strange clew," I commented. "A case of the dead returned to life to demand justice. But what of the doll that's right next to the skull on the shelf? Did that have any connection with Pietro's murder?"

"Not the least in the world," was Quinn's answer, "but it did play a big part in a mysterious crime in a far-distant part of the world.

"'Julie,' as the doll was called, was responsible for solving a mystery which Conan Doyle might have called 'The Affair of the Roman Coins.' But that was a robbery, not a murder."

And, rising, Quinn yawned with a finality indicating that the evening session in crime detection and the utilization of curious clews had come to an end.

Women say La-may stays on better than any other face powder.

Up to the time of La-may it was almost impossible to get a face powder to stay on the face longer than it took to put it on. Now, you can use a powder that really stays on, that stays on perfectly. A specialist has perfected a pure powder that does not contain white lead or starchy rice powder to make it stay on. This improved formula contains medicinal powders doctors prescribe to improve the complexion. In fact, this powder helps to prevent and reduce enlarged pores and irritations. It is also astringent, discouraging flabbiness, crow's feet and wrinkles. This unusual powder is called La-may (French, Poudre L'Ame). Because La-may is pure and because it stays on so well it is used by millions of American women. All dealers carry the large box and many carry the generous thirty-five cent size. Remember, when you are offered a substitute for La-may it is sure to be a demonstrator or some one trying to make a larger profit at your expense. When you use this harmless powder and see how wonderfully it improves your complexion you will understand why so many beautiful New York women say they cannot buy a better powder than La-may anywhere at any price. You can also get a La-may Face Powder Compact with puff to refill your empty Vanity Box. These compacts cannot crumble and spill.

If I Should Ever Travel

one, from the purser to the honeymoon couple, in the surprising way one does on these voyages. She looked for the tall, bearded stranger with the sunburn of the Orient and the thin, cruel lips. But he didn't seem to be about. Strangely enough, everyone she talked to seemed to be from Nebraska, or Kansas, or Iowa, or Missouri. Not only that, they all were very glib with names and places that had always seemed mythical and glamorous.

"Oh, yes. Mr. Tannebaum and I went to India last year, and Persia and around. Real interesting. My, but they're dirty, those towns. We used to kick about Des Moines, now that they use so much soft coal, and the manufacturing and all. But, my land! it's paradise compared to those places. And the food! Only decent meals we had in Egypt was a place in Cairo called Pardee's, run by a woman whose husband left her or died, or something. Real, home-loving woman she was. Such cooking. . . . . Why, that's so! Your name's Pardee, too, isn't it! Well, I always say to Mr. Tannebaum, it's a small world, after all. No relation, of course?"

"Of course not." How suddenly safe Oklahoma seemed. And Arnold Hatch.

"Where you going from Honolulu, Miss Pardee?"

"Samarkand."

"Beg pardon."

"Samarkand."

"Oh, yes. Samar—le' see, now; where is that, exactly? I used to know, but I'm such a hand for forgetting"——

"I don't know," said Maxine, distinctly.

"Don't—but I thought you said you were going"——

"I am, but I don't know where it is."

"Then how"——

"You just go to an office, where there are folders and a man behind the desk, and you say you want to go to Samarkand. He shows you. You get on a boat. That's all."

The people from Iowa and Kansas and Nebraska and Missouri said "Oh, yes," and there was nothing like travel. So broadening. Maxine asked them if they knew about the Vale of Kashmir and one of them, astoundingly enough, did. A man from Milwaukee, Wis., who had spent a year there superintending the erection of a dredge. A plump man, with eyeglasses and perpetually chewing a dead cigar.

But Honolulu, the Moana Hotel on Waikiki Beach, reassured her. It was her dream come true. She knew it would be so when she landed and got her first glimpse of the dark-skinned natives on the docks, their hats and necks laden with leis of flowers. There were palm trees. There were flaming hibiscus hedges. Her bed was canopied with white netting, like that of a Princess (the attendant explained it was to keep out the mosquitoes.)

You ate strange fruits (they grew a little sickening after a day or two). You saw Duke, the Hawaiian world champion swimmer, come in on a surf board, standing straight and slim and naked like a god of bronze, balancing miraculously on a plank carried in on the crest of a wave with the velocity of a steam engine. You saw Japanese women in tight kimonos and funny little stilted flapping footgear running to catch a street car; and you laughed at the incongruity of it. You made the three-day trip to the living volcano at Hilo and sat at the crater's brink watching the molten lava lake tossing, hissing, writhing. You hung there, between horror and fascination.

"Certainly a pretty sight, isn't it?" said her fellow travelers. "Makes the Grand Canyon look sick, I think, don't you?"

"I've never seen it."

"Oh, really!"

On her return from Hilo she saw him. A Vandyke beard; smoldering eyes; thin, red lips; lean, nervous hands; white flannel evening clothes; sunburned a rich brown. Maxine drew a long breath as if she had been running. It was after dinner. The broad veranda was filled with gayly gowned women, uniformed officers from the fort, tourists in white. They were drinking their after-dinner coffee, smoking, laughing. The Hawaiian orchestra made ready to play for the dancing on the veranda. They began to play. Their ukuleles throbbed and moaned. The musicians sang in their rich, melodious voices some native song of a lost empire and a dead King. It tore at your heart. You ached with the savage beauty of it. It was then she saw him. He was seated alone, smoking, drinking, watching the crowd with amused, uneager glance. She had seen him before. It was a certainty, this feeling. She had known him—seen him—before. Perhaps not in this life. Perhaps only in her dreams. But they had met.

She stared at him until her eye caught his. It was brazen, but she was shameless. Nothing mattered. This was no time for false modesty. Her eye held his. Then, slowly, she rose, picked up her trailing scarf, and walked deliberately past him, glancing down at him as she passed. He half rose; half spoke. She went down the steps leading from the veranda to the courtyard, down this walk to the pier, down the pier to the very end, where the little roofed shelter lay out in the ocean, bathed in moonlight, fairylike, unreal. The ocean was a thing of molten silver. The sound of the wailing voices in song came to her on the breeze, agonizing in its beauty. There, beyond, lay Pearl Harbor. From the other side, faintly, you heard the music and laughter from the yacht club.

Maxine seated herself. The after-dinner couples had not yet strolled out. They were waiting for the dancing up there on the hotel veranda. She waited. She saw the glow of his cigar as he came down the pier, a tall, slim, white figure in the moonlight. It was just like a novel. It was a novel, come to life. He stood a moment at the pier's edge, smoking. Then he tossed his cigar into the water and it fell with a little s-st! He stood another moment, irresolutely. Then he came over to her.

"Nice night."

In Okoochee you would have said: "Sir!" But not here. Not now. Not Maxine Pardien. "Yes, isn't it!"

The mellow moon fell on him—bronzed, bearded, strangely familiar.

At his next question she felt a little faint. "Haven't we—met before?"

She toyed with the end of her scarf. "You feel that, too?"

He nodded. He took a cigarette from a flat platinum case. "Mind if I smoke? Perhaps you'll join me?" Maxine took a cigarette, uncertainly. Lighted it from the match he held. Put it to her lips. Coughed, gasped. "Maybe you're not used to those. I smoke a cheap cigarette because I like 'em. Dromedaries, those are. Eighteen cents a package."

Maxine held the cigarette in her unaccustomed fingers. Her eyes were on his face. "You said you thought—you felt—we'd met before?"

"I may be mistaken, but I never forget a face. Where are you from, may I ask?"

Maxine hesitated a moment. "Oklahoma."

He slapped his leg a resounding thwack. "I knew it! I'm hardly ever mistaken. Name's—wait a minute—Pardee, isn't it?"

"Yes. But how"——

"One of the best meals I ever had in my life, Miss Pardee. Two years ago, it was. I was lecturing in Thibet and the Far East."

"Lecturing?" Her part of the dialogue was beginning to sound like the dialogue in a badly written play.

"Yes. I'm Brainerd, you know. I thought you knew, when you spoke up there on the veranda."

"Brainerd!" It was almost idiotic.

"Brainerd. Paul Brainerd, the travelogue man. I remember I gave you and your mother complimentary tickets to the lecture. I've got a great memory. Got to have, in my business. Let's see, that town was"——

"Okoochee," faintly.

"Okoochee! That's it! It's a small world, after all, isn't it? Okoochee. Why, I'm on my way to Oklahoma now. I'm going to spend two months or more there taking pictures of the vast oil fields, the oil wells. A new country. An Aladdin country; a new growth; one of the most amazing and picturesque bits in the history of our amazing country. History in the making. An empire over night. Oklahoma! Well! What a relief, after war-torn Europe and an outworn civilization."

"But you—you're from"——

"I'm from East Orange, N. J., myself. Got a nice little place down there that I wouldn't swap for all the palaces of the Kings. No, sir. . . . . Already? Well, yes, it is a little damp out here, so close to the water. Mrs. Brainerd won't risk it. I'll walk up with you. I'd like to have you meet her." (Copyright.)

How I Nearly Lost My Husband

John. He had been desperately in love with me years before, at least I remember his taking me home from a hockey match once and what a struggle it was for him not to come into the parlor and see mother for a few minutes when I asked him; and though he was married now and with three children, I felt sure when he came to play cribbage with John that it meant something. He was very discreet and honorable and never betrayed himself for a moment, and I acted my part as if there was nothing at all behind.

Then presently a new trouble came. I began to suspect that John was drinking. I don't mean for a moment that he was drunk, or that he was openly cruel to me. But I think he was drinking bevo, by himself, too, though I could never be sure of it. At any rate, he often seemed queer and restless in the evenings and instead of staying in his den he would wander all over the house. Once we heard him—I mean mother and I and two lady friends who were with us that evening—quite late (after 10 o'clock) apparently moving about in the pantry. "John," I called, "is that you?" "Yes, Minn," he answered, quietly enough, I admit. "What are you doing there?" I asked. "Looking for something to eat," he said. "John," I said, "you are forgetting what is due to me as your wife. You were fed at 6. Go back."

He went. But yet I felt more and more that his love must be dwindling to make him act as he did. I thought it all over, wearily enough, and asked myself whether I had done everything I should to hold my husband's love. I had kept him in at nights. I had cut down his smoking. I had stopped his playing cards. What more was there that I could do?

So at last the conviction came to me that I must go away. I felt that I must get away somewhere and think things out, just face things as they were. So one morning I said to John: "John, I think I'd like to go off somewhere for a little time, just to be by myself, dear, and I don't want you to ask to come with me or to follow me, but just let me go." John said: "All right, Minn. When are you going to start?"

The cold brutality of it cut me to the heart, and I went upstairs and had a good cry and looked over steamship and railroad folders. I thought of Havana for a while, because the pictures of the harbor and the castle and the queer Spanish streets looked so attractive, but then I was afraid that at Havana a woman alone by herself might be simply persecuted by attentions from gentlemen. They say the Spanish temperament is something fearful. So I decided on Bermuda instead.

I said nothing more to John, but in the next few days I got all my arrangements made and my things packed. And when the last afternoon came I sat down and wrote John a long letter, to leave on my boudoir table, telling him that I had gone to Bermuda. I told him that I wanted to be alone. I said that I couldn't tell when I would be back—that it might be months, or it might be years, and I hoped that he would try to be as happy as he could and forget me entirely, and to send me money on the first of every month.

* * * * * *

Well, it was just at that moment that one of those strange coincidences happen, little things in themselves, but which seem to alter the whole course of a person's life. I had nearly finished the letter to John that I was to leave on the writing desk, when just then the maid came up to my room with a telegram. It was for John, but I thought it my duty to open it and read it for him before I left. And I nearly fainted when I saw that it was from a lawyer in Bermuda—of all places—and it said that a legacy of $200,000 had been left to John by an uncle of his who had died there, and asking for instructions about the disposition of it.

A great wave seemed to sweep over me, and all the wicked thoughts that had been in my mind—for I saw now that they were wicked—were driven clean away. I thought how completely lost poor old John would feel if all this money came to him and he didn't have to work any more and had no one at his side to help and guide him in using it.

I tore up the wicked letter I had written, and I hurried as fast as I could to pack up a valise with John's things (my own were packed already, as I said). Then presently John came in and I broke the news to him as gently and as tenderly as I could about his uncle having left him the money and having died. I told him that I had found out all about the trains and the Bermuda steamer, and had everything all packed and ready for us to leave at once.

We left for New York that evening and after we had been to Bermuda and arranged about a suitable monument for John's uncle and collected the money, we sailed for Europe.

All through the happy time that has followed, I like to think that through all our trials and difficulties affliction brought us safely together at last.

COMPOSITION OF ALL STARS PROBABLY IS SIMILAR

CONTRARY to what has been supposed, hot stars and cool stars probably are very nearly the same in chemical composition, Dr. Henry Norris Russell, director of the Princeton University Observatory and research associate of the Mount Wilson Observatory, declared in an address not long ago before the Carnegie Institution of Washington D. C.

"Recent physical research has told us so much about the properties of atoms that we have come to a new understanding of what we observe in the stars," said Dr. Russell. "Our knowledge of the composition of the stars depends upon the lines which we observe in their spectrum and which show the presence of many of the familiar chemical elements.

"The atmospheres of the cooler stars are full of the vapors of metals, while in the hottest stars the metals seem almost to disappear and to be replaced by gases such as nitrogen and helium. It has been supposed that this means that the stars differ in chemical composition, or that atoms of one kind are changed into those of another kind at such high temperatures; but in the laboratory we can subject atoms to far more violent treatment than they receive in the atmosphere of the stars without the least sign of their changing into atoms of other sorts.

"We can, however, knock one or two electrons off the atoms, and each time an electron is removed the spectrum of the light given by the atom changes entirely. After two or three such changes there are practically no lines left in the accessible part of the spectrum, though there may be strong radiations of ultra-violet or X-rays."

Dr. Russell stated that in the hotter stars the atoms of the metals are in this condition and though still present, do not reveal themselves to the spectroscope. On the other hand, gases like helium are so hard to see shining that it is only in the hotter stars that we can tell that they are there. The most abundant elements, such as hydrogen, show their presence when less abundant ones would disappear.

"This theory of ionization makes it probable that all the stars are very similar in actual composition, the observed differences arising from difference in the state in which the atoms find themselves in their atmospheres," he concluded. "On these principles it is already possible to reach conclusions about the temperature and pressures in the atmospheres of the stars. The pressures seem almost always to be very low and the gas so rarified that we would almost call it a vacuum in the laboratory. The temperature in the hottest stars probably reaches 25,000 degrees."

Deep in the interiors of the stars the temperatures are enormously higher and are probably billions of degrees, Dr. Russell estimated. Here it is possible that once in a while atoms of one element do become changed into atoms of another kind. There is reason to believe, he said that if hydrogen atoms are changed into others an enormous amount of heat would be set free, which would suffice to keep the stars shining for billions of years

Now I Make $100.00 a Week

For Eight Years I Was Tied to a Job In a Retail Store; When I Finally Broke Loose, I Increased My Earnings 150%.

By GEORGE GLICK

George Glick

For eight years I worked in a retail store, and as far as salaries go for that kind of work, I was doing pretty well. I got my $40.00 every Saturday, and I suppose I should have been happy, but somehow or other, that $40.00 a week wouldn't buy me everything I wanted. Expenses piled up something awful. Baby had to have new shoes mighty often; Florence had to have her music lessons; my savings account didn't grow; I didn't carry enough insurance; I felt I wasn't getting anywhere.

Then one day, Mort Lyons, who had worked with me for years, dropped into the store and after the usual greetings, he told me what he was doing. I was surprised when he told me that he was averaging better than $80.00 a week. Now Mort is a pretty good salesman, but I knew I could outsell him. I had always been a hard worker, and was rated a better salesman. It set me thinking, if Mort can earn $80.00 a week, why can't I?

Mort told me of his connection with J. B. Simpson, and of the wonderful clothes they make to retail at $29.50. From what he said of the firm I knew they must be first class, and Mort wouldn't be identified with anyone that wasn't. And when he showed me his samples, my eyes nearly popped out. There were the same fabrics for $29.50 that we were selling at $50.00 and even $65.00. "But, Mort," I said, "how can they do it?" "That's a wonderful story in itself," said Mort, "which I'll tell you later."

I thought it over for the next few days, but I just didn't have the nerve to make the plunge. Separating myself from $40.00 a week sure and certain, rain or shine, seemed to me a very risky proposition. I talked it over with my wife and as usual, she had a good suggestion. She said, "George, take your vacation now. It's January. Business is dull in your store, and they will be glad to have you go now."

Well, the next week I started out and by the following Saturday I had earned $36.00. The next week I made $52.00 and had enough prospects lined up to bring me $50.00 more. I went back to the store and quit my job. They laughed at me when I told them what I was going to do. "You'll be back in a month," they said, "begging for your job," but believe me, they couldn't give me enough money to ever get me back into that old hole in the wall.

I have been at it now for a year. Last month I made $520.00; the month before, I made $538.00; my earnings for the first year in this business will be about $4,850.00 and next year I will increase that by at least one or two thousand dollars.

I am sitting pretty now. I've got a connection with the finest outfit you could possibly imagine, honest and honorable people, offering values that positively cannot be duplicated by anyone else. How they can do it is the wonder of everybody.

One day I made a trip through their tailor shops and believe me, it opened my eyes. I found them cutting trimmings without any waste by a process exclusively their own. I saw methods used by them that I had never heard of before, and I thought I knew something about making clothes as well as selling them. I found them buying woolens and paying less than half of what we used to pay in our little store. I found them applying the principle of many sales and small profits and the highest efficiency in every department throughout their entire establishment.

Believe me, it was a lucky day for me when I heard of J. B. SIMPSON.

If you are looking for a way to get into the big money class and would like to take up a proposition that will pay any diligent worker $50.00 to $150.00 a week, write J. B. Simpson, Inc., Chicago, Illinois.

The quality of their all-wool tailored-to-order suits will amaze you. Their values are so extraordinary, and they've got it so far over any other tailoring that you have ever seen at this price, that you will hardly believe your own eyes. Write them today. They will send you full information. Experience in this line is not essential. They will teach you. One of their most successful men formerly sold stocks and bonds. Another used to be a grocery clerk. A third sold pianos. They will teach you—if you are willing to learn.

OUCH! MY BUNION!

In every man's life there is one Big Moment when he makes the decision that robs him of success—or leads on to fortune

Your One Chance to Earn
The Biggest Money of Your Life!

HAVE you ever considered why our richest men come from our poorest boys? Isn't it a strange thing that it is almost invariably a young fellow who starts life without a cent in the world, without education, without influential friends—in short, without one single solitary advantage—who accumulates millions of dollars? Isn't it a miracle that inside of a comparatively few years a man can rise from abject poverty to fabulous wealth?

Astonishing, certainly—but more important, it is wonderfully inspiring. For it means that no man need be held down by circumstances. Once he knows the "millionaire's secret," he can put it into operation regardless of all obstacles that seem to block his path. His fancied handicaps simply vanish into thin air. He suddenly finds that everything he touches turns to gold—money flows in upon him—fortune showers him with its favors. Everything he wants seems to come to him just as surely and easily as day comes after night.

The Secret That Makes Millionaires

But millionaires are not the only ones who use this secret. It has made every great man of history. Think of Napoleon—an unknown Corsican soldier in the ranks—then suddenly startling the world with his meteor-like rise, overthrowing empires, re-shaping the destinies of nations!

What is this amazing secret that can work such wonders? It is just this: The thing behind all big achievement, whether in business, political or military life, is opportunity. The man who wins is the man who sees his opportunity and seizes it. The man who never rises above the rut is the man who lets his opportunity pass.

To every man there comes one BIG opportunity—the golden chance of his life. And in the moment he decides for or against that opportunity—whether he will seize it or let it pass—he decides the whole future course of his life.

How often you hear a man say: "If only I had recognized my opportunity when it came—if only I had taken advantage of it—I would be a rich man today."

The Graveyard of Neglected Opportunities

The world is full of such men—they plod along year after year—slaving away, hoping that somehow things will take a turn for the better. But their chance for success is gone—it lies buried in the graveyard of neglected opportunity.

On the other hand, let a man see and grasp his Big Opportunity—no matter how obscure he may be, how poor, how lacking in advantage—and his sudden rise to success will astonish the world. People will gasp at the amazing transformation in his fortunes. Read the life of any millionaire and you will find this to be so.

Choose Between Low Pay and Magnificent Earnings

This very minute you may be face to face with your BIG Opportunity—your one chance to earn the biggest money of your life! Right now your decision may mean the difference between a life of plodding, routine work at low pay and a career of inspiring success and magnificent earnings.

For now you are offered the very opportunity that has made other men rich, that has brought them more money than they ever dreamed of earning.

It is the same opportunity that lifted Warren Hartle of 4425 N. Robey St., Chicago, out of a job in the railway mail service where in ten years he had never gotten beyond $1,600 a year, and landed him in a $10,000 a year job. It jumped Charles Berry of Winterset, Iowa, from $60 a month as a farm-hand, to $1,000 a month. It brought to C. W. Campbell of Greensburg, Pa., a clerk on the railroad, a position that paid him $1,562 in thirty days.

Here's Your Opportunity to Make Big Money

These men and hundreds more have found their Big Opportunity in the wonderful field of Salesmanship. They are all Master Salesmen now. They are earning the biggest money of their lives—more than they ever thought possible—they are engaged in the most fascinating work in the world—they are independent, come and go as they please—they meet big men—every minute of the day is filled with thrilling variety.

Your Big opportunity may be here, too, in the wonder field of Salesmanship. Perhaps you say you have never even thought of becoming a Salesman. But before you decide one way or the other, examine the facts for yourself. See what Salesmanship offers you—why it is the best paid of all vocations—why there is no limit to what you may earn.

See how hundreds of others, who had never sold a dime's worth of goods in their lives before, have suddenly stepped from small pay jobs to big selling positions with handsome incomes. See how men who had previously been clerks, bookkeepers, mechanics—men from all walks of life—are today making more money than they ever dreamed possible—more than they could ever have earned in their former lines of work. Read about the wonderful fascination of the Salesman's life—why he is independent, his own boss, free from the control of an office clock, starting his day when he is ready, quitting when he feels he has done enough. Read of his opportunities to travel, enjoying the comforts and luxuries of life, meeting big men, making influential friendships.

See how in one day a Salesman may make more profits for his company than a clerk, or bookkeeper or other routine worker can in a whole month. Is it any wonder that the Master Salesman is handsomely paid—that his services are constantly in demand—that he is showered with flattering, big money offers?

Do you doubt that you, too, can win success in this great, rich field?

Read the amazing proof that no matter what you are doing now, you can quickly become a Master Salesman in your spare time at home—read how the National Salesman's Training Association in its nation-wide search for men to fill the great need of Salesmen, has devised a wonderful system that reveals to you every Secret of Selling without interfering in the least with your present work. When King Tutankhamen was entombed about 3300 years ago, trussed joints of meat, also poultry and liver, were embalmed, boxed and buried with him. These natives are carrying out a long tray load of the embalmed meats of the fourteenth century before Christ.

These chariot wheels were found on the floor of a chamber opening into Tutankhamen's tomb, where they had lain for 3300 years. The chariots, it appears, were dismantled when placed in the tomb. The native at center of picture is carrying a tray containing fly whisks, taken from the tomb, which indicates that the household nuisance was active in those days.

What's wrong with this youngster?

Underfed, weak, sickly? Not much! Take just one look and you know that he's rugged, robust and happy.

The fact is that thousands of children—instead of being anaemic, delicate and underweight—could be just as strong and vigorous if they would only eat plenty of the proper foods; foods rich in the necessary tissue and body-building elements.

One of the most essential elements for children (and an element that many common foods wholly lack) is found in greatest abundance in Yeast Foam Tablets.

Your child will like the taste of them and you'll be delighted to see before long how they help build him up.

Yeast Foam Tablets are a pure, wholesome, tonic food—not a medicine. They're made of whole, selected yeast. And they're particularly recommended for lack of appetite, indigestion, failing strength or energy, also for skin disorders such as pimples and boils.

Sold by druggists and made by the makers of the famous baking yeasts, Yeast Foam and Magic Yeast.

The ideal form of yeast for children; it is safe because it does not cause gas.

This baby alligator hasn't got his eyes open yet, but he'll begin to see things shortly after he gets the rest of himself out of the egg. Already he's getting puffed up, by breathing fresh air into his lungs for the first time. If you wonder how such a big-looking little fellow could be contained in that egg, just remember that he wasn't so big when he was curled up inside and had no air in his lungs. For alligator babies, as for all other kinds of infants, fresh air has an expansive effect on life.

At the winter resorts women laugh at zero weather

This famous method protects their skin against chapping

Her skin kept smooth and supple through all the careless winter sports

TO Chamonix and St. Moritz, Montreal, Placid, the beautiful women of the world flock for the winter sports. The soft skin of their face is exposed to unbelievaby icy winds. Yet they play unafraid, because they know the method that protects their skin is unfailing.

First—the right amount and kind of oil
And then the famous protection

To have the beautiful suppleness you want in spite of chapping weather your skin must be given two things. Just the amount and kind of oil it needs. And then unfailing outdoor protection. Because no one cream can meet these two needs Pond's developed two special creams—Pond's Vanishing Cream and Pond's Cold Cream.

Cleanse your skin every night with this cold cream that is so rich in the right kind of oil it gives your skin suppleness in the coldest trying weather. Yet it is light enough to work in and out with no danger of stretching the pores and wipes off easily.

Then, by day, to insure outdoor protection apply the delicate vanishing cream which contains the most famous ingredient skin specialists know for softening and soothing. This cream is so beautifully proportioned that your skin absorbs it freely, and it forms a delicate protection with no possibility of clogging.

Use these two creams and see how smooth, how fresh they will keep your skin all winter. Both these creams can be had at all department and drug stores. They contain nothing which encourages the growth of hair. The Pond's Extract Company, 131 Hudson St., New York.

Like dynamite, cathartics destroy

MEDICAL science is emphatic on this point. "Probably one of the most frequent causes of constipation" as one well-known physician declares; "is the indiscriminate use of cathartics."

Here is the reason: although cathartics give temporary relief, they do it by nervous irritation, and require larger and larger doses in order to blast their way through. Little by little the muscles of the intestines (which should expel by their own action the "waste" that is clogging your system) grow weak with lack of exercise, and finally unable to act at all.

The only real remedy for constipation lies in building up these muscles—in gently encouraging them to act for themselves.

Restoring thousands of sufferers to perfect normal health

That is why so many physicians and hospitals are prescribing Fleischmann's Yeast today. Every cake of Fleischmann's fresh yeast consists of millions of tiny living plants which soften and increase the bulk of the waste matter. This greater bulk gently encourages the intestinal muscles to act, and at the same time strengthens them by offering just the resistance they need.

What this does for the muscles of your arm, Fleischmann's Yeast does for the muscles of your intestines—giving them natural, healthy exercise.

Every such action gives these intestinal muscles normal, natural exercise (something that violent cathartics can never do) and so gradually trains them back to a strong, healthy, active state.

Hundreds of thousands of men and women are finding in Fleischmann's Yeast the key to freedom from all the evils of constipation. They are learning that a body freed from poisons means such health and vigor as they have never known.

Fleischmann's Yeast, like any other food, must be eaten regularly to secure results.

Eat at least two or three cakes a day—plain, or dissolved in water, milk or fruit juices—preferably half an hour before a meal or the last thing at night. If you eat it plain, follow with a glass of water. Get several cakes at a time—they will keep several days in a cool, dry place. Be sure you get Fleischmann's Yeast! All grocers have it.

"A vigor and strength unknown for years"

"I have been subject to constipation for the past fifteen years" writes a Western business man. "After having tried many remedies with no results, I began taking Fleischmann's Yeast three times a day. Within a few months I have been relieved of this trouble and now feel a vigor and strength unknown to me for years."

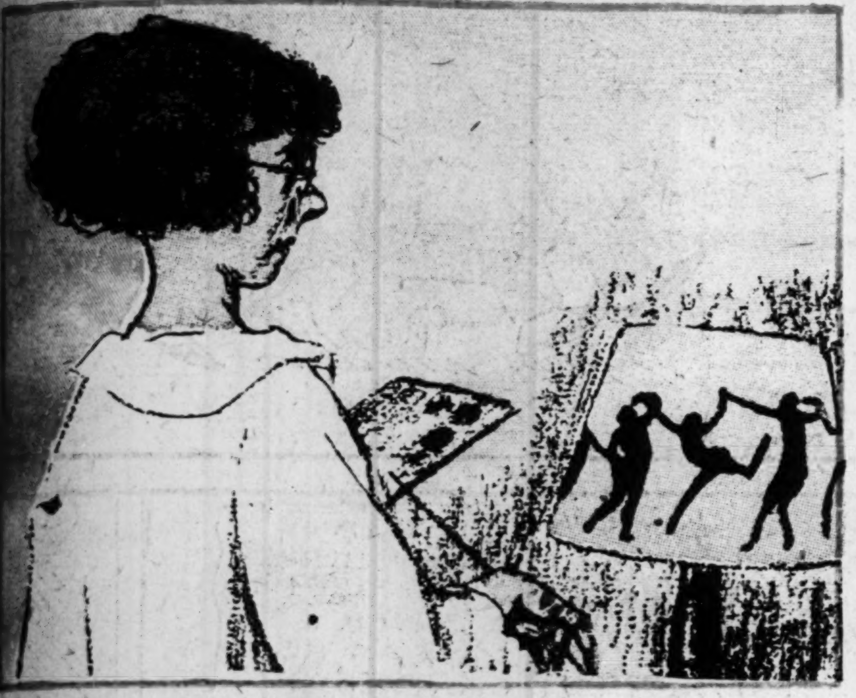
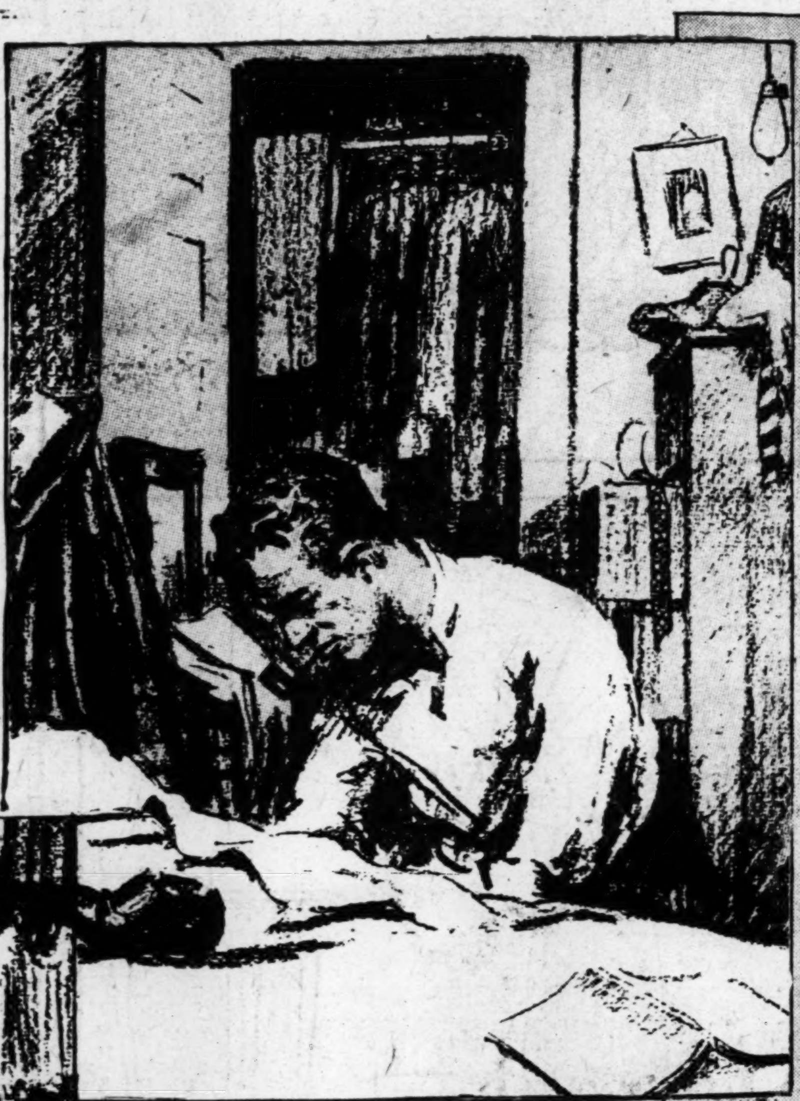
INTERIOR DECORATING

(Copyright.)

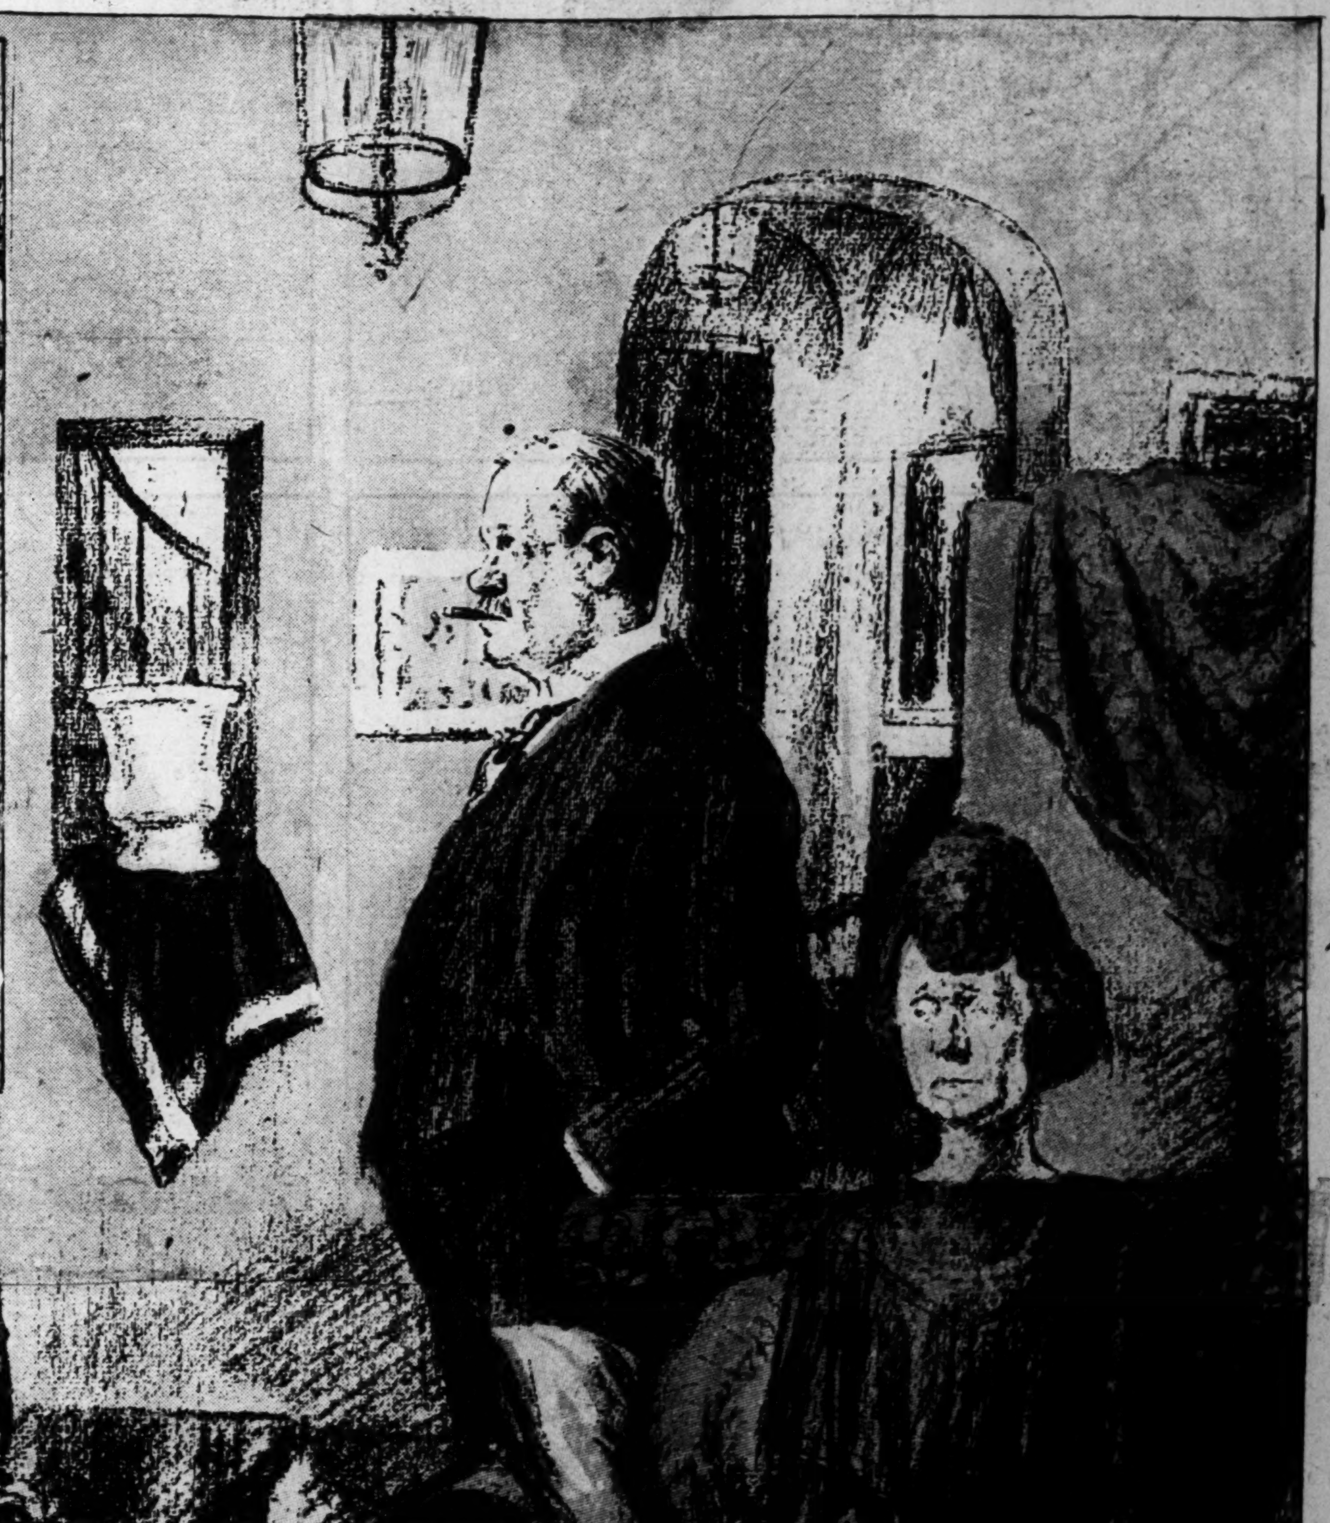
By W. E. HILL



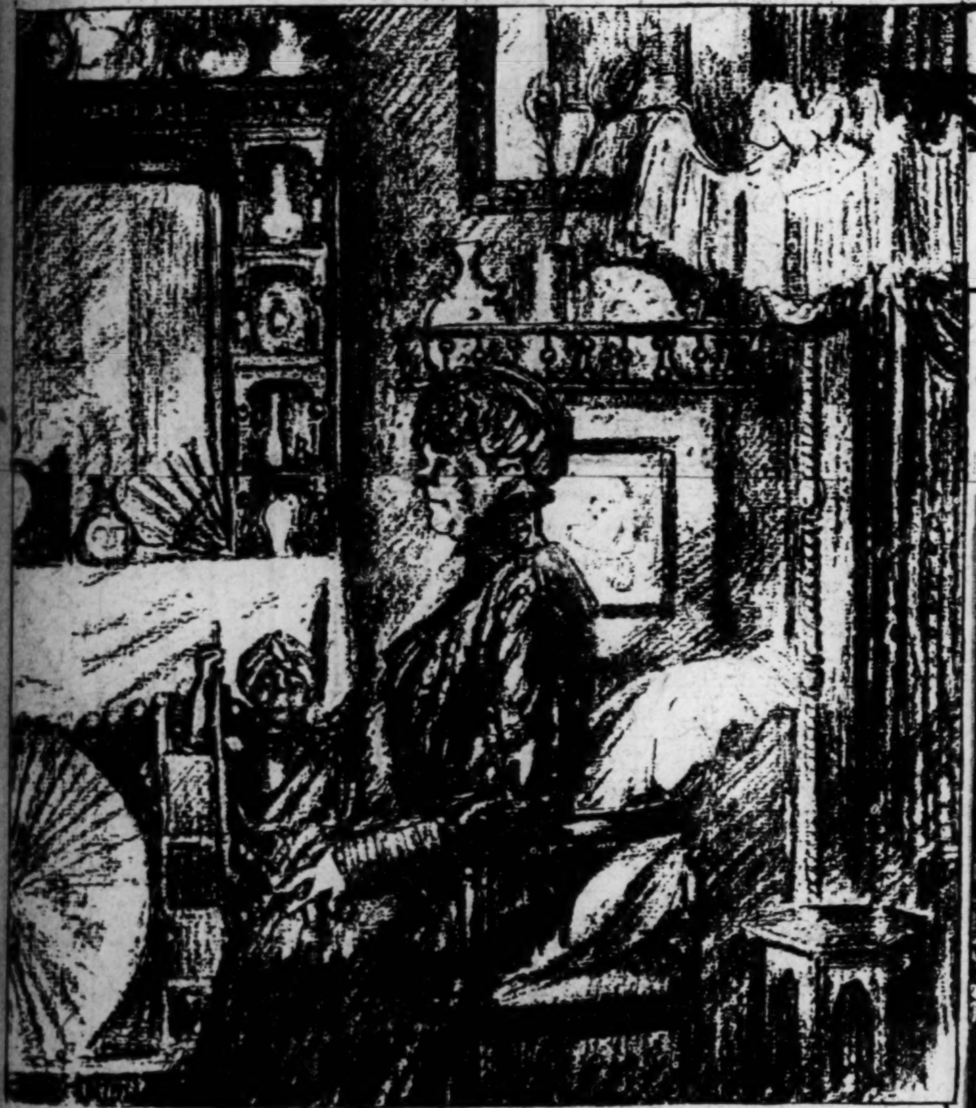
Lucky the family which can boast—although it doesn't usually—of a real art student in the home circle. They're that handy when it comes to redecorating and relampshading the living room.



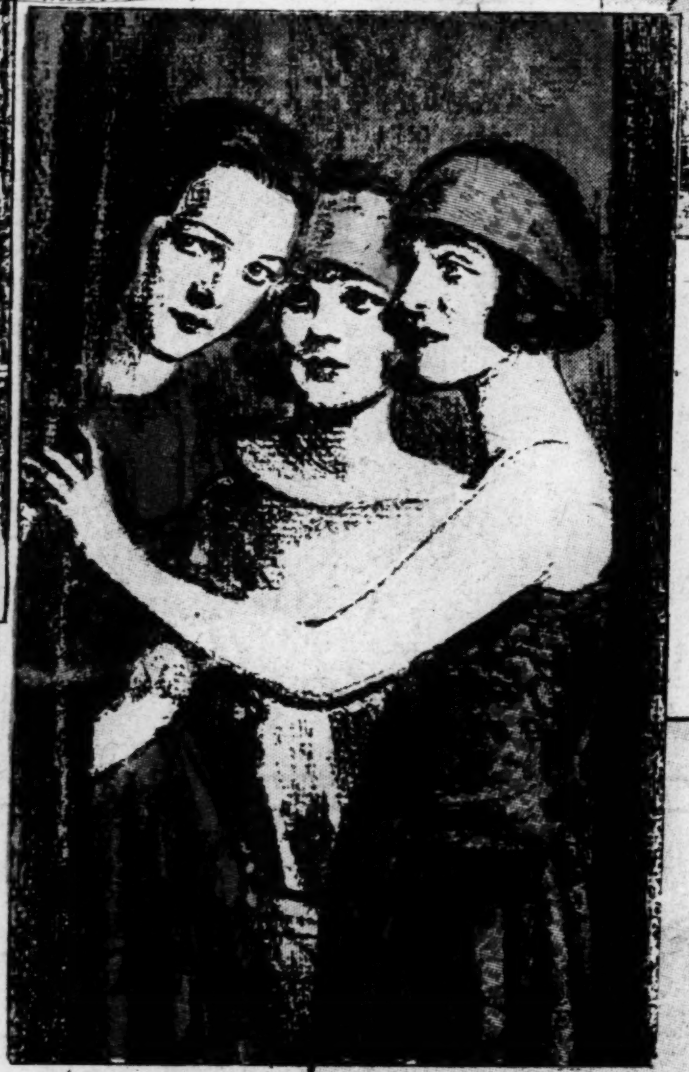
Showing the interior decorations of the bachelor who lives alone. In the foreground is a young man in a great hurry, digging around for something under the couch. An overhanging couchcover makes a fine haven for old shoes, shoetrees, laundry, books, and whatever needs to be got out of sight.



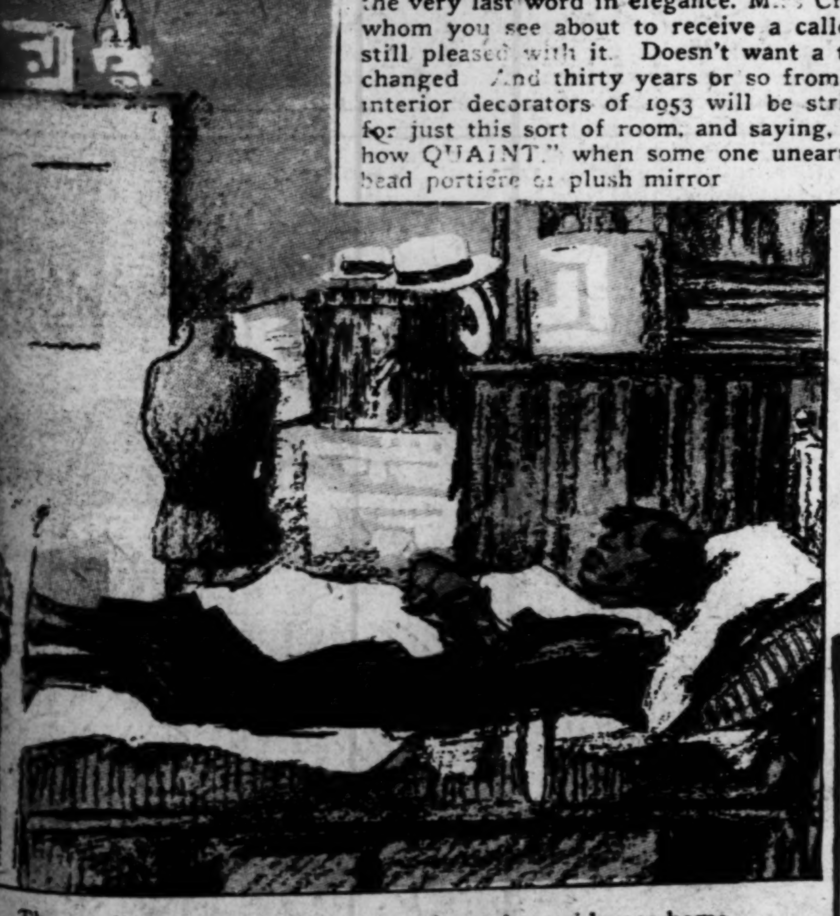
Just look at the Bugles, all freshly interior decorated. Did you ever see anything grander that their early Italian living room? Gray plaster walls, purple velvet, and a black and white checked floor—doesn't that suggest romance and Dante and Beatrice, and Lucretia Borgia, and a few Capulets, and Montagues? However, the best you'll get in the Bugle living room will be Mr. and Mrs. Marsden P. Bugle. Mrs. Bugle is worrying over something. It's that baby picture—enlarged crayon portrait, in natural colors—of Marsden P. Bugle Jr. It was a lovely thing—just as lifelike, and yet the interior decorator said "no," and with Marsden Jr. away at Yale, it would have given the room such a "lived in" look. You have to humor these interior decorators.



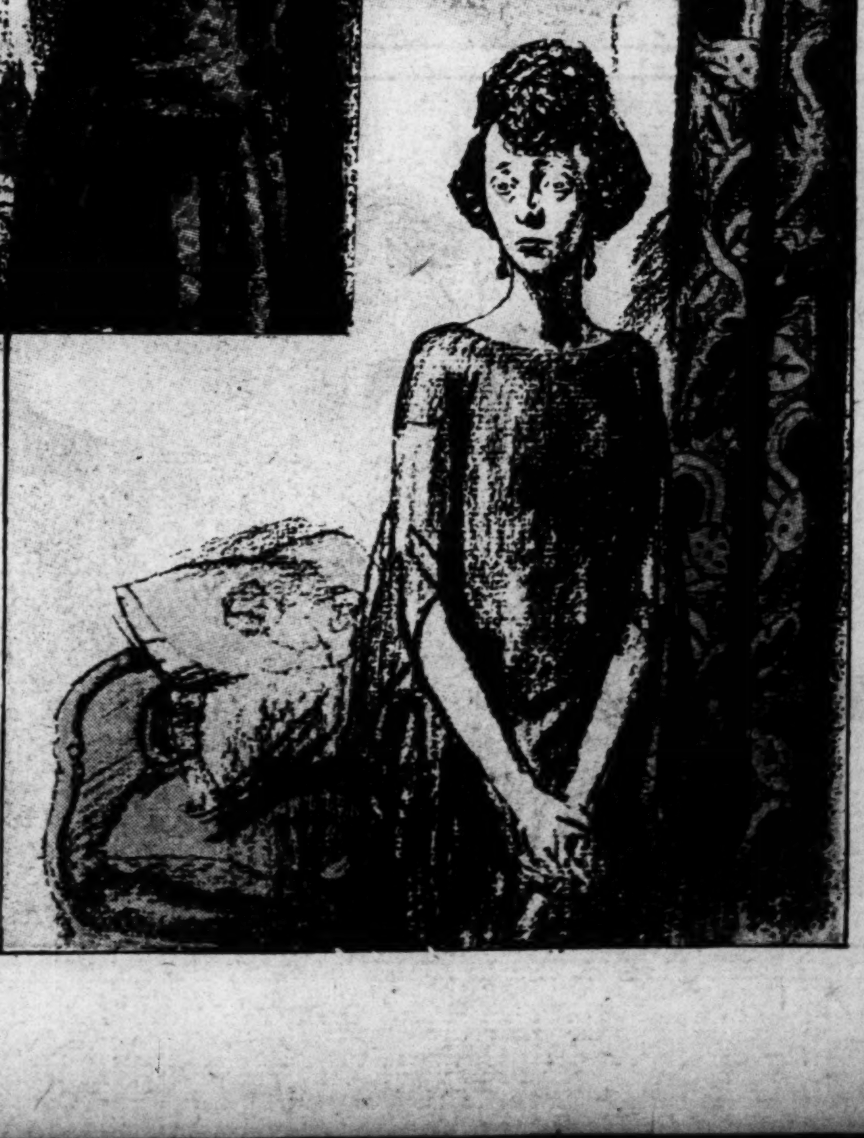
The interior which started out in 1885 as the very last word in elegance. Miss Crabbe, whom you see about to receive a caller, is still pleased with it. Doesn't want a thing changed And thirty years or so from now interior decorators of 1953 will be striving for just this sort of room, and saying, "Oh, how QUAINT," when some one unearths a bead portière or plush mirror



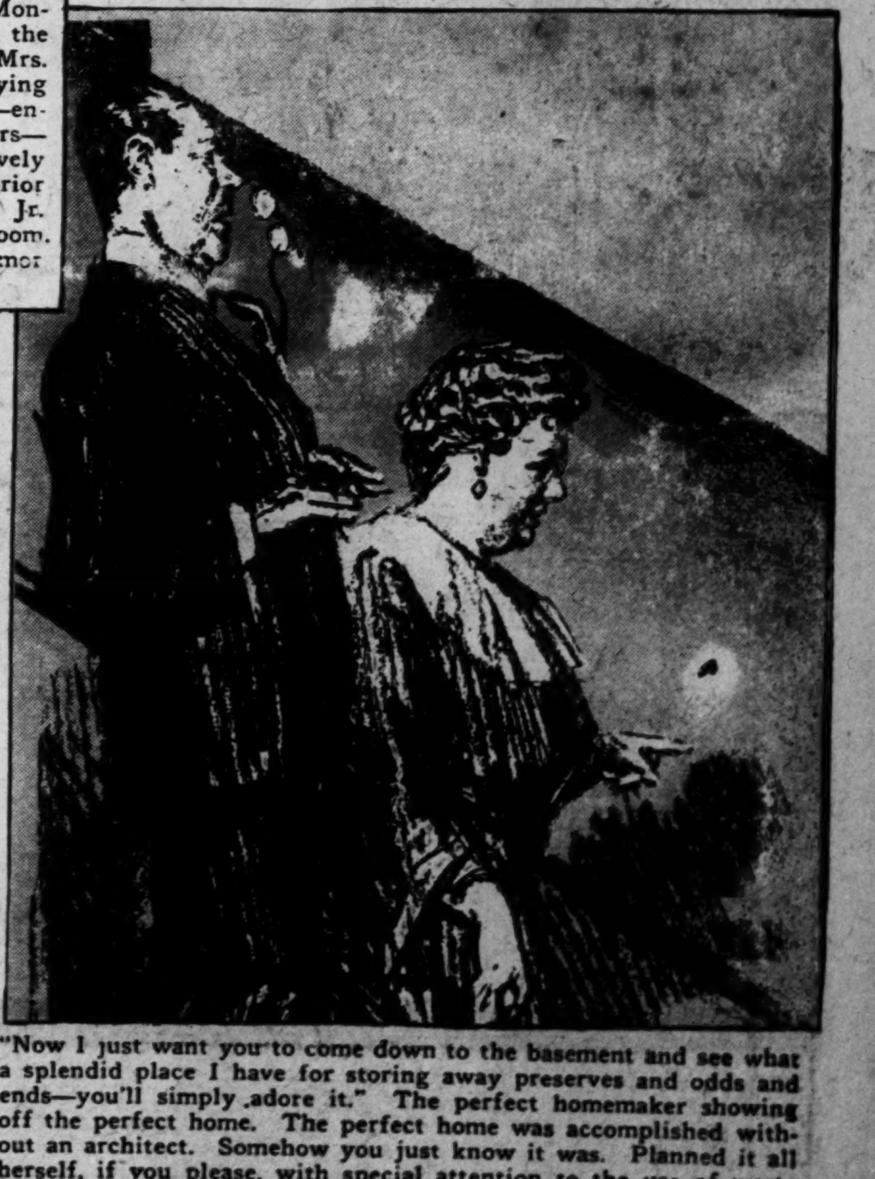
"My dear, wouldn't you give anything to rearrange that room?" Three party guests on the well-known pretext of removing their wraps, inspect the second floor



The maid's room in an apartment where the maid goes home nights Aside from serving as the family catchall, it's a handy place for Lillian to snatch a twenty or thirty minute rest during the day



What to do—oh, what to do! The new cretonne curtains looked so nice in the piece. But they make the old things look so faded out. It just seems as though the rest of the room would have to be done over to match the curtains.



"Now I just want you to come down to the basement and see what a splendid place I have for storing away preserves and odds and ends—you'll simply adore it." The perfect homemaker showing off the perfect home. The perfect home was accomplished without an architect. Somehow you just know it was. Planned it all herself, if you please, with special attention to the use of waste room. And such lavish use of waste room! You can't move a foot without bumping into a broom closet, an overhead rubber and goloshes closet or something.

"LITTLE RED" POWERS OF EGAN GANG "PICKED OFF"

Since Jacob Mackler Killing He Had Been Sleeping Under Armed Guard in Shack Near County Resort in Which He Was Partner With Joe Gonella.

GUARD SAYS MEN KNOCKED AT DOOR

Eleven Bullets Fired Into Body of Gunman Who Was Known to Be a Marked Man in Feud Between Gangs.

"Little Red" Powers, No. 6 in the "pick-off" list of the 'Egan-Hogan gang feud, whose fellow gunmen predicted he would die "in his boots," was in bed asleep at "Belvedere Joe" Gonella's resort, on the Olive Street road, about two and a half miles west of the city limits, when his body was riddled with bullets by enemy gangsters yesterday morning.

City detectives today expressed the opinion that "Little Red" was killed by members of the "Jelly Roll" Hogan gang in reprisal for the assassination last Wednesday night of Jacob H. Mackler, lawyer for the Hogan gang. Now that the feud between the rival gangs has again flared into action, the detectives look for more killings in the near future.

Powers was killed just six hours before Mackler was buried in the Chesed Shel Emis Cemetery, the funeral being attended by several hundred persons, including a number of former Federal and State officials.

Circumstances surrounding the murder indicated the assassins knew they were dealing with one of the most feared members of the Egan gang. They waited until he had retired to bed and sneaked upon him when he was sound asleep, giving him no chance to put up a fight.

How the slayers managed to catch Clarence Powers off his guard is a phase of the case that is interesting the police even more than the conjectural identity of the murderers themselves. Powers knew he was a marked man, and besides having his pistol within reach during his wakeful moments, he took the precaution of having an armed bodyguard with him when he was asleep.

Part Owner of Resort.

Powers and "Belvedere Joe" were partners in the ownership of the resort where yesterday's killing occurred. Powers lived with his wife at 932 North Newstead avenue, but since the assassination of Mackler had been sleeping in a one-room building about 75 feet west of the main building where customers were served.
